PLANS UNDER WAY FOR WEEK OF CELEBRATION

MAY'S LANDING WILL BE 200 YEARS OLD.

Board of Trade Effects Reorganisation and Starts Work of Year President Makepeace at a later meeting With Renewed Vigor — Grade Crossing Problem Considered.

The initial step for the observance of the two hundredth anniversary of May's Landing was taken Thursday evening by the Board of Trade, which appointed a committee to make suitable preparations for the event and to raise the necessary funds to defray expenses. The committee, of which Charles D. Makepeace is Chairman, includes Albert C. Abbott, S. G. Huber, L. W. Cramer, D. A. Eberhardt, tharles Remmey, Daniel Smith, D. F. Vaughn and Clark W. Abbott. An open discussion was bold someorning the event, which brought out a host of ideas. The tution for depositors. trend of opinion seems to be in favor of an all week celebration in June, to include parades, water carnival, speeches, old folks' day, base ball games, fireworks and many other features. Money Would be Saved Says State everywhere apparent. Evidence of an awakening of interest in this organisation was very evident at the meeting and sessions will be held regularly the second Thursday evening of each month. Efforts will be made to increase the membership of the Board, and place it on a sound footing finan-

MAY'S LANDING, JANUARY 22, 1910.

That the people of Atlantic County made no mistake when they elected Walter E. Edge as Ave. $7,000. their representative in the House of Assembly, is evident from the strenuous part he is taking in the opening work of the Legislature. His man Edge will be keenly alive to their best 3750. interests, and will zealously guard against any Pleasantville Republicans have organised a permanent league in that thriving County borough, with Charles J. Adams as President. and the members will enjoy social as well as political fraternity. Here's to the success of the G.O.P. in Pleasantville, and may the spirit of its members there be emulated by every municipality in Atlantic County. Three cheers for the new Republican League of What is the matter with so many once prolific farms, that they now lay idle, save for wild weeds where before grew grain and other vegetable products? In the vicinity of May's Landing are many large tracts of land now uncultivated, that need only the masterhand of the scientific farmer to spring into 50x80 ft, beginning at intersection of South side ft. North edge Atlantic Ave. 50 ft. East of out," as suggested. They may be temporarily exhausted by thoughtless methods of planting and non-fertilisation; but under proper care and management they can be reclaimed and made to yield fair profits. Up-to-date farming does away with old careless methods and approaches the farm as a business proposition. proper care into prolific and profitable farms.

Concerted efforts for municipal improvements, directed through the Board of Trade, have done much for May's Landing in the past and are capable of greater accomplishments in the future. The Board is just what the residents and business men of the town make it, and will advance public interests in proportion to the amount of interest and energy displayed by members. It is not enough to be on the roll book and pay the usual dues; every member should become active and show real interest in the meetings, lending personal assistance to the promotion of its projects in every possible manner. Such an organisation as this, non political and free from partisanship, is well calculated to bring the people together on questions of common interest and directall efforts through one channel. In union there i strength. Become an active member of the Board of Trade and "boost" your home town for all you are worth.

More than three thousand resident hunters' licenses were issued in Atlantic County last season, the first year that sportshen of New Jersey have had to pay for the privilege of hunting in the gamefields. There has been no protest against the law on the part of sportsmen in this district, the majority accepting it Ave. $1. as an insurance against the destruction of sport, inasmuch as the funds will be used for the sole purpose of propagating game species and restocking the fields and woods. There has been some criticism of the law on the part of farmers, but even that has not been heard since the object of the statute became generally known. As the law gives every man the right on his own land, there can be n the law has met with the approval of the majority of the sportsmen and residents of Atlantic County, who would doubtless protest against its repeal.

STICK TO YOUR TRADE

By B. CRITTENDEN LYTLE. [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Asso-

We move in ruts. Getting accustomed to one kind of work, we are unfitted for another. Let a husband ask his wife to buy him a few cigars and the wrappers will likely be paper colored. to look like tobacco leaf. Let a wife ask her husband to hire a maid and, though she may be comely, she will have to be got rid of instanter.

One would suppose that all soldiering is alike. Nothing of the kind. An infantryman knows nothing about cannon; an artilleryman knows nothing about the signal service.

These remarks are a preface to the recital of an attempt to make a fighter out of a musician-an army musician. Jacob Gobeler was a bugler in one of the regular regiments. When the regiment was preparing to go to Cuba at the time of the Spanish-American war he became ambitious to be a real soldier instead of a tooter. His sergeant told him that he had better stick to his detective to read. It was a certificate bugle, but Jacob said that when a bugler was killed in battle there was no glory in his death. He preferred to die with weapons in his hands instead of a bugle.

