EDITOR REPUBLICAN:

Dear Sirs: Stop exporting foodstuffs for thirty days. Prices will decline more than half. Tens of thousands of cars of grain, meats, potatoes, etc. on tracks waiting for export. Our government should commandeer them at a fair price so that our own people may live, and the poor working man not starve.

In the last sixty days there has been exported over eighty million bushels of wheat, nearly two millions of bushels of corn, two hundred million pounds of meats, two million three hundred thousand bushels of potatoes and other vegetables. The custom house records will show this.

The rich man and the speculator buy these foodstuffs, shipping them to Europe at an immense profit. It is surprising our government should permit such a thing.

Yours very truly, A. R. C.

COUNTY SPELLING CONTEST

The Annual County Spelling Contest will be held in the Court House at May Landing, on Saturday, March 31, 1934, at 10 A. M. and the following rules have been adopted to govern the same:

The contest shall be written and shall consist of one hundred words. Proper names shall not be used and pupils shall not be required to insert hyphens.

The words shall be such as the highest elementary grade may be expected to be familiar with.

The pronunciation shall be that sanctioned by Webster's New International Dictionary. Spelling shall be according to same authority.

The words for the contest shall be selected by someone not connected with the schools participating, and shall be dictated by someone not directly connected with any of the districts participating.

A second list of fifty words shall be prepared and shall be used in case of a tie. Further ties, if any, to be decided by order of Committee.

The several districts of the county shall be entitled to one pupil for every hundred of the enrollment of the district, or fraction thereof, as recorded for January, 1934.

Pupils shall provide their own pencils; paper will be furnished for contestants.

The person dictating shall pronounce to contestants ten or fifteen words not in the selected list before contest opens in order to familiarize pupils with his voice.

Eight or more examiners shall be appointed to examine papers of contestants; said eight or more examiners shall work in four or more groups of two each and each paper of the set allotted to each group shall be separately examined by each examiner.

A judge shall be appointed to sit in consultation with the examiners to decide any doubtful points.

The prizes for the Spelling Contest shall be as follows:

First Prize in the pupils making the highest average, except that a pupil can win first prize only once; in all succeeding contests he may "spell" for honors only.

Second Prize to pupil making second highest average.

Third Prize to pupil making third highest average.

Five prizes to the next five papers in points of average.

Prizes: First, $5 in cash; second, $2 in cash; third, $1 in cash. Five one dollar prizes for the next five papers.

Contest shall be limited to pupils of the elementary grades who have been in school during three or more months prior to the date of the contest.

Each district is to select its team in manner it sees fit, but not before March 22.

Districts wishing to enter contest shall notify Mr. D. K. Rohrbach, Executive City, N. J., giving at the same time the names of those who participate.

Contest in Rapid Calculation

"At the time of the County Spelling Contest a contest in the four fundamental operations of arithmetic shall be offered to pupils of the elementary grades, said pupils to have same qualifications as pupils entitled to enter spelling contest."

The contest shall consist of two problems in each of the four fundamental operations.

Problems in subtraction to consist of eight or nine digits each in minuend and subtrahend.

Problems in multiplication to consist of five and six digits respectively in multiplicand and three digits each in the multipliers.

Problems in addition to consist of six and seven digits respectively in the dividend and two and three digits respectively in the divisor.

All papers to be collected at the expiration of twelve minutes, and prizes awarded according to merit of the papers presented. In case of ties, the committee will provide for a contest between the tying contestants.

Prizes for fundamental operations to be same as offered in Spelling Contest.

A beautiful pennant will be awarded to the district represented by a full quota of contestants attaining the highest team average in spelling, also a similar pennant to the district attaining the highest team average in arithmetic. Pennants are to be held by the district for one year and to become the permanent property of the district if won for three consecutive years.

PRUNING FRUIT TREES

By keeping in touch with the agricultural papers and other sources of information you can learn many facts in reference to pruning. However, this knowledge cannot always be put into practice since the conditions described may not be similar to yours. Then, too, important points looked for both by the amateur and by the commercial fruit growers are oftentimes omitted.

In this article I hope to bring out a few points which will prove helpful to Atlantic county growers who are already trimming their trees or who are contemplating doing so.

