[For the SOUTH JERSEY REPUBLICAN.] Ma Belle Marie.

Ah Ma Belle! do you remember,
With your fair face weather
Of a crimson leaved September,
How we two once strayed together,
Where the golden sunlight fell
O'er the fields of purple heather—
How I kissed you then, Ma Belle?
And your fair face bending lower
Could not hide the tell-tale blushes:
For your cheek was like a flower,
Kissed by sunlight through the rushes—
Some pale lily in the dell.
And we listened to the thrushes,
Silent you and I, Ma Belle.

Sweet they sang and long we listened,
With your fair head on my shoulder.
On your cheek a tear-drop glistened,
And your sweet blue eyes grew bolder,
Though the trembling leaves fell.
We were young then—now we're older.
Are we happier, Ma Belle?

Years have followed one another
Since we strayed among the flowers.
You're a happy wife and mother,
And I spend the summer hours,
With the charming Miss LeDelle.
Life must have its sun and showers,
And its memories, Ma Belle.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17, 1879.

The proposition of Senator Windom last winter to provide some means to relieve the colored people in the bull dozed districts, has developed a remarkable sentiment in the South. It will be recollected that his plan contemplated the migration of those who desired to go to the Western States or Territories, there to be provided with land by the Government upon which to settle and be unmolested. Reports from all parts of the South indicate that thousands of colored families would be ready to avail themselves of such opportunities upon the assurance of protection in their rights, the larger part of them asking no assistance other than that which their friends could furnish. A great work might be done in this direction provided benevolent societies and individuals would take hold of the matter, as they undoubtedly will before long. But the most remarkable part of the affair is the enthusiasm developed towards Senator Windom, who, without knowing it, has suddenly become a candidate for the Presidency, fairly dividing the sentiment of the South with other candidates who were supposed to possess it "solid." In fact there is a good deal of talk coming from all parts of the country about his fitness for the office, not because of the idea above, but because of his great experience in public affairs, his sterling integrity, and his steadfast Republicanism: Minnesota is a growing and ambitious State, and has a chance for carrying off the next Presidency in the person of her present senior Senator.

The alarm about the return of the yellow fever has at last induced the Democratic leaders to quit quarreling among themselves and to attempt something practical to prevent that dread calamity. In accordance with experiments and recommendations of Government officers and scientists, at the Navy Yard, a bill will be introduced this week providing "that the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to contract with Mr. John Gamage for the construction of a steel refrigerating steam vessel to be used at the quarantine of such of the Gulf Ports as may be recommended by the National Board of Health to disinfect vessels and cargoes from ports suspected of infectious yellow fever." The Bourbons will demand that this be done with the consent of State authorities, for they would not even save thousands of lives in violation of that hobby, State's rights. But the bill will probably pass under the pressure of necessity.

Above and beyond every other class of men in the country, those who left all that made life worth having, and patiently endured all the deprivations and perils at the front requisite to frustrate secession, have the right to a hearing at this juncture, when by fraud, intimidation, ruffianism, and wholesale assassination, the survivors of the legions they fought have again secured control of the ship of state and are driving it headlong into the treacherous waters of State rights and mob rule. It is a good time for them to assert themselves through the ballot, for the salvation of interests they once before saved to posterity by their courage and fidelity, and which have been gradually yielded up through a mistaken magnanimity, cowardice or treachery. It is an excellent time, too, to thus rebuke and push in the rear the demagogues who have traded on the reputation and achievements of the soldiers for the past fifteen years to keep themselves in power, always meeting incipient symptoms of revolt to their continued supremacy in the party by intimations of their great services during the war, when in fact they were the home guards or if at the front at all, were there in some non-combatant capacity. No pretext has been offered urged by this class of cheap patriots as a reason for keeping them in office than this one of their overmastering devotion to the interests of the soldiers. But the complete supremacy of the ex-Confederate and dough-face in the 46th Congress bids fair to arouse an inquiry into the causes of this transfer of power, and a scrutiny that bodes no good to these false pretenders who have allowed democracy to climb over their heads into the places of supreme power while they were absorbed in selfish schemes for their own aggrandizement. Every other feeling of people here has given place, for the time being, to the interest felt in the organization of the next Congress and the struggle which it is generally believed will be inaugurated immediately thereafter, over the political legislation included in the Bourbon programme. Whether well founded or not, the feeling is prevalent that the second struggle with the disunionists is at hand. MAXWELL.

