last week's paper, but was crowded out. The last issue of the Democrat contains another article, favoring the use of lager. It only shows that, no matter how bad a habit one may have, he can manufacture an excuse for it. A man may drink and eat what he likes, providing there is no body molested or their rights interfered with, that is his own business, but when we are told, as we are by the Democrat, that lager, or any other artificial decoction, or fermentation, or distillation is healthy, even in moderate doses, it is saying that all natural laws are set aside, abrogated, and of no use to man; but to say they can be drunk without stint, and still not derange the laws of health, is stating what all experience has, thousands upon thousands of times most sadly proven to the contary to say nothing of the teaching of every man's common sense, that health depends upon the purity of the food we eat, the liquid we drink, and see sir we breathe. If these are tainted with poisonous substances, the effect upon the organism must and will be injurious, and cannot be otherwise:-

"License or No License in Atlantic County."

Under this heading the Atlantic Democrat of last week, discourses at great length, in an effort to show that it is useless to attempt to regulate the sale of intoxicating beverages by legislation. While it admits that the "Sons" and "Good Templars" bave done much good, and houes they may do more, it would have them so Ledged about that they shall accomplish nothing, but let everybody sell and use what and as much in oxicating liquors as they like. There should be no restraint, and those organizations which "should not be despised." should not dictate to those "more temperate than themselves," "what they shall or shall not drink," and go beyond their bounds in this, and in "seeking to influence the courts and the lawmakers in their behalf." Now we are sorry to see such sentiments promulgated as are contained in the article referred to, in so good a paper as the Democrat, for certainly such teaching cannot but be baleful in its influence, and the writer knows that these organigations do not influence courts or law makers in their own behalf, but in behalf of the thousands and tens of thousands whose insatiable desire for the poison that not only weakens the mind, but destroys the physical system, producing disorganization, imbecility, death, and who have not the inclination, or if they have, their will-power is too much weakened to controf the appetite, and therefore cannot refrain from "touching, tasting and hand ling the cup that intoxicates," without the assistance and protection given by these very organizations. And for the fact that they have and continue to give anch assistance, they are "despised" by the class of people who claim the right to drink and get drunk on the same plea as does the Democrat. It is in aid of this clars, who have become so disorganized and mentally and physically diseased, that tomperance people have sought the aid of courts and law makers, and upon the same ground that they have the right to regulate or prohibit any other poison precisely. If the law has the right to say that stricknine shall not be indisciminately weld, and provide a penalty for violation, hos equally the right to regulate or prohibit the sale of alcoholic poison. It has not only the right, but it is a dary, as a protection to the community. Laws are made for the protection of citizens, and there is nothing from which el isons and community need protection, more than from the cvils resulting from the use of alcoholio drinks. It has been demonstrated over and over; by duily, yea, hourly experiences, and from the host of statistics of prisons, alushouses, and from numerous other sources, that communitier, that individuals suff rmore from this one exil than all others put together. No man has any right, ind dual or moral, to do that which will be an annoyance. crouble and injury to anybody else. Yet

The following a ticle was prepared for inflames the passions and dethrones reaon. It sharpons the combative and destructive propensities. It brutalizes man, and its continuous and excessive use produces idiocy. Yet with all these facts staring us in the face, we must not, for humanity's sake, interfere with courts or law makers to stop the vending of so subtle a noison. Oh! no. There should be no restraint upon man's appetite, because some men must have something besides water to drink. But, thanks to Good Templars and Sons, and other temperance organizations, there is a host who think otherwise, whose power and influence is being felt, and whose influence will bring about just that kind of legislation that will yet class the sale of alcoholic beverage poison in the same category with strichnine and arsenic. Surely they must exert an influence when in the States of New York, Ohio, and Illino's, such laws can be made as are found on their statutebooks, making dealers responsible for all damages done by infuriated drunkards. ...

> Go ask the drunkard's suffering wife and crippled children, whether this is not just? Ask them whether law makers should not frame laws for their protection as well as for the protection of drunkardmakers. The wails of woo and tears of anguish answer, as they have done before, in tones that have shaken law makers and legislatures, till they have been compelled to hear and respond.

The greater portion of the article is an effort to show that the temperance people of the county have done a wrong in using their influence with the court, to prevent the sale of alcoholic liquois according to law, and presenting the old exploded idea that to keep a botel you must sell them, and that the demon of drunkenness cannot be removed by legislation or by removing retail licenses. We admit it is like trimming a tree, but it will soon reweal the fact, if it has not already done so, that it is useless to attempt to kill a thrifty tree by trimming its branches, and that the only method is, to lay the axe at the root of the tree, and destroy it root and branch. This will be the final result. Therefore the efforts of the "not to be despised" temperance army, of which, those of Atlantic County are but as a handful, are now marshalling their banner of Good Templars, but many other organizations, officered by men who cannot be dismayed by any form of alcohol-steeped specimens of those wearing the human body, and are easer for the tray; and such articles as the one referred to is on y calculated to put temperance people on their guard, and inspire them with greater of a streamous partisan; and then convigor and vigilance.

