EXPECTORANT

Is composed of Herbal and Mucilaginous products, which permeate the substance of the Lungs, expectorate the acrid matter that collects in the Bronchial Tubes, and forms a soothing coating, which relieves the irritation that causes the cough. It cleanses the lungs of all impurities, strengthens them when enfeebled by disease, invigorates the circulation of the blood, and braces the nervous system. Slight colds often end in consumption. It is dangerous to neglect them. Apply the remedy promptly. A test of twenty years warrants the assertion that no remedy has ever been found that is as prompt in its effects as TUTT'S EXPECTORANT. A single dose raises the phlegm, subdues inflammation, and its use speedsily cures the most obstinate cough. A pleasant cordial, children take it readily. For Croup, it is invaluable and should be in every family. In 25c. and $1 Bottles.

Mr. Editor:—At the recent school meeting, during a discussion of the management of the schools for the past term some remarks were made by me relative to the admission of Frank E. Roberts' son into the High School. Although I criticised the action of the trustees I left the impression that Mr. Roberts, as one of the trustees, had used his influence to secure the advancement of his son. Now, in justice to Mr. Roberts, I will state that it was not my intention to allude to him personally. The Principal of the schools made the advancement, without consulting the wishes of Mr. Roberts. This does not imply, however, that my claim in the meeting was untrue, so far as the facts relating to the advancement of children to the High School, and the excluding of others from the Grammar School, was concerned; but that custom was being followed by the trustees which they considered they were justified in following. I am liable to error, and may be mistaken in my view of the matter, but with all the opposition I have shown, I am not disposed to do injustice, nor to attack an innocent person. I have no personal motive, but simply wish to improve the advantages of the pupils.

Regarding the gerrymandering of the districts, my allusion was to the admission of Mr. Ruby's daughter, and not to Mr. Roberts' son. While I am correct in my position on that point, yet had I been one of the trustees at the time I would have considered it very severe on Mr. Ruby to have debarred his daughter from the Grammar School under the circumstances. In the examination of the children of the outlying districts for admission to the Grammar Schools some test was really necessary, but my objection was that they were required to secure an average of 80 in a possible 100, instead of 70, which latter average had been customary.

I have no desire, Mr. Editor, to use more space in your paper. I may perhaps have ample ground for what I considered an injustice to me, but I am not one to do injustice to another, and although I alluded to Mr. Roberts' son (as one among others) in the meeting, yet fairness prompts me to make this statement in his behalf, as he was in no way connected with the promotions, the children being selected by the principal and teachers of the schools interested, and outside of any personal feelings or motives.

I did, as you stated in last issue, determine not to serve as a trustee, but as I do not see how I can well decline, after allowing my name to go before the meeting, I will attempt to do the best I can, and endeavor to look after the interests of the pupils faithfully, being ready to relinquish the trust at any time.
P. H. JACOBS.

TIRED OUT!

At this season nearly every one needs to use a restorative tonic. IRON enters into almost every physician's prescription for those who need building up.

For Weakness, Indigestion, Lack of Energy, etc., it HAS NO EQUAL, and is the only iron medicine that is not injurious. It enriches the blood, invigorates the system, restores the appetite, aids digestion. It does not blacken or irritate the teeth, cause headache or produce constipation—other iron medicines do. Dr. C. H. Dyer, M.D., a leading physician of Springfield, Ohio, says:
"Brown's Iron Bitters is a thoroughly good medicine. I use it in my practice, and find its action equal to any other form of iron. In weakness, or a low condition of the system, Brown's Iron Bitters is really a potent remedy. It is all that is claimed for it."
Dr. W. N. Warren, 129 Thirty-second Street, New York, N. Y., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the tonic of the age. Nothing better. It gives appetite, gives strength and improves digestion."

OF RHEUMATISM by using
RUSSIAN RHEUMATISM CURE.

It is not a cure-all. It cures nothing but Rheumatism, but it is a safe and sure cure for that disease. Thousands who have been cured will testify to its reliability.

