While Mr. Bryan's policies, financial and economic, are dangerous enough to alarm the entire cratic administration of the government, and use his vote and his inbusiness community, they are really less ominous than his attitude toward the American Judiciary. Mr. Bryan's perpetual candidacy is a protest, not only against established laws, but against the rules and eltizen who has had experience in good and not so good times will processes by which the laws are interpreted. He proposes a radical curtailment of the powers of our courts and the pay roll always ready.
