By Richard J. Byrnes, Esquire, a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Atlantic, in the State of New Jersey.

NOTICE is hereby given that on application to me by John D. Sanders and Abigail Sanders wife of the said John D., of the township of Egg Harbor in said County, who claims an undivided one-fifth part of all that tract of land described as being situate in Egg Harbor township, county of Atlantic, State of New Jersey, and bounded as follows:

Beginning at an old oak stump near the bottom and in Isaac Steelman's line, and runs (1st) North fifty-nine degrees west, sixty-nine chains and fifty links to Samuel Somers' corner, which is a forked black oak; thence (2nd) South thirty-five degrees west, nine chains and thirty-four links to a stake in Samuel Somers' line; (3rd) South fifty-nine degrees east, forty-one chains and forty links to a stake in the middle of the shore road; thence (4th) South forty-seven and a-half degrees west, three chains and twenty-five links along said road, to Francis Somers' line; thence (5th) South fifty-eight and a quarter degrees east, thirty chains by Francis Somers' line to a stake at the edge of the meadow; (6th) South fifty-three degrees east, forty-one chains by a line ditch, to James Somers' line; (7) North thirty-four degrees east, six chains in James Somers' line to a creek called Isaac's Creek; thence (8th) running and binding by the said Isaac's Creek, the several courses thereof to a stake standing in range with the old line fence called Isaac's line; thence (9) North fifty-nine degrees west, six chains and thirty-seven links by said fence to the oak stump and place of beginning: containing one hundred and twenty acres, the same more or less. Being the same land as was conveyed to one Joseph Ireland by Jacob Somers and wife by deed bearing date the first day of April A. D. 1846, of record in the Clerk's office of Atlantic County, in book E of Deeds, page 531, etc.

I have nominated Elias Wright, John C. Fifield, and John Ashmead, commissioners to divide the said tract of land into five shares or parts; and unless proper objections are stated to me at my office at Hammonton in said county on Tuesday the sixth day of April next the said Elias Wright, John C. Fifield and John Ashmead will then be appointed Commissioners to make partition of the said land, pursuant to an act entitled "An act for the more easy partition of lands held by the co-parceners, joint tenants and tenants in common."

Given under my hand this sixth day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

Usually a grind-tole is worn out of level, and very irregularly. This can scarcely be avoided when such a variety of tools are to be ground. The best way to repair it is to take a spade or shovel, and turning it back upwards, to grind it sharp, against the turning of the stone. This will bring the stone into the right shape, and do a useful job by sharpening the spade at the same time.

The probability that sugar will be made from sorghum with profit in the near future, makes it desirable that it should be cultivated, if only for fodder, until farmers become expert in its culture. As a fodder crop, it is one of the best that can be grown. The excessive sweetness of the stalks makes them palatable for cows, and experience has shown them to be highly productive of milk. The crop is grown as easily as corn. A light, warm, sandy soil is preferable, and any artificial fertilizer suitable for corn is better than yard manure.—Am. Agriculturist.

IMPAIRED VITALITY.—When you feel as if the vital powers were giving way, strength gone, spirits depressed, memory failing, appetite lost, exhaustion stealing over every sense and paralyzing every energy, then is the time to resort to that powerful ally of nature, Dr. Walker's Vegetable Vinegar Bitters. It soon works a glorious renovation in the system.

Statistics show that during the year 1853 the number of Germans who emigrated to the United States were 81,680; to Canada, 692; to Brazil, 1600; to the Argentine Republic, 723; to Chili, 682; to Africa, 291.

How to make a good plant protector. Take four strips, one half inch thick and one inch wide, and twelve inches long; bore a hole in one end of these, through which pass a wire, the ends of which are twisted together, but not so tightly as to prevent the opposite ends of the pieces from being spread apart from eight inches to a foot, making a fan-shaped frame. Cheap muslin is then tacked on the frame, of course spreading the pieces before doing so. The muslin should be brought down to within about two inches of the ends of the sticks, so as to allow them to be run into the ground that distance when in use. When not in use the protectors can be closed up and take but little room, and if properly cared for they will last several seasons.—American Agriculturist for April.

