O Love, when Thou art far from Me.

O Love, when thou art far away from me,
I feel that deep unfeeling pain,
Of some lone watcher standing by the sea,
Watching for ships that ne'er will come again.
Ships that went forth in youth with white sails set,
Freighted with golden hopes, or some loved face Whose memory haunts him, while with lashes wet,
Each loving word and smile he strives to trace.
And so I stand upon Life's dreary strand Waiting Hope's phantom bark with crimson sail,
Steering through purple waves unto the land,
While bubbles kiss and fade along its trail.
No bark or sail to greet the tearful sight,
Only a crimson sun and waste of sea,
And weary days fade in despair and night.
O Love, when thou art far away from me,
NORTH.

The Dying Pensioner.

A cheerless room, a woman bowed in grief,
A dying man, whose hours, alas! are brief,
And silence, save the dreary sound of rain,
That fitful beats against the window-pane,
And the sound of the moaning wind.
The sky with storm-tossed clouds is black to-night;
No moon or stars to cheer the wanderer's night;
And beating fiercely 'gainst the window-pane,
The dying man doth hear the falling rain,
That of vanished days remind.
Again he hears Potomac's murmur low,
And, as of old, with measured step, and slow,
Beneath a cold, dark sky, in storm and sleet,
He paces to and fro his lonely "beat,"
As the hours of night go by.
Again he fancies that he hears the slow
And steady tread of Green Rebel-foe;
With beating heart he peers into the night,
And strives to catch the faintest sound or sight;
Trembling, he scarce knows why.
Again he hears the thunderous cannon's roar
And volleyed musketry, as off of yore—
"Tis but the rattling of the casement frail,
In the nerve clutch of the dark night's shrieking gale,
That falls on his listening ear!
Soft, moan, ye restless winds! aye, shriek and wail!
Fit messengers are ye of grim Death, pale,
Swift fades the past, with all its memories
dear
Of joy and hope, and those of doubt and fear—
Alas! grim Death is here!
Against the windows dash, oh, falling rain!
You'll ne'er disturb his soldier-heart again.
Death claims him now who for his country gave His strength and health, that country dear to save—Aye, weep o'er him, O sky!
They'll bear him forth, and in some humble grave
They'll lay the soldier who his young life
gave.
His name will not be heralded afar;
No glory came to him from cruel war—
He homeward went to die.
Wm. H. HOPKINS.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10, 1879.

In the extra session, called by Mr. Hayes to meet on the 18th, shall continue its proceedings merely to action on the two appropriation bills which failed of passage, it will be little more than a continuation of the last session. It seems to me that the first meeting of a Democratic Congress for so many years should be made memorable by something else besides routine business, or the carrying out of what a preceding Congress had commenced. When we consider all the usurpations of a radical party, many of which are a part of the law, its extravagance, which is felt by the tax payer to-day more than ever before, and the great fraud by which one of its members occupies the White House, now seems to be the time and the occasion for an emphatic denunciation of the party and its ways, and the initiation of measures for a return to a better order of things. Democratic Congressmen cannot better spend the next few months than in convincing the people that with the change of majorities in House and Senate, there shall be a change in the character of legislation.

It is not unlikely that Mr. Hayes will veto many of these suggested acts. He now guides his political course by the stalwart portion of the radical party. But suppose he does veto them. That will only make plainer the differences between the two parties, and of which, as Senator Thurman says, is and must always be the party of the people, and the other the party of class and corporations.

Almost all the Democrats in the House, and many Republicans, have a great regard for Mr. Blackburn, the brilliant Kentucky Representative, and this feeling has shown itself in bringing to him a strong following in the coming contest for the Speakership. Mr. B. will, unless he shall withdraw, receive a flattering vote in the Democratic caucus, probably being second only to Mr. Randall. The selection of the latter is, however, almost a certainty, the gravity of the issues to come. It is suggested that Republican members of Congress will have a decided advantage over their Democratic opponents in the comparative ability of the former as a class, to do without their own salaries, should the latter persist in the programme enunciated by Mr. Beck. The salaries of members are paid from the appropriations under the legislative and executive bill. It becomes exhausted with the end of the fiscal year, June 30, and it has been made a crime by law to apply monies not specially appropriated, for any object whatsoever. While the average Congressman could and have endured the disgrace and humiliation of running the Army, Navy and U. S. Courts "on tick," it will be a wholly different matter when they are reduced to the necessity of resorting to the shavers and sharks who grow rich here in discounting Government salaries at 10 per cent. a month.

