ESTELLE TRACT LEASED FOR GAME PRESERVE

HUNTING CLUB.

Eight Thousand Acres of Atlantic agreed amid loud applause. moters to Incorporate.

Eight thousand acres of woodland, including three lakes, are comprised in the large tract at Estelville leased as a game preserve by sportsmen of Atlantic City and County. The preserve is the same as that formerly operated by the Atlantic County Game Preserve Association and will be governed by the rules of the Blooming Grove Hunting and Fishing Club. It name has not been determined but will probably be either the "Atlantic City" or the "Atlantic County" Hunting and Fishing Club. Papers of information are boing named and the members will meet next week to perfeet organisation and elect officers. The promoters ary: William Fannce, President of the Nellie Shea, age eleven years. A. H. Phillips Company; John P. Tompkins, Superintendent of the Atlantic City Gas Company; Charles J. Adams, head of the C. J. Adams Company; Assemblyman Walter E. Edge and Oliver J. Hammill, President of the () J. Hammill Company. The membership will probably be limited to twelve. Three thousand acres of the tract, which entends to Risley and Dorothy on the West. PROTECT THE FORESTS

State Forester Alfred Gaskill Asks People to Co-operate With War--Service Much Restricted.

Inability of the State authorities to enforce the fire laws without the assistance of the people is deplored by Forester Alfred Gaskill, who has been conducting an investigation of the recent destructive fires that swept over large areas of valuable woodland in Atlantic County. In a recent statement Mr. Gaskill says:

"A good many persons are looking to the property against these fires. The commission feels this responsibility, yet can do little. We lantic County. The fires of April 16 will be sion was created will anything like them be "The State fire service, under the law and under the necessities of the situation, can be no more efficient than the residents of each community want it to be. In other words, wherever the forest fire service is supported by the people a disastrous forest fire is now a rarity. On the other hand, in every locality where it is not so supported we have such three as those of last week. To illustrate: The disastrous fire which started near Four Mile, in Woodland Township, Burlington County, and burned Westward to Medford, was the direct result of individual carelessness and public indifference. On Wednesday a small fire, to clear the ground around a cranberry bog, was started against he advice of a fire warden.) The embers were eft smouldering in direct violation of law and two persons who did not think it of enough importance to report it to the fire warden. "Saturday morning arose a Northeast gale that naturally fanned every spark into flame. Within half an hour the fire was reported, but It was then too late to do more than control the side fires. MAY'S LANDING, APRIL 30, 1910.

Some people, a great many people, like : live in the past. Every now and then one is heard to say something about "the good old days," or justify conditions because they were "good enough for their fathers." That is a very fallacious policy. Following out that line of reasoning, we could do without milroads, postoffices, telegraph lines, even kerosene lamps. How many people would like to live on a policy of that kind?

Truth and honesty are worth just as much to-day as they ever were. The young man who starts out in life with the idea that underhand methods in business, and deceit in other things, is the "best way to get ahead," is very much mistaken. It pays to be honest. It pays to do business "on the level," There is no need to be afraid of anything except falsehood, dishonesty and hypocrisy. Honesty is still the best policy and it always will be.

Wake up, fans! The swat of the willow on the horse-hide will resound next Saturday at Pastime Park, and the 1910 season of the National Game will be on at the County Capital. For four months all other topics will take a place in the back-ground, while the public watches the pursuit of the spinning sphere. What a manly, vigorous game it is, and how typical of Americans? If you have no interest in the game, it is surely time to consult :

vidual pride in making a municipality a better place to live in cannot be overestimated. Indifference is a deadly foe to progress. In proportion as the people interest themselves in the promotion of civic enterprise a town will advance. With every shoulder to the wheel the most difficult obstacles are easily overcome. It is the duty of every good citizen to do what he can to promote the welfare of himself and his neighbors.

Medical inspection in the public schools is one of the best innovations ever introduced in the public school systems. The spread of many contagious diseases has been facilitated in the past by the association of infected children with their playmates, a condition which inspecion will largely prevent. Many children, too, suffer with defects of sight or hearing, or are otherwise incapacitated for study, when the trouble is not suspected by parents or teachers. Conscientions inspection of school children by competent physicians will greatly improve the efficiency of the public school system and promote the health of the pupils.

