RE-OPENING SERVICES IN BETHEL M.E. CHURCH

ANNIVERSARY WEEK WITH FORMER PASTORS.

Improvements Convert Edifice Into Splendid House of Worship-Rev. Moore and Congregation Pleased at Success.

All day services will be held to-morrow in the Bethel M. E. Church in honor of the completion of the improvements to that edifice, which have made it one of the finest houses of worship in the County. The Rev. S. M. Nichols, District Superintendent, will preach and special music will be rendered. Rallies will be held by the Sunday School and the Epworth League. Following the reopening sevices to-morrow there will be a week of anniversary and evangelistic services with former pastors and others in charge. The pastor, the Rev. S. K. Moore, has worked early and late on the improvements and the result is a permanent memorial to his untiring efforts. In the work the members of the Congregation have given great assistance and the rebuilt edifice, complete in every detail, is the erowning success of their labor.

REV. SPENCER K. MOORE.

The entire building was raised three and one-half feet and a large, comfortable basement l built beneath for the Sunday School services. main auditorium was rebuilt, the choir and organ loft being constructed in the pear of pulpit, the walls repainted and the floor recarpeted. Cement walks have been laid about the church and a walk will be laid fronting the property as soon as the weather permits next spring.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has issued an illustrated booklet descriptive of its palatial New York terminal, with a view to familiarizing the traveling public with its location and advantages. The newspapers of the country have from time to time published information, regarding the progress of the work on the great station, but the public interest in it will be much greater when the details to be found in the booklet are acrutinized.

The construction of the tunnels leading to the busy center of New York, and the erection and equipment of the go geous terminal, are monuments to the courage and skill of the master architects and builders, second in importance only to that which typifies the genius of the famous railroad manager whose brain conceived the project. It may truthfully-be said that all the world cannot match the Pennsylvania's New York terminal in massiveness, beauty of architecture, elegance of equipment and convenience and comfort for the traveler. FARMER STRONG HELD FOR MURDER OF WIFE

JANUARY GRAND JURY WILL INVESTIGATE TRAGEDY.

Prisoner Protests His Innocense of Crime That Shocked Entire County - Hearing Before Magistrate Iszard.

William Strong, the Nesco farmer charged with murdering his wife, Mary Strong, on October 14 last, was given a preliminary hearto await the action of the January Grand Jury. Frederick C. Lings to J. Prescott Stoughton, Strong stoutly maintains his innocense. The 14.575 ft. North side of Ventnor Ave. and East State, it is said, did not present all of its evidence at the hearing.

Strong's own story of the tradedy is the principal evidence in the case. He says that on the day Mrs. Strong was murdered, he had endleton, 37.5x113 ft. South side of Atlantic lunch with her at 12.30 o'clock, after which he drove into Elwood with some chickens and eggs to sell. He returned about four o'clock. After unhitching his horse and putting him into the stable, he went into the house to find Frederick G. Helmbold et. nx. to Clayton E. his wife. Not seeing her there he went out to gathered some eggs, then went back to the shed, where his attention was attracted to her floor, and thinking she had fainted, he raised her head and found it covered with blood. He irreg, beginning in centre line of Jackson Ave. then rushed to the home of a neighbor, Jesse Abbott, and phoned te Coroner Charles Cunningham, of Hammonton, to come out at once as his wife had been killed. Then he went to the home of Jasper Craig, his wife's uncle, and took him to the scene of the tragedy. County Detective William Baitzell, who investigated the crime, says that Strong could not have passed the shed where Mrs. Strong's body was lying as he said he did without neeing her at once. He also said that Strong made conflicting statements as to the clothing he wore at the time. Dr. Henry S. Cattell, os Philadelphia, who conducted the post-mortem examination, said he found that Mary Strong was killed by strangulation, apparently by the two forefingers and thumb of a human hand, the marks of which were left on the throat. The wounds on the head made, it is supposed, with a "turf-hoe" found by the body, were inhristmas et. ux. 25x100 ft. East side of New flicted after death. TRAPPING IN NEW JERSEY

Fur Industry Said to Net Trappers Thousands of Dollars. New Jersey is not generally held to be a paradise for hunters and trappers for fur bearing animals, says an exchange, yet the number plots at West Egg Harbor, Tract C, Dobbs & of skins taken in this State each year rins away up into the thousands. In the vicinity of Red Bank alone there are numerous trap-reports having bought 15,000 fur skins in the Opossums, skunks, weasels and racoons yield their skins to the trappers, to say nothing of rabbits. Even cat skins find ready sale at twenty or thirty cents each, while muskrats, skunk and mink run from fifty cents to seven dollars each, according to quality. The meadows yield quite a harvest