A London milkman began business by so thoroughly watering his milk that his customers became very indignant, and as he gradually discontinued the practice they gradually became more and more indignant, until at last just as he had begun to sell pure milk, they had him arrested and heavily fined. All of which teaches that virtue is not always its own reward.

Mrs. Virginia Corbin lost $25,000 by the Grant and Ward failure. Before General Grant died he charged his family to pay all of his debts contracted by his unfortunate connection with Ward. In obedience with his desire Mrs. Grant has sent a certified check for the sum mentioned to Mrs. Corbin, procuring the money from the publishers of her husband's book.

Brigadier-General Otis O. Howard was on Friday nominated as major general in the army, vice General Pope retired.

Not content with the geographical fact that more than half of the globe is covered with water by nature, engineers seem anxious to flood the remainder. M. de Lesseps is already letting the Atlantic Ocean into Central America, while some of his compatriots are anxious to turn the Desert of Sahara into an inland sea. Now it is proposed to irrigate the Turcoman Desert by letting a river or two into it. If this kind of thing goes on mankind will be compelled to live in junks, à la Chinois.

The State Prohibitionist Executive Committee has decided to call the State Convention this year at Newark, on May 25th. The basis of representation will be one for every twenty-five voters.

Blindfolded and alone I stand
With unknown thresholds on each hand;
The darkness deepens as I go,
Afraid to fear, afraid to hope;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go.
That doors are open, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid
By some great law unseen and still Unfathomed purpose to fulfil.
"Not as I will."

Blindfolded and alone I wait—
Loss seems too bitter, gain too late;
Too many busses in the lead,
And for far longer than I had
And for is weak and grief is strong.
And years and days so long, so long;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go.
That I am glad the good and ill
By changeless law are ordered still
"Not as I will."

"Not as I will"—the sound grows sweet
Each time my lips the words repeat.
"Not as I will" the darkness feels
More safe than light when this thought steals.

Like a whispering voice to calm and bless
All as I will," because the One
Who loves us first and best has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all His love fail—
"Not as we will."

LEONIE.

"Miss Cameron." Leonie Cameron lazily looking out of a bow window upon a garden flaming with autumn tints and sunset glow, lifted a pair of soft, dark eyes to Mrs. Tollman's face. It was an anxious face just at that moment, and being usually full of placid content, the anxiety was very apparent to Leonie. So, after her first careless glance; she straightened herself in her low chair, and said quietly, yet with every appearance of interest—

"What is the matter?" An awkward pause followed that question.

Mrs. Tollman fidgeted under the inquiring glance of the dark eyes, cleared her throat twice, and finally said, with a nervous emphasis—

"John Furber."

Miss Cameron's face seemed to freeze. It was a very beautiful face, with pride for a healing expression. Sweetness lurked in the mouth, intellect beamed from the radiant dark eyes, but pride shadowed all. It carried the small head gracefully erect, it swept the folds of the rich dresses with a regal motion. It touched the small patrician hands, and was evident in the well modulated tones of the refined voice.

"There," Mrs. Tollman said, despondingly. "I've made you mad already, and I haven't said anything."

"I am not mad," Leonie answered, and their certainly lurked a smile in her mouth at the good woman's consternation; "but you have not told me what troubles you."

"It's—John, Miss Cameron and—I then rapidly, as if the words were forced by a fear of her own ability to finish her self-appointed task, she hurried on: "He's my nephew, Miss, as you know, though his father is a rich man, very rich, and John is above his mother's place in her life. She's dead, and John was spoiled somewhere between the year she died and two years ago. I don't know where he took to bad ways. He was brought up an idler upon his father's money, and from idleness to drinking, gambling, and bad ways is an easy road. His father is a hard man and he thrust him out nearly a year ago and disbarred him. He came here for I love him, I've nothing else to love; husband and children in the graveyard, so I love John."