Of measures of public importance which passed and finally became laws during the session just expired, there were very few. Among them were ten regular annual appropriation bills; bill for the reduction of tax on tobacco and amendment of revenue laws; census bill; bill to aid refunding of national debt by issue of small Treasury certificates; bill to prevent the introduction of contagious and infectious diseases, and that providing for payment of pensions under the late pensioners act. Of the nearly 10,000 bills and joint resolutions introduced, covering an almost endless variety of subjects and all manner of jobs, the following of more than average importance failed in one or the other Houses or by Presidential veto:— Bill to regulate inter State commerce; Geneva Award bill; postal savings bank bill; "steamboat bill"; that to repeal specie resumption act; granting pensions to Mexican War survivors; "sugar bill"; that restricting Chinese immigration (by veto); bill to enforce eight hour law; to transfer Indian Affairs to War Department; Mississippi Levee Bill; to regulate transportation of animals by rail; Brazilian mail subsidy; authorizing railroad companies to construct and maintain telegraph lines for commercial purposes, and that to revise patent laws.

People here rejoice in the success of the wheat order forgeries, just to the extent that heartless speculators were nipped and the public benefited. MAXWELL.

Rules for Ladies Traveling Alone.

From time to time we read of mishaps meeting women traveling alone, till it sometimes seems as if it were utterly unsafe for a woman to travel alone. Still, women must travel, and very often alone, and by exercise of due caution and foresight, there is no reason why it should not be perfectly safe for them to do so. There are a few rules which, if followed it seems, would save a world of anxiety and trouble.

1. Before starting on a journey familiarize yourself with the route, and with names of good hotels at the various stopping-places.
2. Never travel with just enough money, but always carry enough to provide for any possible emergency. This will save much anxiety.
3. Wear but little jewelry, and keep the larger part of your money in some inside pocket, out of sight.
4. Always look after yourself and do not allow a stranger to procure your tickets or checks for your baggage.
5. Avoid, if possible, making changes in cars by night; but, when unavoidable, go with others. Do not become separated from the crowd.
6. Take no hacks, but go in an omnibus where there are other people. These are perfectly safe.
7. If in any doubt as to changing cars, checking baggage, etc., inquire in advance of the conductor. The conductors on our trains are always polite and willing to be of service, especially to women traveling alone.
8. Do not wait till about to make some change in train before inquiring of the conductor, for, ten to one, he will then be hurried and you will only half inform yourself.
9. Under all circumstances endeavor to retain your presence of mind. One who can do this will have no trouble traveling, and, instead of its being unwise for women to travel alone, I think it an advantage for them to make trips alone, for there are few people who are not at times obliged to do so, and experience does away with much of the possible danger in traveling.—St. Louis Spirit.

The American Charge d' Affaires in Switzerland has made an appeal for the poor people of an Alpine village, which is well known to travelers, and has recently been desolated by fire.

The name Lent is derived from a Saxon word signifying Spring, the season of the year when it occurs. The length of time of the observance has varied, first having been forty hours and then thirty-six days. Four days were added in the Ninth Century, making as at present, forty days.

TEMPERANCE.

We find in the Times, (Pictou Ont.) an excellent article on the license question, by a correspondent, which equally applies to this locality. The writer asks:—

If the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage be an evil, can the "licensing system" make it good, or can it be right to give a license to do evil? You tell us that "either the law or the carrying out of the law has proved a failure." That the authorities have not done their duty I cannot doubt, but can you, Sir, give us a reasonable assurance that these same "authorities" will be more efficient, more true to the right under the "licensing system"? Past experience has taught us that men holding a license will sell in prohibited hours under the license law, as well as under the Dunkin Act. We have for many years had a law on our statute books forbidding to sell to minors, to sell on the sabbath, etc. Yet it is a fact that while under the license law, boys under twelve years of age procured liquor and became intoxicated,—men, whose wives and children were suffering, were found with boon companions drinking at the bar of our hotels, not only in prohibited hours during the week, but also on the Sabbath. Prince Edward people do not need to be reminded that under the license act the most inhuman atrocities have been committed. Mothers have been driven in the darkness of the night to find a hiding-place in a cellar, or perchance to find shelter at a hospitable neighbor's; children thinly clad, with faces pinched and pale for want of proper food, have suffered tortures indescribable. All over our fair country are graves of suicides, of men who died from delirium tremens, whose last look was one of horror, whose last exclamation was one of despair, all under the "licensing system." The best minds of Prince Edward have three times given their verdict on the license question. That they are wearied with the heartlessness of officials I cannot doubt, but the question forces itself upon us, can it be right to license an evil? It cannot. If whisky loving men, or friends of the license law desire to have license, let them bear the guilt of being accessories to the monster evil, but let Christian temperance men register their votes against it, and thus let the responsibility rest where it rightfully belongs, with the sympathizers of the liquor traffic.