The information given is not as full or as satisfactory as you would like, but I hope it may be secured by writing the Office of Farm Demonstration.

Regardless of the kind of tree we are pruning, it is always advisable to cut out all dead wood, whether the branches be large or small. Oftentimes the wood has been killed by blight, black rot, or brown rot and, if left on the tree harbors disease. Therefore, clean it out thoroughly.

The next step in trimming all varieties is to cut out all "water branches." This practice secures for the remaining branches and the fruit more light and air and makes possible more thorough work in spraying.

Another good plan is to remove side branches which might rub against another, always leaving out the one which has the least room and leaving sufficient room for the remaining branch to hang with the weight of its fruit without rubbing.

Eight or more examiners shall be appointed to examine papers of contestants; said eight or more examiners shall work in four or more groups of two each and each paper of the set allotted to each group shall be separately examined by each examiner.

A judge shall be appointed to sit in consultation with the examiners to decide any doubtful points.

The Light That Cheers

FOR the quiet circle of the reading table, there's nothing quite so cheery as an oil lamp.

A good kerosene lamp, burning a good kerosene, diffuses a soft mellow glow that is easier on the eyes, and kinder to the surroundings.

There are many good oil lamps, one of the best of which is the Rapo. There is one good kerosene about which you can always be sure—Aladdin Security Oil.

A carefully refined kerosene produced by the Standard Oil Company's (New Jersey) great refineries, it will not smoke, smell, or burn unevenly.

Ask for it by name when your grocer's boy comes for your oil can.

We recommend the following oil consuming devices as the best: Water Perfection Oil Cook Stoves and Water Heaters, Rayo Lamps and Lanterns.

HOW TO GET A HEN

As the time approaches for the hen to be taken to look into the nest, it is care to be taken that there are a few soft, downy feathers lying about the nest.

When the hen stays longer on the nest when laying at this time, and on being approached will only utter a noise, rattling her feathers, and pecking at the intruder. When it is noted that a hen sits on the nest from two to three nights in succession, and that most of the feathers are gone from her breast, which should feel hot to the hand, she is ready to lay.

Awarding of prizes.

A well-dressed youth recently stopped a fatigued newswoman and asked her:

"You think I could sell papers as easily as you do?"

The newswoman's reply was emphatic and philosophical.

EARLY HATCHING FOR SIZE

Contrary to general belief and practice, chicks do not grow or thrive as well during the warm months or hot summer days as they do earlier in the spring.

Why are there more marriages in winter than in summer? Because then men seek comforters and women seek muffs.

Why is a lame dog like a blotting pad? A lame dog is a slow pup; a blotting pad is an inclined plane, and inclined planes are slow.

Why is a severe duenna like cold cream? Because she keeps the chaps off.

Why are all nut people the latest? Because they are always longer in the shell.

What makes a sheep fit to become a member of the Jockey Club? He has "on the turf" gambles (examples) in his youth, associates with blacklegs, and is flogged at last.

A Coarsening Conundrum: When is a husband not a greyhound? When it turns a hare.

What is the difference between slapping a man and killing a hog? One is assaulting with intent to kill, and the other a killing with intent to sell.

Why is a cow's tail like a swan's bosom? Because it grows down.

Why is it absurd to expect a pretty girl to be candid? Because she can't.

Why is a sermon delivered on board a ship like a nockle? Because it's a deck oration.

EFFICIENCY.

"Since we had an efficiency man in our office a year ago, the air has been charged with the idea of doing things the best and shortest way."

confided a business girl over a luncheon table the other day.

"I heard so much about efficiency that I became interested, and read about the things women were doing in their households, so I began to find ways to shorten some of my old habits."

MURDEROUS CONUNDRUMS

"One of the most efficient little things I started to do, and which I wonder why others do not do, is to give the newswoman at our corner paper money for the week on Monday morning."

Why are your two feet like tales of the olden times? Because they are old.

SHOW INTEREST IN YOUR WORK.

Give your real interest to your work girls. If you are selling tooth brushes or face powder, learn how they are made and what there is in the manufacturing that makes one brand superior to another.

LIVE FISH IN A MINE.