Automobile travel through the South Jersey towns is doing much more for this part of the State than is generally recognised. If the travel to the seashore resorts had not become so heavy as to demand first-class highways, fewer would been constructed. Then the new highways brought additional traffic, which meant additional income to the resorts and to the State at large. The travel has spread the fame of South Jersey towns to every part of the county and this indirectly will result in profit to these municipalities. The roadability run to-lay will bring hundreds of people from lantic and Cairo Aves. $2,500. Philadelphia and other cities through this and other towns, which will increase their publicity, and publicity to a municipality is as useful as advertising is to trade.

The village of Enderley was looking forward to an era of prosperity. When In stripling in the postoffice called it a boom Deacon Carder launched forth into a tirade against such a proposi-

"Butterworth's givin' good wages," he said, "but you wait till he gits in a passel of foreign hands."

"Easy, Carder, easy! They do say he's buying land all along the river road and going to put up these newfangled model tenements," pacified the postmaster.

Passing down the street, the deacon saw young Jack Butterworth rapping at the door of the Dyer girls and exclaimed:

"Either on 'em old 'nough to be his grandmother, an' Analine bedridden at that. Humph! Prob'ly he's up to his pa's tricks an' wantin' to buy there an' start a hifalutin sulphite mill. Stuff an' nonsense, I say!" Meantime the young man was vigor-onsly using the ancient knocker on the door of the small white house, but, receiving no response, was about to turn nway when the sudden shrill blast of a horn from within assured him that the dwelling was not tenantless. "I'm coming," called a high pitched voice, and a wiry little old lady in gingham gown and flapping sunbonnet appeared from the garden at the rear. "Deary me! I was out getting butter beans, and when I heard sister's horn I was all of a fluster. But come right in now, do!

"Sister this is Mr. Butterworth," introduced Miss Caroline deprecatingly. But the sister, an invalid, waved her hand with impatience. "Don't mind me. I ain't to home. Been in Japan the whole afternoon. Just going to ride out in one o' them jinny gocarts this minute. Say," she continued irrelevantly, with a birdlike change of demeanor, "did you hear my horn?" She proudly tapped an old cornet as she spoke.

"Hear it, Miss Analine! My ears are ringing yet. Do you play often?" he asked, with lingering amusement. "Sister doesn't really play," Miss-Caroline hastened to explain. "No, but she can blow like old Borax," the invalid rejoined, with a shrewd twinkle in her eyes.

"Boreas, Boreas, you mean, sister." corrected the other gently. "Well, I call him Borax." There was the insistence of a speiled child in the sick woman's tone. "One toot means Some one at the door.' Two toots mean 'I want you myself.' "

Then she gravely observed, "The jinny gocart's waiting," and withdrew her interest from the conversation.

"I'm afraid it's hopeless," he admitted ruefully to his father afterward. "If the Dyer place didn't happen to be located exactly as it is-fairly adjoining the 'river road' property-of course we'd never give it another thought. And what would ever induce that quaint old pair to give up their home? Those poor souls! By the way, father, have you ever seen Miss Analine, the bedridden one, who has a mania for traveling and so pretends she's constantly on the road?"

Mr. Butterworth drummed abstractedly on his office desk before answering. "No, but I should think the change would suit the old lady to a T from all accounts.

"By Jove, father, do you know I believe I have a scheme! I'm determined to win yet, but I'll keep my plan to myself for the present."

"Well, success to you, Jack," was the hearty wish as the paternal gaze rested admiringly on the animated face. "I judge the Dyer 'girls' are likely to have a persistent caller."

Subsequent events proved the truth of the prophecy, for the following afternoon saw the runabout again before the old house. The front door was ajar, and Miss Analine called with unwonted graciousness; "Come in! Come in if you want to! Caroline's over to Mls' Skillins, but I'm just getting back from Venice myself. I'll be home in a jiffy. My," she exulted, "but it's fine gondoling on the Grand canal," She breathed a sigh of rapture as she looked up. "Enderley, too, is an uncommonly pretty place to any one who has an eve for natural beauty," he finally ventured.