Mr. G. B. Utter, of 101 N. 12th St., Philadelphia, wrote four months ago he had been cured by the Russian Rheumatism Cure (waiting to see whether it would return), saying he was bedridden with the disease, and that he would use his reason from the agony he had to endure, and inside of two weeks he was cured by the Russian Rheumatism Cure. He had his hands, feet, and back all ached, and he had been in bed for four months. He writes: "I am now as well as ever, and I can do my work as usual." He writes: "I am now as well as ever, and I can do my work as usual." He writes: "I am now as well as ever, and I can do my work as usual."

Mr. CHAS. A. COX, American and Morris St., Philadelphia, writes: "I was in a bad condition, and my condition was such that I could not do my work. I used the Russian Rheumatism Cure, and inside of one week I was cured. I am now as well as ever, and I can do my work as usual."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Lord, we know what we are, but we know not what we may be.

Whatever thou lovest, pray that thou mayest not set too high a value upon it. Speak little, and speak well if you would be looked upon as a man of merit.

Men's years and their faults are always more than they are willing to own.

We ought either to be silent or to speak things that are better than silence.

Were it not for clouds that darken us, there would be no rainbow in our lives.

The effective strength of sects is not to be ascertained merely by counting heads.

It is no shame for a man to learn what he knows not, whither ago he may be.

It's good to put a better away over night. It all straightens out in the morning.

When the forenoon of life is wasted there is not much hope of a peaceful evening.

Human nature or human frailty cannot subsist without some lawful recreation.

If we had no faults ourselves we should not be ready to note the faults of others.

Minds of moderate calibre, ordinarily condemn everything which is beyond their range.

What a delightful thing rest is! I would not exchange it for all the treasures in the world.

Without the virtue of humility one cannot be honest in poverty or contented in abundance.

Persistence, by its daily gains, enriches a man more than fits and starts of fortune and speculation.

Prayer was not invented—it was born with the first dawn of pity, and the first sorrow of the human heart.

Nations can better win success by noble deeds than by the cruel destruction of human life for selfish aims.

The wealthy miser lives as a poor man here; but he must give account as a rich man in the day of judgment.

Human glory is not always glorious. The best men have had their calamities, the worst their panegyrics.

It is not until we have passed through the furnace that we are made to know how much dross was in our composition.

Two things are necessary to a modern martyr—endurance and a good cause.

Heaven's gates are wide enough to admit every sinner to the universe who penitents, but too narrow to admit a single sin.

There are those who shrink from making a beginning in religious life because they conceive they lack ability to persevere.

Without a belief in personal immortality, religion really is like an arch resting on one pillar, like a bridge ending in an abyss.

Fortal not under the perils and trials of the way. The miles to heaven are few and short, and the glorious end will come soon.

Happiness consists not in possessing money, but in being content with what we possess. He who wants little has always enough.

If we waited until it was perfectly convenient, half the good actions of the world would be accomplished, and very few of its successes.

Money and time are the heaviest burdens of life, and the unhappiest of all mortals are those who have more of either than they know how to use.

It is true in matter of estate, as in our garments, that which is the largest, but that which fits us best, is best for us. Content with such things as ye have."

There have ever been, and ever will be, thorns among life's roses, dissonance to the sweetness of its music, but we need not magnify them. They are right, they will give zest and vigor to life, and the roses and music will be no less beautiful because of them.

In books lies the soul of the whole past time, the articulate and living voice of the past, when the body and material substance has altogether vanished like a dream. All that mankind has thought, done, gained or been lying in its magic preservation, in the pages of books.

As the sun does not wait for prayers and incantations that he may rise, but shines at once, and is greeted by all, so neither wait thou for applause, and shouts, and eulogies, that thou mayest do well; but be a spontaneous benefactor, and thou shalt be beloved like the sun.

The memory should not be like a child's pocket—filled with trash; but like the ark of the testimony, in which the tales of men were laid up. We are apt to be again of bad memories, and they are bad enough, for they retain what ought to be lost, and they lose what they should retain.

