The Lucky Larceny.

Lawyer's Story

Mr. Courtney was a rich old bachelor and the uncle of a couple of nephewsthe one a brother's, and the other a sister's son. These two were his next of kin, legally entitled, in case he died intestate, to inherit his property.

Edward Horton, his deceased sister's son, was decidedly his favorite, and to him the old man resolved to give the bulk of his estate.

Charles Courtney, the other nephew, had inherited a handsome fortune from lris father, and, moreover, by his uncle's will, was entitled to succeed to that left hy his cousin, in the event of the latter's without issue.

Owing to the disordered States aggregated $458,506,525, and the net imports $104,638,728, so that nearly $354,000,000 was entirely lost. The best authorities estimated the suffi specie in the country at that with the have been $200,000,000. As the production up to 1860 was something like $725,000,000, even putting the consumption in the arts $50,000,000, there was still a large deficiency. Since 1860 there has been inflation and overtrading so that nearly the entire mineral production of the country, enormous as it has been, is shown by the custom house figures to have gone to foreign lands. Just prior to the panic of 1873 it required over $100,000,000 in specie, in addition to the merchandise exported. to pay for the interests of one year. STRANGE SIGHTS

Once taking a stroll in the forest range, There occurred a thing which Lthought strange; A hantsman alowly by the lake's side Backwards and forwards saw I ride. Deer, as they sprang past, heeded he not, Nor raised his arm for a single shot, But from his brass bugle a loud blasseent. Now, say, good people, what could it have meant And as deeper into the wood I strolled A stranger sight yet did I behold! A girl in a little boat plied her oar, Rowing inwards towards the shore. Fish in the sunset glow saw she none,

Nor threw her line to a single one.
But a verse from a song to the wild winds sen Now, say, good people, what could it have meant? And coming homewards at chill night-fall (And this was the strangest sight of ail), A lonely horse, to meet me, strayed; Round an empty boat the fishes played: And as I same under the willow trees

THE STANDARD FRENCH GREEN

With reverence is all that I desire.

Whether the following strange in cldent be true or false, as having caused the celebrated William Pitt to negotiate those heavy loans which are said to have increased the National debt in England to an almost fabulous amount, we know not, but as there is a moral in it we introduce it here:

Everybody knows that Pitt raised the character and prosperity of England by loans, but it is not generally known that Pitt "borrowed the idea of borrowing" from the following anecdote,

Schneider, an inhabitant of the Canton of Unterwald, in Switzerland, was left at the age of twenty-one to shift for himself. His father had been a rehis son but some sketches for a new constitution, which Schneider could make no use of. The doctrine of loans certain plots have been subsolled (not came into Schneider's head as happily simply deep plowed), and in most cases as that of attraction struck Newton. As the crop on an adjoining plot not subnobody knew that his father had died solled has exceeded that on the portion insolvent, he declared openly that he was in want of 2,000 rix dollars (£400), for which he was willing to pay 5 per involved.