There was a piteous pleading in the woman's face, but Leonie's face was blank, save for an air of polite interest.

"He was most desperate when he came here, but I've coaxed him a little. But—but—O, Miss Cameron, what I want you to say. You are beautiful, rich—a lady far above me in education and position, and only staying here for country quiet. I've no right to find fault, but—don't flirt with John. He is in trouble, despondent, disbarred, and he is falling in love with you as fast as I can. I believe if you play with him he will kill himself, body and soul."

Fairly out of breath with her own earnest utterance, Mrs. Tollman paused, looking pleadingly in Leonie Cameron's face. The expression of polite interest never wavered, as that young lady said—

"If I understand you aright, you wish me to ignore your nephew. It is not so easy, as he is in your house, so I had better leave it."

"Goodness!" cried the widow, aghast at this interpretation of her words. "I never meant that. Where can you find another hearing place near here?"

"I can return to London."

"I've put my foot in it. John will never forgive me," said Mrs. Tollman, disconsolately.

But there was no sympathy in Leonie's face, and she turned away at last, perplexed and more anxious than ever. And Leonie, sinking back in her chair again, looked at the sunset clouds and variegated foliage, and thought perhaps it was time to return to London.

She had come to S—, weary with a round of fashionable life, tired of gaiety, dancing, flirting, and she had found rest and quiet under Mrs. Tollman's motherly care. She was rich, richer far than the landlady had any idea of; but she had no near relatives, only a second cousin to keep her lonely home and play propriety.

Society constituted her amateur guardian, and, lying back in her cushioned chair, in the sunset glow, she wondered indolently what society would say about John Furber. It would grant him a rare perfection of manly beauty of face and form, and forgive the evident traces of desperation, if it was only known that he was the son of a rich man, and had been educated an idler by profession. But in what holy horror it would turn away with uplifted hands when it was known that he was disbarred, with no home but a room in the house of a widowed aunt, eking out her narrow income by taking in boarders. It would smile at his biting sarcasm, his brilliant conversation, cynical sneers, if he was represented in his father's favor, but how rude these would be in a poor man.

Leonie, from thinking of society's opinion, quite unconsciously glided into considering her own. The dark-brown man had made a fair portion of her summer pleasure for three months, had been her cavalier in many country walks, drives, and sails, had quoted poetry under trees, sung in a superb baritone upon unmuururing waters, looked into her eyes on a moonlit porch, and whispered delicately worded flattery. No more than many another man had done. A beauty and rich Miss Cameron had looked upon more than one languishing suitor, and forgotten him when the amusement wearied her. Scarcely a flirt—for she encouraged no downright love-making, but a beautiful fascinating man who wounded hearts with merely careless grace.

Musing in the sunset it was impressed upon the proud heart that unconsciously she had poisoned a life that was already sinking. There were capabilities for better things than dissipation or suicide in John Furber, and she shivered as she thought he might be upon some dangerous precipice, waiting for the crack of the hand to draw him back, or its impulse to throw him over. She passed in review her host of male friends, and found none who had awakened her heart to hours of such keen pleasure as John Furber had given her. She tried to recall one mind he might be upon some dangerous precipice, waiting for the crack of the hand to draw him back, or its impulse to throw him over. She was a friend to him, and he trusted her.

"Do you remember my nephew, John Furber? He left me the day after you did, and I fretted more than a little. But he took a turn for good, heaven be thanked! He worked himself up, and to-day he writes me that he has made friends with his father again, and is to be taken partner in a commercial house. His father is to buy it, but John's earned a place, too, by hard, honest work. O, my dear, I am happier than ever I thought to be. Perhaps you've heard of the house in London that John is in. But I tire you writing about my own affairs. I would only tell you what they are, I suppose."