Live fish have been found in the bottom of a Transvaal gold mine, in a vertical shaft 800 feet deep. They were found from 100 to 120 feet from the bottom, and up to three-quarters of a pound in weight, and must have been moribund when they fell. It is constantly dry weather, and small bullfrogs have been seen to descend themselves, and deliberately jump down the shaft, apparently in search of water. How they ever reached the bottom alive is a mystery.

JOHNNY ON THE SPOT TAKES THE DOG WATCH.

A PERILOUS SWIM

W HAD been traveling all day long, and the day was hot and the sun was shining and when we began upon the night journey across the desert in the western part of the State the air braked shrieked and with the sign of oncoming danger.

"It would be just my luck to have an accident," said the man who sat in the corner of the baggage car, "I'm afraid you're right, for I've had a bad experience twenty years ago it seems as if fate has been juggling with my life."

"What was your first experience?" asked a well-tanned soldier from Fort Leavenworth who was going home on a furlough.

The older man at first gave no sign of having heard the question, but then he looked through his hair and looked thoughtfully out of the baggage door across the endless stretch of sun-heated barrens.

"I think it was in '90," he said. "It was rather a funny affair, as I think it now, and it went to prove the old saying, 'Look before you leap.' As I say, it was a curious accident, and I guess you'll agree with me when I tell you."

"At the time I was an extra watchman of a factory just outside of Chicago, and I used to have to be on hand Sunday and holidays, and on days when they closed down either from lack of orders or because they were taking account of stock."

"The day I spent was a scorcher, nearly the hottest we had that summer, and along in the afternoon I went up on the flat roof to see if I couldn't get a touch of the loaf breeze that floated from the lake. I was nearly stifled, and I sat down in the shadow of the big, round wooden water tank that supplied the boilers. It was cooler there, but my back, all of a sudden the idea of taking a plunge into the lake came into my head, and I wondered why I hadn't thought of it before."

"I looked all round to be sure that no one could see me before I climbed the ladder that rested against the wall of the tank; at the top, I slipped and fell, and I landed on my back, nearly dead, and I was nearly dead when I fell."

"I turned my head down, took a fine dive into the tank and swam round the edge, feeling the water. The way I used to do when I was a boy."

"After a while I thought I would get up and take another swim. I looked up and saw that the sun was setting, and the tank rose up more than four feet above the surface. I made two or three efforts to leap above the water and grasp the sides, but I was too helpless. I was in a trap as tight as a rat's."

"Turning over on my back, I tried to learn an accompanying lesson, and I never acquired that which would be most useful to me in keeping myself alive—I mean floating. It was no use, my feet wouldn't stay up, and I knew I must keep on swimming until I could swim no more."

"I tried to collect my scattered senses so that I could make an intelligent fight for my life and overcome the frantic desire that seized me to make leap after leap at the edge that was so far beyond my reach. It was plain to me that no help could come before six o'clock, when the night watchman came on, and I knew I was not a good enough swimmer to last that long; already I was exhausted with the ache of my limbs."

"I began to wonder whether I could not drive a hole in the bottom of the water tank, and thus let the water out, but there was nothing in the wall of my prison that I could use as a lever."

"From that time on it became only a question of whether I could keep swimming until the tank had piled on enough for me to pull myself out. I was terribly exhausted, for I was only a fair swimmer. Every minute counted in the settlement of my fate, and it seemed to take hours of time for the surface to rise enough to be perceptible. Once when I became faint from the physical and mental strain, my head went under and I swallowed much water in my fright. At times I was sure I could not last long enough. The tank was filling up slowly."

"I reached out with my stick and thrust it in the valve-wheel. I tried to turn it. It would not budge. My heart sank, for I did not doubt that the faucet had been turned off with some force, and that, working in the water, no man had strength enough in his wrist to overcome the leverage of the faucet handle. There was only one hope left."

"By putting the stick against the side of the supply pipe and thrusting it to the very end, I hoped to break through the side of the pipe and thrust the water out. The night watchman found me there when he came up to see what was causing water to run down the sides of the building. You see, I had not thought to turn on the water, and my swimming pool had overflowed."—Youth's Companion.

NOT THE RIGHT TICKETS

Mrs. Smith hired a Chinese servant, says the Los Angeles Times, and tried to teach him how to receive calling cards. The "for" he put out the front door, and when the new servant answered her ring she gave him her card.