Miss Analine's face clouded. "Maybe," she assented reluctantly. "The town is improving fast," pursued the undaunted youth, launching into a glowing account of recent changes and bettered conditions. "Down in the village, now, on Main street, there's so much passing it's sometimes absolutely lively." The black eyes in the withered countenance shone with speculative appreciation, and the speaker resumed: "1 should think you and Miss Caroline of things, where you'd have more carrying too much sail, my lady." neighbors. Hayen't you ever thought "Indeed?" she retorted. Mr. Butterworth, Sr., would have de- to raise the wind." tected germs of diplomatic talent in the apparent innocence with which the question was proffered, but the old lady was wholly unsuspicious and retorted with a sniff of scorn: "What depths. A man was once digging a that in case of a visit from him some Yankee would ever lack gumption bad | well there. At the last stroke he gave | one of us may catch it up and run enough to buy this farm, do you suppose? Caroline can't raise a thing on he and his pick fell through, nobody should be always kent open. it but hay 'n' potatoes 'n' pusley, with a mess of butter beans now 'n' then. Besides, though I'm away from home a good deal myself, I do seem to need this place for a kind of depot.", tener's manner was merely one of grave attention. "I see," he remarked quietly. "But, Miss Analine, some people travel in their own private cars. How would it strike you and your sistre if you could get a good price for the farm and still keep the house here for a sort of car perhaps? Travel in it to your new home, say?"

"Young man, be you crazy?" Red spots burned in the faded cheeks, and there was stern interrogation in the

- "Listen, Miss Analine," was the earnest entreaty, and in reassuring tones the plan was little by little unfolded by which the Butterworth company might gain possession of the coveted land and yet the two old ladies be at the same time enriched, while, best of all, the belated traveler could at last take a trip in very truth.

Therefore when Miss Caroline made her tardy appearance she found her sister sitting upright in excitement, so engrossed in conversation with Jack Butterworth that she was utterly oblivious to the fact that Snooks, the gray kitten, was playing with the map of Africa in a way which threatened the immediate destruction of the dark voice, "it's high time you got here. We're going to sell this farm, you 'n' I, and take a trip abroad. My, but won't the Enderley folks stare!"

"Remember," admonished the autocrat, "not a word of this is to be lisped till we're ready to start on our trip. Won't it give Enderley a turn, though!" She chuckled as she packed her books and maps in a neat pile on the stand at the side of the bed. "Tomorrow, sister," she proclaimed, "we'll begin to make over my brown alpaca for a traveling dress. I wonder if ruilles or bias folds would look best for any one

But there was no reply, for the mind of the other was busy with both prospeet and retrospect. "How can I give up the dear old place?" she finally asked, with a groan. "But such an offer as he made! 'Twould seem like flying in the face of Providence to refuse. Land sakes, though, how upset I am." she wailed.

"That's just it," retorted the invalid with asperity. "It's 'land sakes' and nothing else. Haven't we still got the house, and aren't we going to live in a good lot down next to the Baptist minister's when we get home from our travels? Caroline Dyer, if you'd been around the world as much as some folks you'd likely have more supper with a glad heart like a Christian. I feel to eat a hefty meal myself." Thus admonished, the mournful one was forced to bestir herself.

Succeeding morrows rolled into the present and then the past until one morning a smiling youth arrived with the gay anouncement: "The private car is ready and horses are in sight for the-baggage, shall I say? 'All aboard,' Miss Analine?"

"Wait till my bonnet and shawl's smile, she grimly added, "When you're making a real start for the first time in a good many years, young man, I think you'll want to go seemly and prepared.'

Miss Analine "received" at different stages of her triumphal progress, and the unusual excitement served as a bracing tonic. "We stop down by the Carder farm tonight," she announced on the second day with the manner of one about to behold untold glories. but it was the following noon that a discovery was made which thrilled Miss Caroline with the awakening of a hope long deferred.