"I suppose you know," said Leonie, "that Tom is a detective in the police force, and he is looking for John Furber. He left me the day after you did, and I fretted more than a little. But he took a turn for good, heaven be thanked! He worked himself up, and to-day he writes me that he has made friends with his father again, and is to be taken partner in a commercial house. His father is to buy it, but John's earned a place, too, by hard, honest work. O, my dear, I am happier than ever I thought to be. Perhaps you've heard of the house in London that John is in. But I tire you writing about my own affairs. I would only tell you what they are, I suppose."

"In London," Leonie murmured; "so near all these three years, and yet never seeking me. Was I too bold? Did I drive him away by showing my heart too plainly? Well, even so, I am glad. I gave him the first start toward an honorable manhood. Remember him? Yes, Mrs. Tollman, I do remember him."

Finally, lifting her eyes with a soft, sigh, she saw him leaning against a tree opposite the low window, looking at her. A vivid flush stained her cheek as he said:

"What have you been thinking of? You have not stirred for half an hour. Only your eyes were open, I should have thought you asleep."

"Your powers of observation are marvelous," she answered, lightly, "I was dreaming."

"Of what?"

"The world in general, my world in particular. It is almost time I returned there."

She was prepared for some polite show of regret, but not for the ghastly change in his face.

She shuddered, remembering his aunt's words.

"Going away! Why, of course you would be going soon," he said, trying to speak carelessly, while his eyes hungrily devoured her face, and his white, parched lips were drawn as if in physical pain.

"I have been here three months," she said, feeling her own heart ache at his misery."

"Yes, yes! You will go certainly."

"And you," she said very gently, "you will be in the city, I presume. I should be glad to welcome you to my house."

"No," he said harshly; "I will not take such advantage of your kindness. I am a man your friends would tell you to shun, Miss Cameron—a man who has wasted his life till it is too late to take up the threads again. You do not know, perhaps, that my aunt keeps me here from charity."

"I know you have offended your father," she answered; "but you are a man scarcely 30, and it is cowardly to talk of despair at your age."

The Lord can more easily have faith in a religion that wears an old coat to church than the man in the coat can."

The dark blood mounted to his forehead as he repeated:—

"Coward! I might fight the world yet, but—" and her tone was bitter and yet strangely pathetic. "the battle is scarcely worth winning. What would I gain? Money? I do not value it. Position? I have thrown it behind me. I have played the fool and I must take a fool's wages."

She had come to S—, weary with a round of fashionable life, tired of gaiety, dancing, flirting, and she had found rest and quiet under Mrs. Tollman's motherly care. She was rich, richer far than the landlady had any idea of; but she had no near relatives, only a second cousin to keep her lonely home and play propriety.

"I will not have you say so," she said, roused by an eagerness she had never intended to betray. "You shall not uselessly throw away your life."

A hope sprang to his eyes, new there, lighting them to a dazzling radiance. "Miss Cameron—Leonie," he cried, "were there a prize to win, were one heart's hope centred upon me, I would trample down those demons of temptation. I would prove myself a man if I had any motive."

There was no mistaking the prayer in his eye, the pleading in his voice.

Only for one moment, close now to the low window, before a hand like a snowflake fell upon his shoulder, a voice low and sweet murmured low in her ear—

"Be a man for me."

She was gone before he spoke again, and he wandered off to the woods to muse upon a possibility of this new life. The next day Mrs. Tollman lost her summer boarder. Society, languidly contemplating Miss Cameron for the next three years, found her eccentric. She was gay and grave, by flashes fascinating in either mood, but she was mysteriously unapproachable.

The bravest lover found himself met at the point where friendly attentions merge into lover's devotion by a wall of ice reserve that was impassable. She never flirted, but she had the reputation of a flirt, because she was popular and admired, and remained single until she was 27. She was known to be truthful, and she had distinctly told several lady friends that she was not engaged, so there was not even the spice of romance in the gossip.