Letter from John Wanamaker.

Mr. Editor:

Today begins the third year of the Grand Depot as Dry Goods house.

Though its career has been so short, it is now almost universally acknowledged to be the favorite shopping-place of Philadelphia. Without pretensions in its building, only a simple structure covering two acres and more of Dry Goods, it relies solely on the quality and cheapness of its goods and its own original system of business to win and hold the approval and patronage of the people.

That the method of business is a good one, is proven by its introduction, in parts, here and there, by business houses throughout the city and country, who sometimes go so far as to copy word for word, our forms of guarantees, bundle papers, etc.

To all this we make no objection. Whatever others do, we always endeavor to do something better, and the people may rely on us as ever in the advance, not only with the better classes of merchandise, but in best accommodations for the people.

This we are encouraged to do by the wonderful patronage bestowed on us, for which we present here our best thanks.

The conspicuous improvements of the year will repay careful notice:

First.—A higher grade of goods throughout the house.

Second.—Better trained clerks.

Third.—Convenience in arrangement of stocks.

Fourth.—Electric bells to call cash-boys, avoiding noise and confusion. This, and the saving of time to customers, when waiting for parcels, is an unspeakable satisfaction. Customers wait on an average not over three minutes for bundles, and sometimes one minute is sufficient.

Fifth.—Every department has been improved, particularly the ribbons and millinery gloves, the shawls, the children's suits, the dress goods, the dressmaking, the boys' clothing, the lace and embroideries, the white goods.

Sixth.—The new departments are china and glassware, rugs and matting, housekeeping goods, and lunch-room for our customers only.

Many of our other departments have been enlarged and improved. Such a collection of merchandise under one roof is a wonder to many. Visitors always welcome. There are thirty-four departments. The great increase in our business this year fills us with hope that the better days have come at last.

Certain it is that goods of all kinds can hardly be cheaper than they are this Spring of 1879.

Relying upon our skill in buying goods, having the outlet to handle large quantities, and thus getting advantages in buying; determined not to be underbid in prices, nor outdone or outworked; confident that the people believe in us, and the advantages of such a place as the Grand Depot, where a very large business is economically managed under one rent and one taxation—we believe the people will sustain us, and lend us their influence to build up the best dry-goods house in the United States.

We are ready in all departments for the Spring business.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

We have at hand a copy of Martin's Civil Government, which is compiled and arranged as a Text-Book for use in the public schools. It is a book especially adapted to the use for which it is intended, being a concise yet complete explanation of the modes of state governments, going back even to colonial days and illustrating their different arrangements while living "under the King." Besides clearly setting forth the methods of state government in a manner so simple that the average child of fourteen can readily understand it, it exhaustively takes up the General Government of the United States, setting forth the rights and franchises of a citizen, and showing his duties to the State and Government. The Constitution is analyzed, and the turns and twists of law-making fully elucidated, together with the powers of Government in various directions, with the multitude of officers required to execute its behests. It is a book valuable to the young as a text-book for study, and valuable to those older as a book of reference. Published by A. S. Barnes & Co., 111 William St., New York City.

Lippincott's Magazine for April offers a list of contributions not only varied and attractive, but with subjects sympathetically treated by writers who seem keen and all to have chosen their themes from a special disposition to handle them con amore. General Strother ("Porie Crayon") takes one on a "Pilgrimage to the Shrines of Old Virginia," and pictures the old life with a loving pen and a deft pencil. Henry James, who appears for the first time in the garb of illustrations, gives us "English Vigornettes," traced with a sparkling delicacy all his own. Mary Dean depicts the "Hoosiers at Home" as only one who is herself thoroughly at home among them, and has noted all their traits with eyes keenly open and bright with humor, can do. The gorgeous "Ancient Decorative Staffs" of the churches and museums of Europe are enthusiastically described by H. M. Benson. "Mollie—the Life and the Legend," by J. Brander Matthews, gives us the fruit of careful research, enlivened by portraits and other reproductions from old engravings. The second chapter of "My Village in the South," by Annie Porter, leads us into the intimate of domestic life in Louisiana; while another lady writer gives us a delightful glimpse of home life in Brazil. "A Bit of Old Salsuma," by Professor Griffin, should be read by all lovers of bric-a-brac; and there are other short papers, especially some sparkling gossip on "Dangerous Girls," which, with the serials and short stories, will be found entertaining by everybody.