She was getting dinner at what they termed a "way station" when she remarked with a perturbed expression, "I declare, Analine, I'm coming to be as forgetful as all Grandma Skillins. Why, I should have vowed I had a big piece of berry pie in the Jutt'ry for your dinner, but there ain't so much as a bite."

She looked at the scanty repast with regret, but great was her anazement to hear her sister acknowledge with a mixture of pride and contrition, "Come for support in case Mr. Handy Andy to think of It, that must have been the identical pie I ate last night."

Miss Caroline dropped into a chair. 'Analine Dyer," she gasped, "tell me the truth! How'd you happen to get that when 'twas in the butt'ry?"

There was no attempt at concealment, but a characteristic explanation fense in case the robber should come was in readiness. "Don't get flustered, down upon us. One of the boys sug-Caroline. You act as floppy as if you gested that a gun be fixed on a swivel was ear sick. You see, 'twas this way: at the paying teller's window and one I got to sort of dwelling on the sub- at the receiving teller's window so ject of China in the night, and from that it could be fired by electricity by there I happened to feel a hankering foot. This was, of course, ridiculous. for something to nibble on myself, and Who was to aim the gun? Certainly butt'ry. So there, that's all. Now, he would be covered. The other boy. there's no call to take on," she finished, for Miss Caroline had thrown her safety than that of the funds, sugapron over her head and was rocking back and forth, shedding tears of joy. The room seemed suddenly filled with contentment. A vista of peace rul days in which to continue their brief journey together toward the setting sun opened before the pair, and two old hands were tightly clasped in each other as a cheery voice outside called "All aboard!"

I looked for her to reproach me either for having kissed her or for not continuing to kiss her, but she made no reference to the first kiss and didn't indicate that she would like another. Indeed, she seemed to me to possess that innocence to be found especially in a girl hovering between childhood and womanhood.

It was about this time that "Handy Andy," a noted desperado, was terrorizing the surrounding country. He worked alone, but did not fear to undertake what was usually undertaken by half a dozen men. He had robbed an express car single handed and got away with the plunder. The passengers of half a dozen stages at different times had handed him their valuables. He had tackled a bank located in the center of a town of 3,000 inhabitants. though in this case the only thing he took away with him was a bullet in the leg. When I was informed of this robbery I naturally began to feel solicitous for my own funds. True, we had weapons, but bank robbers don't usually wait for people to use them I was no hand to tackle them myself and with two young boys and a girl should drop in and ask for the loose eash lying about my bank I didn't feel

"Common sense! They're just the thing. You're idea of keeping the funds in the tin box is a bright one. Miss Bradley usually went out for her dinner, but today she said she had a headache and would not go. She sat reading a newspaper. As I munched a sandwich I could look at her-so fair, so pure, so gentle-and I made up my mind I would propose to her

Suddenly there was a man's step outside the fixtures. Imogen looked up. and I saw by her expression that she recognized the comer. A wonderful change came over her innocent face, Quickly rising, she unlatched a door lending into the space she occupied. A masked man stepped in and covered me with a revolver. Imogen darted to the closet and took out the rope, and the man who had ordered me to throw up my hands took it from her, giving her his revolver, which she kept pointed at me. The masked man then proceeded to bind me hand and

This done, he took the weapon from Imogen. She picked up the tin box containing the bank funds and, turning to me, threw me a kiss.

"That's in return for the one you gave me," she said, smiling, "and I'm much obliged to you for saving us the trouble of collecting the money, which would have taken time. Ta, ta!"

She walked out of the back door with some $20,000, leaving the masked man to keep guard over me till she I was not prepared for so much fore had got far enough away to render pursuit unavailable. When she had gone my watcher said to me: "Nice young woman, isn't she? Sorry for you, but she's got a husband already, and two is against the law.

The boys were not to be expected lating, and it occurred to me that I continue my caresses, to be wound up back till 1 o'clock, and the robber had undoubtedly been informed of the fact. for after keeping me covered half an hour he left me at ten minutes to 1. The boys came in at the regular time

My funds were never recovered. I learned as soon as I was freed that Imogen had been seen slowly carrying the box to a carriage, which she entered and was driven away.