The next day two ladies came to visit Mrs. Smith. When they presented their cards, the alert Chinaman handed them to the back of the door, and when they returned he closed the door.

"Tickets no good; you can't come in," he said.

"Johnny," said Mrs. Smith to her son, "next week is your father's birthday. What shall we present him?"

"He'll like a pair of short pants," he said.

"Why not wear them, and he'll give them to me?"

"What type of face should you call that?" asked a person to another, in the photograph gallery.

"That," replied the other, after examining the picture closely, is a little type.

"Mr. Clansy—What do you think of my riding?"

"Teaches—You haven't got any talent for riding, but if you insist on trying to ride, you ought to practice falling off without getting hurt."

Terrific of Summer Boarding—Small boy—"Ma, ma, we've got to get away from here! It's dangerous. They're cannibals! I was just helping Ma to get away from here!"

At the kitchen table, a fat man called out, "Why, get something ready as quick as you can! My wife's here! She's here!"

"You would be sorry to lose your sister, wouldn't you, Johnny?" asked the visitor, suggestively, to the little boy who was entertaining him in the front room.

"Nope," replied Johnny. "I guess I could stand to lose my sister, but I couldn't stand to lose my Ma."

Why should our housekeeper be shunned as dangerous? Because he is an adder.

CHANGED THE TYPES

In the famous library of Wittenburg, in Hesse, is an old Bible which is greatly treasured. It appears that in that sacred volume where God told Eve that Adam shall be her master and shall rule over her the German translation is, "Und er soll dich beherrschen," which means master, but does not occur in this Bible, but instead there appears the word "narr," which means fool.

The error was caused by a quarrel between the printer and his wife in the year 1580. The wife was very jealous and in the silent watches of the night she entered the room where her husband had been setting type, and maliciously changed "herr" to "narr."

The printer was arrested after the book had been printed and the mistake discovered, but his apprentice testified that he saw the wife steal into the composing room and alter the book.

Orders were given that all the copies of the edition should be destroyed. This was done, with the exception of a single copy in the Wittenburg library.—Culled.

"The Circus." "One ticket for me, and two children's tickets for my two little sons."

"Excuse me, but your older son is certainly older than twelve."

"Oh, yes, but the little one is as much younger than twelve as the big one is older. So it's all the same."

"What type of face should you call that?" asked a person to another, in the photograph gallery.

"That," replied the other, after examining the picture closely, is a little type.

Mr. Jones arrived home late the other evening after dining well but not wisely.

He took up his hairbrush on the back of which was a mirror, in order to see if his face was very flushed. By mistake he held the brush side towards himself.

"Gracious!" he cried, "no wonder everyone stared at me. Don't I want a shave?"

YOU DON'T mean that you have recently refused him?

The question was almost identical at that moment with the friend's voice and manner and so filled with an indignity that in my common sense.

"Yes, that is just what I mean."

"But how could you? He thinks so much of you and after all these weeks of devotion."

When I first met Jim, I was not much impressed with him. I was not much of a woman, I supplemented.

"No, I was not going to say that, but she is looking at marriage too much from the exaggerated sentimental view of the matter and she is not supposed to consummate—the perpetuation of the race."

SHORTLY after this conversation I met a friend of mine, as I left, she was sitting at a table, looking up at me with a sad expression.

"You are just what I need," she said, "I have been thinking of you for some time."

"I am not sure," I replied, "I have been thinking of you for some time."

"I am not sure," I replied, "I have been thinking of you for some time."

A school inspector, testing a class in fractions, asked a boy whether given any choice he would prefer one-eighth of an orange.

The boy promptly replied that he would not take any of the oranges.

"You are really a very foolish fellow," the inspector said, "because though the suggested fraction might seem the larger just the reverse was true."

"I know, sir," said the boy, "that's why I chose it. I don't like oranges."

A stylishly-dressed man went up to a railway ticket office and asked for a "seaman's return."

"We only issue them to seamen," returned the clerk, as he rubbed his eyes, seeking approval from the station-master, who was standing by.

"Why," said the applicant, "you leather-necked, swart-faced son of a sea-cow, if you feel my star-board beam running foul of your head-board, I'll show you my jaw-saw-blee a bit, and then—"

"Give him a ticket!" shouted the station-master. "He's one!"
