John Burroughs, one of the witnesses to the within will, being duly sworn, according to law deposes and says that Samuel Burroughs, the testator therein named, was at the time of making said will a very poor person and that in order to guide his writing so that his signature would appear straight, a line was drawn with a pen for that purpose; that when the said Samuel Burroughs signed his name to said will he wrote through said line and made the same appear that his signature was crossed out. Deponent further says that this line was drawn before the execution of said will and was made in his presence and in the presence of the testator and the other subscribing witnesses, all being present at the same time.