A Good Position Can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "wireless" or railway telegraphy. Since the Shour law became effective, and since the wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervison of R. R. and Wireless Officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full

One October I was riding through the beautiful hills of Vermont when evening came upon me in a thinly settled region, and I encountered a breakdown at the same time. I couldn't. like Joshua, turn the sun back in his course, and I saw at a glance that I couldn't repair the break in my auto. Fortunately near me was a house. It was a queer looking structure built of brick and bexagonal in form. Leaving my auto beside the road where it was stalled, with a light before and behind. I went to the house resolved if admitted to spend the night there: There was not much encouragement of a welcome for me since it was now quite dark and not a light was to be keen at a single window.

On reaching the premises I went to the front door and beat on it with the old fashioned brass lion's head knocker. I failed to rouse any one. Then I went around the house, looking for n possible entrance. I found one through a window the sash of which had been left unlocked. Entering, I struck a match and saw that I was in a house furnished in colonial style. Not a bed or bureau could have been less than a hundred years old. It was evidently the home when occupied of refined and educated people.

Going upstairs, I found a bedroom that suited me, with a four post bedstead and a broad open fireplace. A wood box stood beside the latter, and I soon had half a dezen logs burning brightly. Then, returning to my auto, I took my lunch basket, which I al-There were lamps in the house and dishes, but no entables. There was no one in any room. In the garret I fect an entrance, but it seemed to me that it was a storeroom. I returned to the room I had slept in My heart was beating like a kettledrum. I poohpoohed and tried to laugh at the oddity of the situation, but it was no use. I sat down in the chair in which I had slept the night before and tried to reassure myself that I was mentally sound. The first sip of coffee, the first mouthful of food, bracing me, as it did, made me feel more confident that I was not in a condition to be transferred to bedlam, and by the time I had finished my breakfast I felt sure there was some explanation of the mystery on other grounds than that I had lost my reason. "And yet," I argued, relapsing into doubt, "insane persons believe themselves of perfectly sound

I arose from the table, went into a sitting room in the front of the house and looked out through a window. There was my auto standing beside the road just as I had left it the night before. "Ask no questions vet." she whispered and without waiting for a reply directed the attendant to wheel the chair to the car door. The nihilist, holding on his cevering as best he could, the veil concealing his features, shambled into the chair and, apparently exhausted, was wheeled to the carriage. We'll get a room for the gentleman at our hotel and can send him to the train tomorrow for Marseilles, whence he expects to sail for the 'land of the free and the home of the brave." The nihilist understood no English, so he knew not a word of this dialogue except by the expression of the speakers. He knew by that of the father that the daughter had carried the day, but the old gentleman was trembling like a leaf

The next morning the Moniteur contained an item stating that a Russian political prisoner who had been arrested in London and was being extradited had jumped off a train between Calais and Paris and escaped. He was tracked to a station where he was seen to board a train just starting. His follower took a rear car and endeavored to pick up the fugitive as he left the train, but the latter succeeded in eluding him.

When Mr Armstrong read this at the breakfast table he turned pale. "I must go to the American minister's at once," he said to his daughter, 'confess and ask him to help us out' of this dangerous position into which you have plunged us."

"Nonsense, papa. You'll do no such thing. The nihilist has gone. He took an early train."

"Did he wear the same clothes?" "No; they were not big enough. He vore mamma's traveling suit."

"Yes." "Oh, Nell, if I ever get you home I'll never be such a fool again! When he is arrested the dress will implicate the whole family."

But the fugitive was not arrested. He succeeded in reaching a Mediterranean port, where he found a vessel going to America, and got to that country in safety. Helen received a letter from him giving her full credit for having saved him from an imprisonment worse than death. "Without our clever management," he said, "I should surely have been taken." 👈 "There, papa," said Helen after reading her father the letter; "you see how much distress you have saved a fellow being by your noble effort."

"Humph!" exclaimed the old gentleman. "I hope the thing's over. They may get on to us yet."

Lucrative positions come from various sources, so many sources that it is difficult to mention or classify them, And yet how hard it is for a boy, unaided and often even with every advantage, to grow into one of them.

Frank Bushnell was obliged to go to work when he was but twelve years His education therefore was not of the best, and, having no one to help him on but himself, he progressed slowly, or, rather, he didn't progress at all. He sold papers on a railroad; then became a brakeman and when he was nearly thirty years old had got no farther up the ladder than baggage agent at a small way station at a salary of $30 a month

Frank while hunting up a lost trunk went one day into the general offices of the company. There he saw the sleck, well groomed officials with polished fingernails and clean shaved One who sat at a mahogany desk and tapped a bell occasionally for a boy to do his work may have been getting from $3,000 to $50,000 a year, while Frank for tiring himself out handling heavy trunks got less; than $100. It made him desperate. He went back to his station and wrote a letter applying for a better position.