So Jacob became a soldier and was in the first battle fought after the troops landed near Santiago. Unfortunately it was his first fight, and he was rattled. Men were being shot down beside him by an enemy they could not see. Some of the corps were getting back; others were standing. Jacob got it into his head that he should sound a retreat. Putting his hand back to grasp his bugle, he found a revolver instead. Putting the muzzle into his mouth, he tried to blow. In his excitement he must have pulled the trigger, for he was brought to his senses by feeling something warm on his jaw, and, putting his hand there, he found blood pouring from a hole in his cheek. The wonder was that the bullet had not gone through the vertebrae at the back of his neck and killed him. He must have blown through a corner of his mouth. Jacob was in a hospital till pretty near the end of the war. It would have been better for him to return to the duties of a bugler, but the hole in his cheek didn't close up, and an attempt to blow a bugle would send all the wind out at the side of his face instead of through his bugle.

When Jacob returned to duty he found it impossible to explain to his comrades how he came by the hole in his cheek. The story got out, and he was laughed at. This fired him with a desire to redeem himself. He longed for an opportunity, and the en by the murderer, who had unwitopportunity came. There was no lack of fighting around Santiago. True, the Spanish and American forces were there were sorties and charges. One day Jacob was in some very thick fighting. The colonel was racing about with his bugler at his heels blowing his orders when suddenly the bugle dropped from his hand and he fell another, but there was none at hand. The captain of Jacob's company, realizing his predicament, cried out:

"We've got a bugler here, colonel. Gobeler, get up there on that horse!" Gobeler, obedient and forgetting that he had been disqualified to blow orders by his wound, picked up the bugle, mounted the horse and placed himself directly in the colonel's rear. The Spanlards were preparing to crush the American troops on that part of an order to signal a change of front. Jacob put his bugle to his lips and his cheek, but did not succeed in forcing the wind through the bugle. Shuthole in his cheek. Since no wind could get out through his mouth it went through his cheek. At any rate, faintly sound the colonel's order. But Jacob's delay gave the enemy an advantage that pretty nearly caused the capture of the regiment. It was saved only by support coming in the nick of time. When the fighting was over dicate that such was the case. Some the colonel called out to Jacob's cap-

"Keep that man in the ranks, captain. He's no good for a bugler."

"He was a good bugler, colonel, but he insisted on going into the ranks. The first thing he did was to try to sent out a circular letter to all the blow a signal on his pistol and shot a hole in his cheek. Now he's no good for either a soldier or a bugler."

After this episode Jacob was so ridiculed by the men that he tried to get himself killed in order to escape fhelr jokes. To make matters worse it seemed that all the buglers in the army were getting shot, and the commanding officers were always sending for men who could sound the calls. It was constantly: "Say, Gobeler, you can blow a bugle, can't you? Oh, I forgot. You ruined your wind trying to blow down the muzzle of a pistol." These and other references to his misfortune so worked upon Jacob that he gave up trying to be a hero and concluded to sink into an inferior bugler. Going to the hospital, he secured a hot water reward for the murderer. bag and turned it into a wind bag, making a close connection with rubber bands between its mouth and that of his bugle. Then he offered himself to his colonel to sound calls, and, there being no one else to fill the place, Jacob was accepted. As soon as the war was over he was discharged. Not in Her Set. "Why should we be so anxious to signal Mars?" asked Mrs. Cumrox. "It would surely be desirable to know something of its inhabitants," replied the modest scientist.

THE CULPRIT?

By SALLY MENDUM. [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Asso-

All Petersville was ringing with the murder of Tim Meagher, an old man who lived alone in his cottage on the outskirts of the town. Miller, the head of a detective firm in the city, twenty miles distant, was called for by the town authorities. He went up, looked the matter over, came to an agreement with the mayor and promised to put some one on the case immediately. He was taking his supper in a private room in a restaurant when the door opened and a man of rather seedy appearance entered.

"Mr. Miller, I believe," said the new-

"I am. What can I do for you?" "I was in the detective business once, and I'm trying to get into it again. I'd like to take hold of this Meagher case," "I'm going to send a man up to attend to it."

The seedy individual pulled a letter from his pocket and handed it to the from a detective firm that Joel Zimmerman had worked for it and done good service.

Miller's bargain with the mayor had been largely contingent upon tracking and capturing the murderer, a not very profitable way to do business. It occurred to him that if he could get this person cheap he would let him work for awhile-at least long enough to make some development. Besides, the man told him that he suspected a certain person and would look for a clew in that direction. He felt so confident in the matter that he offered to work without pay unless he made a valuable discovery, but stipulated that he should have the field to himself. No other detective should be put on the case. On these terms Mr. Miller engaged him and went back to the city to attend to other matters that