Is Licensing Evils Right.

The theory of selecting a popular evil and attempting to raise a revenue on it is wrong in principle and dangerous in practice. Evils should be suppressed, not licensed for gain. The object of Government is protection, not to the few who are willing to become partners in the evil alone, but to all its subjects. The sale of alcohol causes an incalculable amount of crime and misery; an element of destruction which, if continued to be made legal and respectable by license, must destroy the subjects of Government itself. If alcohol, sugar-coated or straight, is really necessary to the human family, then let us have it as free and cheap as possible. If, on the other hand, it is a destructive outlaw, which never has or never can be controlled either by individual or government, then let us begin at the other end—treat it as you would a wolf in the sheepfold; make its presence evidence of evil intent; wherever it is exposed for sale for drink, throw it into the gutter. Better, much better to see it run in the gutter than into men, and have the police find them in the gutter, and drag them through the streets to the calaboose to be fined and imprisoned because they are not able to stand all the poison government agents are authorized to sell them. We can never reach this evil until the man that sells liquor is locked up just as quickly as the horse thief or murderer! Selling intoxicating drinks causes nine-tenths of the murders and thefts which our courts punish. It is cheaper and better to look up the man who sells than the man who drinks.—We must do one thing or the other.—Christian Guardian.

Alcohol will clean out the inside of an inebriated. It will also clean out the inside of a pocket-book a little quicker and more thoroughly than anything else on record.—Albany Argus.

A cable despatch from Cape Town dated February 18th, states that Col. Pearson was attacked at Eekowe by a large force of Zulus, and in the conflict that ensued the latter were defeated with enormous loss, and pursued to one of the Zulu military kraals. The attitude of the native tribes is disquieting, and it is feared the chiefs have formed a league against the British forces.

Ex Congressman Morey, of Louisiana, who owns a plantation in that State, reports that the colored people are leaving the State in great numbers, and seeking that protection for life and property in other localities which is denied them in Louisiana. General Morey reports that the lawlessness of Concordia, Texas, Ouachita, and neighboring parishes, during last Fall's campaign, has given the colored laborers and voters an inquietude from which they seek relief in migration. Somebody, some of these fine days in the South, will wake up to the fact that its labor has left it, and that bulldozing isn't quite as profitable as it might be.—Evening Leader.

New Jersey Legislature.

There has been quite a lively time in the Legislature this week. There was a large number of bills to be acted on, and three sessions a day have been held for the purpose of getting through the business, in order that an adjournment could be reached on Friday, as was voted to do. The Committee on Elections of the Senate, presented its report on Tuesday, on the contested Seal of President Sewell, and decided in favor of Gen. Sewell. The contest was based on the claim of the Camden County Democratic Committee, that the naturalization papers of Gen. Sewell were false. Mr. Hobart, of the Committee, said the proceedings had actually no foundation, and that the only reason apparent for the contest was the hope of getting paid well for it. The prosecution throughout, he said, was extremely dishonorable, and as baseless as dishonorable.

The bill to defray the incidental expenses of the Legislature was submitted to the House on Tuesday, and was considered very moderate, only $6,000, less than one half the expense of the Democratic rule of last winter, which was $12,144.22.

The bill abolishing the manufacture of shoes in the State Prison, by contract, was defeated in the Senate on Thursday.

Drunken Dreams.