The dangerous idea is uttered by the Democrat that, to "give the people a good and healthy drink, -- meaning ale or beer, as if there was a better and healthier drink than water-without stint, and intemperance will soon become a rarity," and that eider contains more "intoxicating qualities than ale or beer" Now as alcohol is a product of fermentation or distillution, ale or beer must contain a certain per centage of alcohol, but cider, before fermentation, is nothing but apple juice, and one can drink to repletion without feeling any alcoholic offects, and after Any form of malt liquors contains about the same per centage of alcohol, besides the various poisons used in its manufacture to give it "stinge." or to produce the offeet that alcohol would. These poisons pure cider does not contain. Therefore we look upon such teaching as baleful in the extreme, and should be combatted by every laver of temperanea and good order. With such teaching it is no wonder there is temptation placed in the way of to debased, vitisted and unconquerable appetite for alcoholic stimulasts. What advice this, to give humanity arready suffering untold miseries from the effects of the very same liquids it recommends.

individual who values health will prefer to dispense with the use of ale or porter, rather than risk the danger that may come from these impurities, even should he have no apprehension from their intoxicating qualities." "And yet it should not be disguised that all malt liquors do contain sufficient alcohol to produce drunkennese." Another says, "They are a prolific source of disease," and the "beerbibber has little reason to exult over the dram-drinker." Dalt liquors, under which we include all kinds of porter, ale, &c., produce the worst species of drunkenness, as, in addition to the intoxicating principle, some noxious ingredients are usually added, for the purpose of preserving them, and giving them a better tuste." 'The effects of mult liquors on the body, if not so immediately rapid as those of ardent spirits, are more stupifying, as well as more lasting, and less easily removed. The most dreading checks on the whole are brought on by spirits, but drankenness from malt liquors is most suddenly

There is no liquid one can drink "without stint," without injury, except water, and there is nothing that will take its place in fulfilling the demands of the animal or vegetable organism. Water is the demand, not a decoction or noxious substances, that inflame and disorganize, and there is no place we have ever heard of or seen in our county where it cannot be obtained. In fact the county is noted for good pure water. It can be obtained from wells, or it can be gathered in cisterns, and rain water, when properly filtered, is the very best to drink, and contains no germs of fever or ague, or any other diseases, and only those who love the "charmer," make that an excuse to take some thing stronger. Such arguments are only used by those who are driven to the wall; and must have some excuse for a bad h abit, and reminds us of an oldman, who after hearing numerous individuals urge as an excuse for taking their favorite beverage, headache, cold, bot, colic, &c., said, "I want a glass of rum, not because anything is the matter with me, but because I love it."

After some philosophic analysis of the changes Which have occurred in the social strength for victory; not alone under the and industrial conditions of the population of Massachusetts since the days of Webster and his cotemporaries, the Atlantic Monthly gives this fine por raiture of Gen. Butler, who is looked upon as the fate" of Messachusetts:

Beginning as a lawyer of low reputation, he worked his way up to the position verting his reputation for party lidelity into capital, he placed it at the disnosal of the party to which he was the sworn too. Then enlisting for the war, and distinguishing himself for his administration of a captured city, he made use of this reputation to gain for himself the conround of other military or peditions, in which he succeeded in burlesquing every operation of war. At the return of peaco he got himself elected a member of Cengross, and has since then advocated every scheme of plunder which his or any one's ing muity has been able to devise, his latest performance has been the passage of an act scenning for those services the increase of his own salary. If, then, we ascertain the physiological effect of tobacco upon the life-fluid, we shall be in a fair way for deciding the question, especially if we find individual cases confirming the views thus arrived at. There is nothing stronger in medical evidence than the agreement of physiology and pathology. Dr. Richardson has so clearly explained the influence of smoking upon the blood, that it will be bast to quote his graphic account. His scientific eminence entitles his evidence."

His scientific eminence entitles his evidence to respect, and lovers of the weed must recollect that it is a smoker to whom they are listening: 'On the blood the prolonged inhalation of tobacco produces changes which are very marked in character. The fluid is thinner than is natural, and in extreme cases paler. In such instances the deficient color of the blood is communicated to the body altogether, rendering the external surface yellowish, white, and puffy. The blood-being thin, also exudes freely, and a cut-surface bleeds for a long time, and may continue to bleed inconfied in respect to density. The absorption, therefore, of the fumes of tobacco necessarily leads to rapid changes in them; they lose their round shapes, they become oval and irregular at their edges, and instead of having a mutual attraction for each other and running they lie loosely scattered before the eye, and indicate to the learned observer as clearly as though they spoke to him, and said the words, that the man from whom they were taken is physically depressed and deplorably n muscular and mental power.' Tobacco modifies the circulation in the brain, as in other portions of the body. Hence, it would be remarkable indeed if it did not exercise some influence upon the mechanism of thought." A Bit of Romance.

Mr. R. M. Boatwright, of St. Louis, has lately received intelligence that his brother Alexander, whom he supposed brother Alexander, whom he supposed to have been killed twenty-six years question the remedial properties of Dr. A Chicago. Specialty: The Treatment of Heart Disago, during the Mexican war, is alive and well, he being a resident of Goliad County, Texas. The story is thus told by the St. Louis Democrat.

"In 1846, Mr. Boatwright, while on a visit to seathern Illinois, where he formerly resided, took the war fever and Jones and J not heard of at the close of the war, he was placed on the list of the dead, and his land-warrant issued to his father, who erected a monument to his memory in the family burying ground, in Frank-lin County. Boatwright, however, did not die. He was tenderly nursed by a lady at whose house he was left, and when, after many months of suffering, he was restored to health and his wound the charms of his beautiful nurse, and he married her and settled in Vera Cruz. His letters to his relatives having miscarried, and some one informing him that his family had removed from Franklin County, he ceased writing to them. In 1849 he went to California, and afterward settled in Texas. Several years after the close of the war the family in Franklin County heard rumors that Alexander was still living, and agents were sent to California and to Mexico, but failed to learn any tidings of him, and he was given up for lost. A short time ago Mr. R. M. Boatwright happened to see a letter written by his brother to an old friend in Franklin County, carried, and some one informing him to an old friend in Franklin County, and recognizing the name, was rejoiced to find that his brother who was mourned color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, fallen hair checked, and haldness often, though not always, cared by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pusty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning grey or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injubenefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing elso can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glosey leatre, and a grateful perfume.
