CONVICTION SECURED WHITE SLAVE ACT.

Cases On October Calendar Will Last Until January Term Opens donated and subscriptions. —Criminal Trials to Continue Next Week.

The first prosecution in Atlantic County under the new "white slave" act resulted in the acquittal of Samuel Nelson, a native of Poland, who was arrested last July in Atlantic City and charged with attempting to place Mary Lokay, an 18-year-old Polish girl, in a house of Ill repute on North Carolina Avenue. Nelson was defended by Attorney Joseph Gross, of Philadelphia. Mary Lokay was employed as a waitress in a small beach-front hotel where she me Nelson, who, she testified, took her to the house in question. Nelson, on the stand, denied the girl's story, declaring was when he went them and the neur mer raques to interpret for her.

William Thomas, colored, was convicted Thursday last on a charge of white slavery, having received money from the shameful earnings of a white woman, Elsie Foster, whom he brought to Atlantic City from Philadelphia. MAYS LANDING, DECEMBER 3, 1910.

Careless use of air-ritles on the public streets in the hands of irresponsible youths is menace to pedestrians and ought not to be permitted. One or two children have been slightly injured by stray shots. A stop should be put to the dangerous practice.

It has been said that the building and loan idea is a favorite one with the people of New Jersey. Certainly, it has met with generous support in Atlantic County, a fact to which th institution here is no exception. Residents o May's Landing can point with commendable pride to one of the strongest organizations of Ats kind in South Jersey.

Tuberculosis is rapidly losing ground in the war against this dread disease, but while much has been done, very much more remains to be done. More than six million dollars has been expended by the public in this country in the battle during the last two years, of which the greater portion has gone to provide open fair treatment. The disease is so firmly intrenched that many millions more must b spent in order to reach all its victims and stamp it out. It is a cause worthy of the mos generous support.

Once in a while we look over our library shelves and take down a volume of the obliterature, Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield, 'Adam Bede," or one of the masterpieces of Thackeray, Dickens or Scott. No what a pleasure it is to linger over its pages, to live the good old times over again! Happy i may commune with the master minds of the past and bring the treasures of their pens to

With Christmas only three weeks away, It is time to begin your holiday shopping if you would avoid the rush. One thing County people should bear in mind; the merchants of Exrx, 149x33 ft, 4 in, West side S.Carolina Ave. Atlantic City offer fully as good a line of gifts 227 ft. South of Pacific Ave. $5,000. as can be found in Philadelphia. They may not have as large a stock, but in quality their merchandisc is figst-class and their shelves are filled with a great variety of things suitable for gifts. By doing your shopping at Atlantic City you will avoid the long car rides, the nerve-wracking rush of the big stores and your purchases will be satisfactory.

The improvement of Bethel M. E. Church is a matter of congratulation to residents in general as well as to its pastor and congregation, who are justified in being proud of that institution. A better spirit of appreciation than pride, however, is expressed by the pastor, the Rev. S. K. Moore, who says he is thankfull 750 ft. North of Ave. A, $40. for the spiendid place of worship and for the strength that enabled him to labor successfully to its completion. The Rev. Popularity of Atlantic City as a Winter resort has been the pet theme of the resort Ave. $3,000. bonifaces for a number of years and the present season gives promise of fulfilling their expectations. The hotels are well filled and the resort during the holiday week will entertain thousands of visitors from Philadelphia and elsewhere. Atlantic City's great and growing Winter patronage is largely among the wealthy class of people of the larger cities, an assertion which a glance at the hotel registers will verify. In point of healthfulness, the resort is second to none in the world as a place for Winter residence, for the rigors of the sea- known as 2215 and 2217 (and rear) Arctic Ave. son are modified by the ocean air. All hail to $7,250, the Queen Resort of Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter!

Much importance is attached to the recent decision by which a Burlington magistrate imposed a fine of fifty dollars for setting a brush fire that escaped. The fine does not Objects: To make &c. contracts for and build measure the injury, because a thousand acres "&c. He told me that the emperor had been striving to secure another power to join him in interfering to stop the war in America; that sistently upon the English government the people of England being almost wholly on the side of the south owing largely to their dependence on getting cotton from that section. "The emperor," he added, "is about to succeed, and within sixty days a combined French and English fleet will be on the American Atlantic coast to break the blockade."

Patriotic Ameri an that I was, my blood chilled at this information; but. immediately remembering that if the news were true a man so close to the emperor would be guilty of betraying a trust to give it to me, I said, "It would be impossible for me to secure the publication of this news in any English paper without documentary proof."

