and Game Commissioners, Warden William Loder, of Egg Harbor City, is maintaining a vigilant watch for all non-residents who attempt to gun in this county without first securing a regular hunting license from the County Clerk and paying the usual fee of ten and one-half dollars.

Under the former law non-residents who owned property in this county were given a permit to shoot here on payment of a fee of fifty cents to the Board of Freeholders, but under the new law ownership of property is not

Secretary Monday last from Walter H. Fell, secretary of the commission, as follows:

Hon. Edward S. Lee,
May's Landing, N. J.

My Dear Sir:—Enclosed please find a letter from Mr. Lemming (a Philadelphian) concerning licenses. Mr. Lemming has been informed that the act under which Freeholders' licenses were granted by the County Clerk has been repealed and that if any such licenses have been issued after April 13, 1908, they will not be recognized by our wardens.

The new law also forbids non-residents from taking game birds or mammals in one day over fifteen birds or ten rabbits, and there are other important changes with which every sportsman will do well to become conversant. The new law is enforced by local game wardens and residents over the new law requiring all non-residents to pay a license fee of $1.00. The law also provides for the limitation of the number of birds and rabbits that may be taken from the State in one day, and also a provision generally commensurate with the law in other States. The law has been further warranted to carry their license with them, as no one without one will be permitted to gun on any game land from the State. The law also provides that any person who is a non-resident, and may be secured at any time by non-residents on payment of the fee. The law also provides that the game warden of the County Clerk to the Fish and Game Commission be used in enforcing the law and taking steps for the preservation of game.

This Fall.

The terms of twenty-one members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of this County, under a decision of Solicitor E. A. Higgins, of the Board, will expire this Fall, and their places must be filled at the regular election. Many of the present members will be candidates for re-election.

The large number of vacancies has been caused by the County's members having been removed from office by the State's Supreme Court. Their successors have not yet been appointed.

The law to elect Freeholders has been in effect for many years. This is still the law, in fact, but the condition of Atlantic County has changed. Atlantic was formerly a county of the third lation to be between 50,000 and 100,000 inhabitants, and therefore put in the second class. The city, on the other hand, has a population of 250,000, and is therefore placed in the first class. The county is placed in the third class. The city of New York is placed in the first class. The city of New York is placed in the first class. The city of New York is placed in the first class.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President:

WILLIAM H. TAFT,

Of Ohio.

For Vice-President:

JAMES S. SHERMAN,

Of New York.

New Jersey is fast drifting to Home Rule. Not the restricted Local Option of the reformers, but a sane, republican law enabling each and every community to decide for itself those domestic affairs affecting its welfare. Home Rule would take from the State Legislature the annual burden of preparing individual laws for each municipality, that comprises under the present law the majority of its work. Home Rule and personal liberty are synonymous. The fundamental principles of the Republic are founded on the proposition that every man has certain inalienable rights, among these being liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and any legislation that abridges those rights is unconstitutional. The Bishops Law, so called, has proven unsatisfactory. It has demonstrated the necessity of reserving to a community the right of determining its own excise matters. But it is on the statute books and must be enforced until corrected by remedial legislation. The only legislation that can be satisfactorily enforced in this State is an enactment conserving to the people of every community the absolute right of regulating their own internal affairs, excise or otherwise.

When the provisions of the Township ordinance requiring peddlers to pay a license fee before vending their wares on the public highways is better understood it will be generally commended. It affects primarily peddlers of inferior, germ-infected clothing made in the city sweat-shops by diseased workers of the slums, who are probably the means of distributing contagious diseases in this manner to a greater extent than any other one agent. The only fault of the ordinance is that it does not require a sufficient license fee to be prohibitive to peddlers of these worthless goods. The ordinance protects the Township farmer's market by requiring those outside of the Township who buy and sell for a profit to pay for the privilege of selling their produce. No farmer who raises his own produce can be compelled to pay for that privilege. The purport and effect of the measure is to protect the interests of the farmer, the merchant and the consumer, and as such it should and will be enforced to the letter by the authorities.