The official who received it was about to throw it into the wastebasket when he remembered a station in the center of a desolate section of the road where the inhabitants who used the railroad habitually intimidated the ticket agent, securing tickets without paying any money for them. One agent after another had been discharged for not collecting for tickets The official indorsed on Frank Bushnell's letter "Appoint him agent ut Hawkeye."

When Frank learned that he was transferred to Hawkeye at a salary of $500 a year he was encouraged till he learned the facts. Then he was correspondingly depressed. But life looked so gloomy to him that he didn't care much whether he got killed trying to collect fares at Hawkeye or not. He was passing into middle age, had no home and, worst of all, wanted to make one with a girl be knew. But that was out of the question.

The first morning Frank appeared at his window a wild looking man applied for a ticket. Frank handed it out, but kept his hand on it, demanding the money for it. The man was putting his hand to his hip for his revolver when Frank laid his own hand on one beside the window invisible from the outside and fired at random through the opening. Then he went outside to discover the results and found the man, shot through the breast, giving his last kick. Going back to his telegraph clicker, he sent the following message to the man who appointed him:

Killed man for refusing to pay fare Send undertaker Shall I keep on?

When the gentleman received the dispatch he was puzzled just what to do in the matter. This taking the law in the hands of the company through one of its agents was not in keeping with the policy as laid down by its chief attorney The recipient of the Any Part of Atlantic County telegram took it into the president, who read it and was visibly im-

"Send an undertaker," he said, "and report the matter to Mr. Pugh." Mr. Pugh was the road's chief attorney. "But the reply to the station agent as to his future course? You see, he asks if he shall keep on killing those who refuse to pay"

"Appoint another man in his place and as soon as the legal difficulties are out of the way order him to report to

There were no legal difficulties. Every one knew all about Hawkeye Station and felt assured that if the people living about it couldn't take care of themselves the law would fail also. In a few days Bushnell appeared before the president of the road

"It seems to me," said the president, "that you have indicated the field for which you are fitted I am director in a bank. We have trouble to find a man brave enough and at the same time honest enough to guard our funds and securities. I am told that you are scrupulously honest. I can secure for you the position of chief watchman at the bank. You will be held accountable for its safety, and as your duties will be very important your salary will be commensurate. You will receive 83 000 a year."

Frank was so astonished that he neglected to reply Finally, recalling himself, he said:

"If this promotion is for killing one man, why not let me stay there and kill a few more of 'em. I could get as big a salary as any one here in time.' "It isn't for killing a man that you are taken up for a more responsible position, but for furnishing evidence that you have plenty of nerve." Frank Bushnell entered on his new duties. At first it seemed to him that, having been but there for the purpose of killing those who sought to rob the bank, he should shoot some one at least once a week in order to retain so fine a salary. But as time went on he learned that his value was negativenot to display his nerve, but to have it always in readiness. Not till he had been with the bank for ten years did he get another raise, and then it was for being in the line of promotion rather than on account of his readiness to shoot

Duty has the virtue of making us feel the reality of a positive world, while at the same time detaching us from it.—Amiel.

The Book That Fitted.

This masterpiece was handed in one day to the librarian of a public library: "Dear Lady-Please send by Bertha a book that will agree with her pa. He is forty-three years old, has never been much of a reader, is laid up with a lame back, no appetite, but terrible thirsty all the time, a quick pulse and temperature that stays at about 100. Please send something that will not excite him and send his temperature up any higher." It took a consultation of all the highbrows in the library to prescribe a literary dose for pa that would not con- Store. Fresh and pure. flict with the medical bulletin. They sent him, "The Swiss Family Robinson." His temperature did not go up. -Ladies' Home Journal.

A Country of Earthquakes. Japan is peculiarly the victim of elemental forces. The only satisfaction its people can derive from living in a country which contains fifty-one active volcanoes and has an average of about 500 earthquirke shocks yearly is that in all probability Japan would never have existed but for the seismic and volcanic agency which has elevated whole districts above the ocean by means of repeated eruptions.

Bismarck Loved the English. Bismarck said a Russian only had sense to steal a day's living, a Dutchman a year's, but an Englishman, said Blsmarck, rarely stole less than a life's keeping. Bismarck said if there was one absolute, underiating, rock bottom fact in Anglo-Saxon makeup and charncter it was thievery all flowered over dens of hypocrisy.