"I dan give you the proof," replied the count, "provided that proof remains with you and dies with youthat it is kept a secret till we are all

I perused them with ever growing wonder and long before I had finished was convinced not only of the truth of his statement, but that within sixty days the independence of the Confederate states would be acknowledged by France and England. I kept rereading the papers in order to gain time to think. I was perusing documents of which President Lincoln was ignorant and which constituted the death warrant of the Union cause. What should I do-what could I'doto arrest such a blow? Finally I look-

He realizes this and desires to concentrate the minds of the people on some foreign government of Mexico, which has been offered him by a few malcontents Before doing this he desires to break the United States into two parts, gaining at the same time the good will of one. By bringing about Confederacy and gain the eternal gratitude of the southern people. His Mexican scheme will then be on a far stronger basis." The count paused, and I noticed that a pained expression passed over his "And your opinion, count, of the wis-

"It means the end of the empire. No more cauxy scheme was ever de-vised. He declares that it is his only hope to save his throne. He will not listen to me. I would save him from himself. By securing a premature publication of the plan I may thwart it, and my master will be saved from its disastrous consequences." In my enthusiasm I grasped the count's hand and held it as in a vise. "Count," I exclaimed, "I am no less struck with wonder at your disinterested wisdom than I was at first at your seeming dishonor. These men about the emperor are idiots. You are with age, I came upon the following, a statesman in the very highest de-

> Arrived at St. Petersburg, as soon as I had made a toilet I drove to the house of Alexiaef Vronsky, to whom I bore the letter of introduction. I found a middle aged gentleman, untitled, but for some reason possessing great influence with the czar. That was a help to me, and I got on much better as soon as I had been thus assured. I laid bare the whole scheme and showed a knowledge of facts which fitted in with much that he knew himself about the schemes not only of Napoleon III., but the prime minister of England. Before I had finished I knew I had at heart won the czar's confidence,

I withdrew at once perfectly satisfied with the result of my mission. After thanking Vronsky again and again for this introduction I took the train at once for Paris, knowing that De V, would be eager to hear what I might have to say. I called on him on my arrival before going to my home and after assuring him that his part gave him an account of my interview ending with the czar's assurance.

In a few weeks, hearing nothing more of the matter and becoming uneasy, I sailed for America to report the affair to the president. In sailing up New York bay I found it filled with a Russian war fleet.

The doorbell rang sharply, and Evalina dropped the rolling pin and open-

The girl flushed brightly, and a strange air of reserve settled over her lovely face. "It is my Great-aunt Harriet. She is very old and somewhat peculiar. I hope you will not mind what she said."

"Evalina! That's Tom Taylor's voice. What's he doin' here?" Aunt Harriet's voice shrilled through the rooms. The man let himself out the door while Evalina bastened to the side of bedridden Aunt Harriet. "What's Tom Taylor doing here?" asked the old woman peevishly.

"Creamed toast and peaches, some of my fresh jumbles and a cup of tea." "Sounds drendful good, Evalina. I expect I'm mighty cross to you sometimes. You've got the patience of an angel, for you ain't never cross." Aunt Harriet stretched forth a bony hand and caressed the girl's bright bair. Evalina bent and kissed her softly. "Too bad I can't be nice to you, Aunt Harriet. You're all I've got in the

"I'm a poor critter," lamented Aunt Harriet-"not worth my salt. You're killing yourself baking and brewing there to make a living for us both. I wish you'd get married, Evalina." "Maybe I shall marry a millionaire," laughed Evalina as she went buslly to and fro. "You would like that, aunt. for I shouldn't do any more baking. Wouldn't that be perfectly lovely?_You might ride in an automobile. How would you like that?"

"I wouldn't like it a mite," said Aunt Harriet grimly. "I'd say to the driver, You can take me right up to the graveyard now; I'm bound to get there if I go riding in an automobile,' and so if there was an accident I'd be right handy to the Ward plot. There, Evalina, that supper does smell real tasty. It's a shame you don't get mar-You are a splendid cook, and some good man would appreciate you." "Aunt Harriet, I believe you might operate a matrimonial bureau, only please don't practice on me. I'm too busy to get married." Evalina burried away to attend to her baking, which hy a series of accidents had been delayed until the late afternoon. As she bustled to and fro, putting things to rights, clearing away the disorder of flour and other ingredients, she passed a small mirror hanging on the wall. "Dear me!" murmured Evalina. "I wonder if that smudge of flour was on my forehead when he was in here. I hope not." "Evalina, do come and set me right!" called the old lady "I've eat my suphis majesty, "that the scheme will not | per and spilled the tea, and I want to