Parents are prone to overlook school matters to a great extent, when they should be taking an active interest in the education of their offspring and assisting the teacher by their co-operation. It is a mistake to rely upon the school to supply single-handed the mental and moral needs of a growing boy or girl. That teacher can do best who has the sympathy of the parent, and who works hand in hand therewith for the advancement of the child. It is too often the practice to leave the care of the child's education solely with the school. The latter has control of the pupil but a few hours of the day, while the parents, if they will, can exert their influence throughout the day both in and out of school. Every parent should take an individual interest in the progress of his children, encourage and assist the teacher by intelligent co-operation, and support every moment for better educational facilities when their need becomes apparent.

The State Fish and Game Commission has notified the County Clerk that persons owning property in this County who are not residents of this State are not entitled to gun here unless they pay the usual non-resident license. Formerly the Board of Freeholders issued licenses for a nominal fee to those who were property holders, but under the new law all who are not actual residents must secure a license. This is one of a number of laws passed at the last Legislative session calculated to preserve the game and protect the interests of the home sportsman. It will be well for every non-resident gunner to become thoroughly conversant with the new game laws before hunting this year, for the wardens have been instructed to carry out its provisions without fear or favor. There are also many changes with which it will be well for home sportsmen to become familiar.

The general public will still be far from satisfied with the protection afforded from the deadly electrified third rail under the law which took effect recently, compelling the railroad to cover the rail seventy-five feet each side of every grade crossing. It has made no effort to afford better protection at the long stretches of track between crossings. It is true that anyone using the right of way without a special permit from the company or legal excuse is a trespasser, but nevertheless it seems only right that when a company is allowed to run such a dangerous affair through a community every precaution should be taken to safeguard the public. The rail should be protected at every point, and it is to be devoutly wished that our legislators will pass a law to that effect next Winter.

Governor Fort's firm, though perhaps ill-advised stand for the enforcement of the Bishop law has had one result that every firm stand for one's convictions is certain to produce: it has made other men consider seriously the same question. The people of the State have taken the liquor question to heart, and out of the multitude of opinions and contentions of various conflicting interests there will come a final settlement of the excise law that may be more than state-wide in its effect. New Jersey by its disposition of this burning question may point the way to other States in solving the most vexing problem that has confronted the people of this country in years. It is a matter that requires long, serious, deliberate consideration before the die is cast.

Reports from the seashore resorts indicate that the Summer has been an exceptionally good one. Despite dullness of business elsewhere Atlantic City has been well patronized at all times, and her hotels and places of amusement are in a prosperous condition. Cape May does not seem to have fared so well, three large hotels having closed owing to lack of patronage. Ocean City is growing into prominence rapidly, not only as a Summer resort but as a home city. The new trolley route across the bay, giving the resort frequent train service to Philadelphia, has been one of the prime factors in furthering its growth and inducing cottagers to build.

Foreman Salus, of the last Grand Jury, caused more than State-wide remark by his contention that no man, however clothed with authority, is empowered to impugn or question the motives and deliberations of the Grand Jury. It is a question that has stirred considerable interest among lawyers and officials, inasmuch as it affects the authority of a body of men supposed to be, as Salus contended, supreme in the last analysis, and not amenable to official censure, dictation or investigation. Judicial light on the question will be welcomed.

Every good road is its own justification, but there are many other reasons why the completion of the new May's Landing-Downstown highway should be welcomed by the people of the County, as well as residents of this place. There are already indications of a heavy automobile travel over the new road, and the highways of the municipality should be kept in good repair and every inducement offered to the autoists to come this way.

Good work is being done by the New Jersey Children's Home Society. During the last year it has aided directly in bettering the conditions of 547 children, most of whom were without homes or in want. The money for the work has been donated by the people of the State, who have thus indirectly assisted in leading these children away from surroundings that would eventually induce a large number to become criminals.

"All things come round in time," perhaps, but nevertheless railroad patrons can't help wishing the company would "get a move on" in the matter of erecting a station on the South-bound track of the electric railroad, to say nothing of protecting the dangerous grade crossings.