There is dignity in according the situation in which you find yourself, and greatness of soul in being equal to it. So, the wise heads of the household will not quarrel with the hands, when the emergency is at hand; they will look about them, take account of their environments, and adjust their actions accordingly.

Life is an unceasingly beautiful thing, so soon as we reach that point whence we can look out upon it through a clear conscience, and a character well nurtured by experience, which is the purest and best of all things, and a strange and complex mass which meets the eye; the other tones down our enthusiasm without destroying its vigor.

THEY LIVE CHEAPLY.

Patrons of Free Lunch Saloons Described—"The Bartender" Experience.

"Dear soup to-day?" said the customer.

"Or chicken stew, added the waiter.

"I'll take your stew for a change," said a young man, with the smudge of sympathetic on his cheek, as he plowed two furrows in the sawdust under the table with his heels.

A dozen men who had the appearance of "galley" slaves sat at their tables in the saloon, at whose door hung a white oil-cloth sign announcing "chicken stew to-day." A similar sign at the side of the door began, "Free lunch from twelve to two o'clock," and went on to specify the roast beef, Frankfurt sausage, and other delicacies that were on tap inside.

"Do many people lunch here regularly?" was asked the bartender.

"A great many workmen, like these you see at the tables; they patronize us," he said.

"They get with a glass of beer for five cents a bowl of soup and bread that would cost from 10 to 15 cents in a restaurant. Then there is a table near the door with more substantial delicacies, so they get a good meal very cheap. It's a mistake to think that only tramps and loafers eat free lunches. A number of lawyers who live in outlying districts of the suburbs of the city come here for a bite during the day. Many clerks save their money by patronizing us.

"Do any respectable persons live on free lunch entirely?"

"A few who are out of work or in hard lines do. A teacher of German on the north side has lived on free lunches all winter. His wages were garnished, and he didn't know enough about law to protect his rights. He does a little outside work occasionally, and makes enough to buy three or four glasses of beer a day. With each glass he eats a hearty meal.

"A man who once figured on the books of a rich man had $1,000 a month and nearly all his earnings at free lunch tables. He lost his money and his nerve on the same corner. A great many men out of work, men who have been used to better fare, would be objects of public charity or starve if the saloon lunches were not in easy reach. We never refuse a decent looking man who looks hungry, but first we ask if he has a

THE LOST CABIN.

A Legend of Trinity—All Traces of a Rich Mine Obliterated.

Trinity Camp, like all other old mining camps, has its legends in the early fifties, as the story was told to me, two men, Frenchmen, I am told, crossed through the redwood country from Humboldt Bay and came over to Trinity, or some of its tributaries, and struck it rich. They are supposed to have built them a cabin and done considerable work. The exact spot is not known. They came some time later in the Spring or early in the Summer, and stayed until Fall. When provisions became scarce, they stopped operations and piled their tools up in the cabin and started for the bay. They passed safely through the mountains till they reached Redwood Ridge, where they were set upon by the Indians, and after a desperate struggle for their lives, both were killed and robbed. It is said they had a great treasure, but it is not positively known. They are supposed to have built their cabin on the South Fork of the Trinity or one of its tributaries. South Fork, Grouse Creek and Campbell Creek have been thoroughly searched, but in vain. Gold has been found in South Fork and Grouse Creek but not in paying quantities. In Campbell Creek there have been old sluice boxes found and some gold. Many believe that to have been the place where they built the cabin, while others who have prospected the place say not, for there is not gold enough there to have paid them. Willow Creek has been carefully prospected, but failed to give any clue to the mysterious lost cabin. Hoselenta, with its three large branches, has been thoroughly searched. Gold has been found, but in non-paying quantities. It is said that a man by the name of Scott, while out hunting, strayed down into the middle fork of the Hoselenta, and while stooping down to get a drink, saw something glittering in a crevice in the rock. Taking his knife he extracted some $25 worth of small gold nuggets. It being late in the day he was compelled to return to camp. The next day he turned back to the river, and as he was about to leave, he saw a man and a pack of horses, and he followed them. He found the man, and he was told that he had found the lost cabin.