> When Evalina had cleared away the supper things and Aunt Harriet had been tucked under the covers Evalina sat a long time over her own meal with soft brown eyes dreamily fixed on the glowing square of the stove door. Every day thereafter the strange man called at Evalina's house and bought some product of her baking. One day several weeks after the stranger's first visit Aunt Harriet was > left alone in the house while Evalina went to a nearby town to order supplies. Late in the afternoon there rame a knock at the sitting room door. "Who is it?" demanded Aunt Harriet shrilly. "I would like some bread, please," came the meek voice of the stranger. "The key's under the mat," called Aunt Harriet eagerly. "Come right called for some bread. I'll help myself with your permission," came the genial tones in reply. "Will you please come here a moment?' Aunt Harriet spoke rather timidly for a woman of her forcible character. "Certainly, if you wish." In an instant he was filling the bedroom doorway and looking down at Aunt Harrlet's eager, old face. "What can I do for you?" he asked kindly.

"I wanted to see you. I like your voice," said Aunt Harriet, with sudden decision. "What did you say your name was?" she asked shrewdly. The stranger smiled broadly. "I dldn't say, but I am Dr. Massen, the new physician in town."

"Dr. Massen," repeated Aunt Harriet slowly, as if she enjoyed the sound of the words. "Are you married, young man?"

"No, I am not," he laughed lightly. "Drink?" asked Aunt Harriet brisk-

"Yes, you do. You just said one," contradicted the old woman dryly. 'But never mind: you'll do." "Thank you for saying so. And now may I have my bread?" "You better wait till Evalina comes," suggested Aunt Harriet agreeably. "You can si right down in the other room. There's likely to be Sunday school papers on the table. You can read till Evalina comes. She'll be "Very well." said Dr. Massen, obeying her suggestion with suspicious that would better be called an inquisition. There was no question concern-Just then there came a querulous! Harriet did not ask. His past was laid bare for Aunt Harriet's inspection, and then she in turn told the simple story of Evalina's self sacrificing life. "All for an old woman that isn't worth her salt," she said tear-

> "Nonsense!" said the doctor cheerly. "I know Miss Ward enjoys doing it for you." "If I was to die she'd be all alone," > said Aunt Harriet wistfully. "I wish she'd get married." Dr. Massen was silent for several moments. "l'erhaps she will some day," he said, with some constraint.

"Why don't you marry her?" asked Aunt Harriet sharply. "Evalina's a real good cook." "Aunt Harriet!" Evalina's voice came indignantly from the doorway. "Why "It wasn't Tom, Aunt Harriet; it are you speaking of me in such a man-you, sir?" Dr. Massen, looking down at her, marwhile the girl brushed back her sconty like some little fluffy ruffled bird, a little bright hued hird whose domain has been invaded by some marauding dog or cat

"I came for bread." he said meekly. "I hope you have some to spare." "I believe there is none left," said Evalina loftily, and then she blushed painfully while he bowed low and left

Evalina walked into the bedroom and, throwing herself down into a chair beside the bed, burst into tears. "Aunt Evalina, how could you?" she sobbed bitterly. "You have mortified

"I was only starting my matermonial bureau, Evalina. You won't do nothing yourself about getting married, and you can't bake all your life. There ain't no need to take on so: he was real pleasant about the matter." "Pleasant!" wailed Evalina. "Oh, Aunt Harriet, why did you pick him If it had only been somebody else! I'll never dare look him in the face again!"

Aunt Harriet turned her face to the wall and smiled wisely. "I can't say I'm sorry, Evalina, but I won't say any such things again, I promise." Two weeks afterward Aunt Harriet Ward suffered one of her periodical

"poor spells," and old Dr. Lake was sent for in great haste. But Dr. Lake was himself a prisoner, tied to the house with inflammatory rheumatism, so it happened that the tall form of Dr. Massen darkened Evalina's door-She did not look at him, but led the way directly to Aunt Harriet's side. She stood apart and reluctantly confessed to herself that his skill was far superior to that of the old doctor. His terse questioning, his kindly manner. his quick diagnosis of Aunt Harriet's baffling case, opened a world of encouragement for both women.

Evalina found herself flying to do his bidding. An hour afterward they were chatting like old friends across Aunt Harriet's contented face.

"Seems like I feel ten years younger, doctor," said the old woman gratefully. "After I give you a course of electric massage you'll be running around with the best of us," he encouraged her. "I can never repay you if you do,"

"You've paid me in part already, Miss Ward," he said gravely, without looking at Evalina. "Some day I'm coming to present my bill-and perhaps levy on your most precious posses-

Evalina in the next room was again an eavesdropper, but this time she was silent. Her hand rested lightly with a half caress on one of the doctor's sealskin gloves thrown on the table, and there was a deamy look in

"I'm glad he likes spice jumbles." thought Evalina before she awoke to trembling realization of what the admission meant.