The great walking match in New York resulted in favor of Rowell. The amount of gate money taken in was about $51,000, and after deducting the expenses there will be about $4,000, which is to be divided up as follows: Rowell, $20,000; Ennis, $12,000; Harrison, $8,000; O'Leary only got $3,750 when he won the belt in England in March, 1878.

Prof. Aggar, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has prepared some very useful blanks and books for the use of the County Superintendents. There is a blank book of record of school libraries, and also of the financial condition of the several school districts. The County Superintendents have already been supplied.

William Foreman, an old Maine lawyer, died in Cherryfield a few days ago. His law words were curious. A short time before his death he asked his daughter if his feet were in the right way. She replied that they were all right. He then said: "If my feet are in the right way I will move on," and his breathing gradually ceased, without a struggle, having lived within four years of a full century.

Why Go West?

We have received the annual report of Prof. Cook, State Geologist for New Jersey, who corroborates the statement we have often made in regard to this section. Then why go west for farms when you can obtain land so near home and so convenient to the best markets in the world? He refers to the counties of South Jersey, and says: "In these counties there is an immense extent of land finely timbered with oak and pine, which can be purchased at as profitable rates as any Western or Southern lands. In these counties there are no fewer than 1,510,000 acres yet uncultivated, against 350,000 acres of improved land. On by far the larger portion of this unimproved region, which is about 100 miles long by 35 miles broad, the clearing alone would pay for the land and improvements. It is a healthy region, with a mild climate, and is near the markets of Philadelphia and New York, lying within three or four hours ride by rail, to say nothing of the many smaller cities and towns close at hand."

We have here towns and farms, fruit fields, and fine houses which speak for themselves, and show what can be done. Hammonton is one of the towns that has been made in this once wilderness, where progress has "hardly ever" been excelled by country towns west, in a farming community. Here is an excellent opportunity for those wanting farms. A visit to our section will satisfy any one of the truth of what we say.

A Berkshire papa puts it thus to his daughter's beau: "Jim, if you want Lou you can have her; but I don't want you hanging around unless you mean business. If you intend to marry her hurry up, for I can't be kept awake nights much longer."—Boston Post.

Negroes Seeking New Homes. Thousands Leaving Mississippi and Going to Kansas.

St. Louis, March 16.—The steamer Grand Tower, of the Anchor Line, arrived here this morning, having on board a cargo of five hundred negroes, emigrating from Mississippi to Kansas. This is the third lot in the last three weeks, and Captain Lenox says that the river boats are lined with crowds anxious to come, and awaiting the first opportunity.

The negroes corroborate this statement, and say that thousands will leave that State in the next few months, as the colored people will no longer submit to the oppressions and wrongs inflicted upon them there. Some are supplied with a little money, but by far the majority are almost destitute, with only sufficient means to reach their destination.

Those who were unable to proceed, about one hundred in number, were taken charge of by their colored brethren in this city, and will be held here to-morrow evening by the colored population, with the view of providing funds for this object.—Phila. Evening Leader.

CUMBERLAND MUTUAL Fire Insurance Comp ny.

BRIDGETON, N. J.
Conducted on strictly mutual principles, offering a perfectly safe insurance for just what it may cost to pay losses and expenses. The proportion of loss to the amount insured being very small, and expenses much less than usually had, nothing can be offered more favorable to the insured. The cost being about ten cents on the hundred dollars per year to the insurers on ordinary risks, and from fifteen to twenty-five cents per year on hazardous properties, which is less than one-third of the lowest rates charged by stock companies, on such risks—the other two-thirds taken by stock companies being a profit accruing to stockholders, or consumed in expenses of the companies.

The guarantee fund of premium notes being now Three Millions of Dollars.
If an assessment had to be made of five per cent. only, twice within the ten years for which the policy is issued, it would yet be cheaper to the members than any other insurance offered. And that large amount of money is saved to the members and kept at home. No assessment having ever been made, being now more than thirty years, that saving would amount to more than
One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollar
The Losses by Lightning.
Where the property is not set on fire, being less than one cent per year to each member, are paid without extra charge, and extended so as to cover all policies that are issued and outstanding.