In a work recently published in Paris, M. Vedel studies the dreams of confirmed drunkards. Among other things he notes the frequency of the vision of animals. And it is serpents, rats, mice, etc., the inebriate sees most,—animals which, though common, are far from presenting themselves so frequently in his waking hours as, for example, dogs, or cats, or birds. Never, or very rarely, does the drunkard dream of ferocious animals. The reason of these peculiarities does not clearly appear. An explanation, suggested by a writer in Les Mondes, is this: The taking of alcohol excites all the cerebral functions, exaggerating especially those of activity. Its repeated use may cause passive congestion of the parts of the brain that govern movements. The physiological relations between these motors and the periphery of the body become altered; hence during sleep, all the impressions coming from the periphery are transformed into tickling or pricking sensations of sudden or fugitive character, which awaken in the brain of the sleeper the idea of animals which crawl or run like serpents or mice.—Journal of Chemistry.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Hard times—The iron age. A matter of course—Apple sauce. There are 107,000 Hebrews in New York. A checked career—A convict's. A man of pluck—The four-tripper. To ascertain the age of a tree—Ae il. The advance guard—A botanical ring. Flags are employed for signaling at sea. Every baker's shop has the stomachic case. William Tell was an arrow-minded man. A shot tower is usually about 180 feet high. There are about 600 newspapers in Russia. The only thing which is constant—Change. A man of push—The wheelbarrow trundler. The serpent was subtle, but the rascal was not. In the year 1829 there were but three miles of railroad in the whole United States. What is the need of being told to rise? Parsonage? The lark rises about 3,000 feet. It is safe enough to tickle a wisp un der his wing, if you do it with a very long straw. The river Yukon, in Alaska, never has been surveyed, but has been navigated for 2,000 miles. Nothing does so much for people's looks as a little interchange of the small coin of benevolence. If you see your own doctress alone, you will have little time to criticize those of your neighbor. CUMBERLAND MUTUAL Fire Insurance Comp ny.

Conducted on strictly mutual principles, offering a perfectly safe insurance for just what it may cost to pay losses and expenses. The proportion of loss to the amount insured being very small, and expenses much less than usual ally had, nothing can be offered more favorably to the insured. The cost being about ten cents on the hundred dollars per year to the insurers on ordinary risks, and from fifteen to twenty-five cents per year on hazardous properties, which is less than one third of the lowest rates charged by stock companies, on such risks—the other two-thirds taken by stock companies being a profit accruing to stockholders, or consumed in expenses of the companies.

The guarantee fund of premium notes being now Three Millions of Dollars.

If an assessment had to be made of five per cent. only, twice within the ten years for which the policy is issued, it would yet be cheaper to the members than any other insurance offered.
And that large amount of money is saved to the members and kept at home. No assessment having ever been made, being now more than thirty years, that saving would amount to more than

One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars

The Losses by Lightning.

Where the property is not set on fire, being less than one cent per year to each member, are paid without extra charge, and extended so as to cover all policies that are issued and outstanding.

Mary Ann.

I've a letter from thy sire,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann;
And he's just as mad as fire,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann!
And he says if I come nigher,
That he'll raise me ten times higher
Than the German Methodist squire,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann!
If to win thee I aspire,
Mary Ann!

Oh I dread to see his fa-hace,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann;
For I know he'll give me cha-hase,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann!
He will wait me round the room,
He will fan me with the broom;
Yes, I safely may assume,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann,
That he'll fire me out the roo-hoom,
Mary Ann!

I'm so scared I cannot sleep,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann;
For I'm struck all of a heap,
Mary Ann, Mary Ann!
He is coming after me!
Blood in both his eyes I see,
Oh, wherever shall I flee-ho?
Mary Ann, Mary Ann;
He will make it hot for me ho,
Mary Ann!

—Burlington Hawkeye.

"With all thy false I love thee still," murmured a young man, as he calmly handed his girl the artificial teeth she had succeed into his lap.—Rockland Courier.

"George, dear, don't you think its rather extravagant of you to eat butter with that delicious jam?" "No, love; economical. Some piece of bread does for both."

"The only jokes women like to read are those which reflect ridicule on men." "Yes," says an exchange, "on taking up a paper a woman invariably turns to the marriage column."—Luton Globe.

Instead of bothering about the next Presidency and worrying over the Chinese question, a Chester County man went out and captured eleven skunks in one hole, which is doing extremely well considering the times.—Norristown Herald.

The foolish man foldeth his hands, and saith,
"There is no trade, why should I advertise?"
But the wise man is not so. He whoopeth it up in the newspaper, and verily he draweth customers from afar off.—Stillewater Lumberman.

"Do you call that clothes?" said a sturdy British custom official to the woman who had sworn that there was nothing in her trunk but clothes for herself and husband, and as he spoke he pointed to six bottles of brandy. "Yes," she said, softly, "those are his night caps."

A sensitive man would rather face a loaded cannon's mouth than have a contribution box shoved under his nose when his girl is