Joe Avery, a nephew of the murdered man, lived in Petersville, a much respected young man, with a very nice wife and two very pretty children. One day while walking on the street he picked up a ten dollar bill. He was in hard luck at the time and very much delighted at his find. The bill was partly spent for meat at a butcher shop. The same afternoon Avery was arrested for the murder of his uncle on information furnished by Zimmerman. The detective produced a list of bills, giving their numbers, that he said he had found in an unused chimney in the murdered man's house. The list was supposed to refer to $7,000 that the old man kept there. The theory was that the money had been tak-tingly left the list. Everybody in the town was surprised at Avery's arrest, and no one at first standing off from one another, but believed him guilty. It was not supposed that his uncle had any money, and if he had the murderer was the only one who could have known of it. There was a strong case of circumstancial evidence against Avery, but it was weakened by Zimmerman himself. from his horse. The colonel, seeing his who under cross examination contrabugler knocked out, looked about for dicted himself as to how, where and when he had found the list. Experts disagreed whether it was or was not in the handwriting of Meagher. By throwing doubt upon this evidence the prisoner's attorney saved his client from a verdlet of guilty. The jury disagreed, but in order to avoid the expense of another trial brought in a ver-

Avery had no doubt that he had been made the victim of a plot and as: soon as he gained his liberty set about the field. The colonel saw a brigade a bit of detective work to discover the of the enemy swinging round on his author. The first fact he noticed was right to get in his rear and gave Jacob .that with his acquittal the case was dropped. The authorities believed that the murderer had been discovered, but blew, but there was no sound. All the that his acquittal was a case of "not wind was going out through the hole proved" rather than "not guilty." The detective who worked up the case The colonel looked at him in surprise against him had dropped the matter and anger. Jacob clapped his hand to and was now working for the Miller detective agency that had employed him. Indeed, every one seemed satisting his mouth, he put the bugle to the fied to let the matter rest except the man who had narrowly escaped the gallows and was in consequence living under the ban of being a murderer. enough of it got through the bugle to These were the reasons that induced Avery to take up the case on his own

Avery made up his mind that his uncle had been a hoarder. Indeed, he remembered certain incidents to inone had discovered that the old man had money in his possession and had robbed and murdered him to get possession of it. If his uncle had saved money possibly he might have had something to do with some bank. He banks in the state asking if Timothy Meagher had any deposits there. Seven savings banks replied that bank books to the aggregate amount of $260,000 had been issued to one Timothy J. Meagher. Avery did not suppose that his uncle had a middle name, but searched the family records, and found that he had. It was John. Avery was astounded. He was also delighted-delighted for two reasons. First, he was his uncle's legal heir and would be rich; second, his uncle had undoubtedly had some money in his house and had been robbed as well as murdered. Could be find this robber he would be exonerated and rich. He first took steps to secure his uncle's fortune, then offered $25,000 The reward brought a letter from the murderer's accomplice stating that he would give up his principal if not accepted, and he sent in the name. It was Joel Zimmerman. Eight months later Zimmerman was prosecuted himself. His terms were executed.

"To whom did she leave It?" "I am next of kin and at the death of the present incumbent will succeed to the estate."

"I didn't ask that. I asked whom your aunt made her heir." "I am thinking of killing him." "Oh, Edward!"

"Can't you compromise with this per son whom your aunt made her heir?" "No. He isn't capable of making an agreement. He does nothing but strut about"-

"Come, come. Tell me the legal points. I have more head for such things than you suppose." "Well, my aunt left the property to this person, and, considering who he is, the bequest is ridiculous. That will be the plea of the relatives if they try to break the will. But I, being the heir of this legatee at his death, will take possession of the property. The other heirs will still have good cause for a suit, but I will have the sinews of war. 'Understand?"

"He is not a beast at all." "Then for goodness' sake what kind of a person is he?" "Listen to me. My aunt in her younger days was a great student. She studied everything-science, religion, philosophy. She passed from one system to another until she became a strong believer in the transmigration of souls. She was much attached to her husband, who humored her in her different faiths. There is no proof whatever but that she was sound in mind in her latter days, though she firmly believed that at her husband's death his soul passed into a little chick that broke through its shell the exact minute my uncle dled. She at once took the greatest care of this chick, ordered a special house to be built for him and always called him 'Dearle,' the pet name she had had for my uncle. He grew up to be a fine rooster, and my aunt never relaxed the attention she had shown him

"Why not as next of kin?" "There are too many next of kin, would rather inherit $300,000 from a rooster than a few hundred from a

"Well, then, why don't you kill him?" "He is protected. The woman to whom my aunt paid a large salary to take care of him never lets him out of her sight. Force of habit from knowing when my aunt lived that if Dearle suffered she would lose a fat job leads her to still watch. But I'm going to try to get at him tonight with a hatchet.

"Goodness gracious!"

Oh Edward where have you been? There is blood on your shirt bosom!" "There was blood in my eye last night."

"What have you done?" "Dearle is no more. He is with his only legitimate wife." Teaching Baby to Walk.