Political campaigns rarely warm up until cool weather, but in the present instance there are many premonitory signs that intimate a keen interest in the coming contest in this County. Slight interest, however, is displayed over State and National issues.

STATE PRESS COMMENT.

No country that ever existed has realized to a greater degree, or with greater clearness than this, not only the importance of farming as an occupation, but the importance of the farmer as a citizen, and during recent years at least, no other country has exhibited a greater appreciation of the skillful tiller of the soil.

"Long before the fertile lands in any of our states or territories gave evidence of receiving the active assistance of cultivation, and even at a time when we were opening to the plow the richest lands within our borders, the necessity of educating our agriculturists so that they would be able to conserve natural resources while increasing the product became manifest to our public men.

"As a result, agricultural colleges sprang up in every state. Out of these have grown the great experiment stations which have practically revolutionized the art of farming in this country. Gradually national interest became aroused. The department of agriculture was created, and this in turn has become the parent of bureaus which combine to make it today the most effective department of its kind in the world.

"Neither labor nor expense has been spared by the state or nation to place the results of scientific investigation and experiment within the reach of the ordinary individual American farmer. All he needs to do is to ask for help, and it is forthcoming, whether it takes the form of education, advice in emergency, or seed. He need not go far afield if he will only take the trouble to seek guidance and is possessed of sufficient intelligence to make good use of it.

"What state aid and government aid have failed to do private enterprise has accomplished for him. The telephone operates side by side with the rural free delivery mail box, and the interurban trolley has wiped out distance to the county seat and the market town in thousands of agricultural neighborhoods.

"Social life and sanitary conditions have improved marvellously on the American farm during the last ten years, and these improvements are not going to cease."—Trenton State Gazette.

"The onslaught upon Atlantic City, over its liberal Sunday laws, is having the effect of lining up the liberal sentiment of the state in a proposed attack upon the Bishop's law. It may be wiped out. Senator Colby, of Essex County, has come out in favor of a liberal Sunday law and will wage a campaign in Newark City on the line. He declares that he favors the repeal of the Bishop's law. It is reported that Hudson County, the next populous county of the state to Essex, leans to the liberal Sunday law, and all through the state the battle which Atlantic City is engaged in fighting, has provoked discussion. Hudson and Essex counties, together with the shore counties, could very nearly control the House if the delegations voted solidly. How the Senate would stand on a question of an open Sunday is more of a problem. But that change in the Sunday laws are coming as the outcome of the fight is now expected. What they will be no one can say, but the sentiment of the resorts along the coast being unanimous for some change in regard to the Bishop's and other excise law, and the fact that practically every one has been openly violating the law, is to have a mighty influence in shaping new excise legislation the coming Winter in which it is expected concessions will be made to the element which demands more freedom on Sunday than has been extended in the past. New Jersey has a great asset in its coast, which it wants lined with prosperous cities, and the Legislature can be expected to enact such laws as are within reason on the excise question when such laws will tend to promote the development of the coast."—Atlantic City Review.

"In spite of all efforts to prevent it, the liquor question threatens to become a leading issue in this State during the coming campaign. It was hoped that the appointment of an Excise Commission to investigate the subject and report to the next Legislature would quiet the agitation and keep the question in the background until such time as definite in the shape of new legislation could be obtained. But it was a vain hope. The conditions disclosed by the commission's report, coupled with the flagrant disregard of the excise laws, have served to bring the issue into greater prominence than ever. In fact, the liquor question is probably more talked about in this State at the present time than any other topic. As to what the result will be no one can tell, but unless great care is exercised in dealing with the matter there are likely to be some unpleasant surprises."—West Jersey Press.

"That the direct primary law has a tendency to interest many people in affairs political, is indicated by the number of candidates who are presenting themselves for places on the tickets this Fall. There will be a large number of those who feel themselves qualified to be candidates, and they are circulating petitions to be filed with the proper officials. When the primaries are held, the people will have every opportunity of passing upon the candidates and voting for those who appeal to the individual voter. This would seem to be a representative system of government."—Bridgeport Daily Pioneer.
