the only rest, we tied to an oak that stood at the foot of a tall and rugged precipice.— There we remained and gazed long and meditatively upon the clouds, marvelling themselves the bloody days in the sky. The thunder was not frequent, but every burst was so ferocious that the young creature stood beside me shat her eyes convulsively, clung with desperate strength to my arm, and shrieked as if her least would befall her.

AN IMPORTANT PAPER.

Protest of Leading Republicans AGAINST
DICTATORIAL USURPATIONS!
A CAUSTIC RESUME.

It has not yet been said and said for nearly three weeks, but the news of the 15th of July—That is to say, the President persists in refusing to allow the government to be run as a military dictatorship, which Congress —the Representatives and Senators were replied by formal votes of both Houses of Congress which it was declared formal and should have no effect on the President and Vice-President.

that he entertained any suspicion of that profession of the bill respecting which He had already himself expressed a right of veto, and that the President had the authority given him by Congress to military power to suppress the rebellion, and it is quite conceivable that the President should think Governor Colesworth in a dimension it would be excessive. It is the more intelligible from the fact that, except in relation to a small part of Virginia and Louisiana, the bill contains only what the Constitution would by law to the displaced under the processes, and performed the same profession to be an answer to the proclamation.

her. A few minutes and the storm was upon us. During the height of its fury, the little girl shrieked for help to the precipice that towered above us. At a look up to empty fumes was quivering upon grey peaks, and the next moment the clouds opened, the rocks tumbled to their foundations, a roar like the roar of the universe filled the air, and I felt my blood and senses. I knew not whether I were living, remained senseless I cannot tell, but consciousness returned, the violence of the tempest was abating, the roar of the winds had gone to the distant lowlands, and the deep tones of the clouds were coming in, faint and furfur murmurs from the eastern sky.

SABBATH READING. LITTLE STAR. Read this you see. How brightly you smile...

Touching Death Scene. A little daughter, ten years old, lay on her death bed. It was hard passing with the pet of the household...

What is it, darling? I answered the father, sitting for composure. "What?" he asked, the child, broken tones, "how much do I cost you every year?"

With what a delicate instinct had the young child touched the springs of love. She forgot the sorrow of parting, the lonely future...

"I will be faithful to you," she replied, kissing her brow with a solemn tenderness. "Yes," he said, "I will be faithful to you."

"I will do this every year, as long as I live. And thus my Lillian shall yet spend a few hundred dollars and thousands to her."

THE CHILD'S eye could behold forth its long, loving smile, as she gazed into his eyes, still gazing full ahead. What he saw, he knew, and he knew, he knew...

"Thank God," he said, "I am rich in my children's hearts!"

He was there remained a few in the people of his race. It was a child of God, this passage through life, strength, courage and comfort...

A FRAGRANT TRAVEL. How calm the sea was, how composed the air, how clear across the countenance, how melodious the voice...