—Knew she not in those three years, but Mrs. Tollman was the recipient of various lumps of city delicacies from her, and would acknowledge the same by letter.

One of these, dated three years after the beautiful Miss Cameron left S—, after elaborately thanking that young lady for a hamper of dainties, added—

"Do you remember my nephew, John Furber? He left me the day after you did, and I fretted more than a little. But he took a turn for good, heaven be thanked! He worked himself up, and to-day he writes me that he has made friends with his father again, and is to be taken partner in a commercial house. His father is to buy it, but John's earned a place, too, by hard, honest work. O, my dear, I am happier than ever I thought to be. Perhaps you've heard of the house in London that John is in. The Lord can more easily have faith in a religion that wears an old coat to church than the man in the coat can."

for my reward, Leonie, loving you with all my heart, daring now to ask your love in return."

So society had a ripple of sensation in a fashionable wedding when John Furber married Miss Leonie Cameron.

HAMMONTON, ATLANTIC CO., N.J.

SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1886.

In the hitherto strongly temperance town of Hammonton the anti-license party only escaped with a majority of 23 at the late election. The Atlantic Review attributes this to the inconsistent action of the Prohibitionists at recent elections.

The cause of this small minority was, that the strongest temperance men of the town ignore the question, and do not vote upon it. Our council control the business, and no vote of the citizens would have any legal weight. The light vote polled on that item proves our statement.

The law declares any paper, document, or record, filed or deposited in any public office, or with any judicial or public officer, without reference to the value of the record, paper, document, or process, to be public papers, and every person who shall remove them, to steal or destroy, and the custodian, or public officer who permits it or conveys it, shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE

THE NEW-YORK TRIBUNE enters upon the new year with unimpaired health in the circulation to its subscribers, and with the greatest capacity for safe, patriotic, intelligent government. It thanks its agents and friends for their support during the last year.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE remains the principal national exponent of the arguments, doctrines and aims of the Republican party. It is a strong, active and patriotic newspaper, uncompromisingly Republican, and faithfully discharging the functions of a newspaper in America. The paper labors earnestly for a protective tariff, to develop the resources of the different States and to secure the welfare of the people. It has a comfortable house for the people, and itself pays the taxes for its own men of office in New York. For convenience of mailing, it is sent to the South ; for every practical measure in the interests of the South ; for every trial of strength in the South.

REPUBLICANS.

Every intelligent farmer, every old soldier, every worker and active man of whatever occupation ; every man who loves his country, and wants to identify himself with the party of freedom, brilliant and patriotic, and the most popular in America.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

None of us are consistent, because none of us are wholly good or wholly bad.

Some men, by repeating what others have said, fancy that they are growing wise.

Grimbling is a bad trade, and yields no profit; but patience has a golden hand.

Our glorious inspirations, which give us a gold torpid in the din of world-life.

Safety lies only in keeping quite clear of any approach to what you know to be doubtful.

Those days are lost in which we do no good. Those worse than lost, in which we do evil.

Self-denial is the most exalted pleasure, and the conquest of evil habits the most glorious triumph.

Youth may sow more tares in one year than old age can ever pull up; but only old age knows it.

There are many whose tongues might say much better if they could only earn their right to speak.

Do not advise, though even of the meanest. The gabbling of geese once preserved ancient Rome.

Things may be seen differently and differently shown, but actions are visible through motives are secret.

Good counsels observed are chains to grace, which, neglected, prove halters to strangle undutiful children.

If you want to impress in conversation, introduce your own topics; if you want to please, let your companion.

The majority shrewdly employ their time in obtaining favors, while the minority employ theirs in deserving them.

When the million applaud you, seriously ask yourself what harm you do.

There are some natures which do not know how to fail, and who never do fail in what they set themselves to accomplish.

Always meet petulance with gentleness, and perverseness with kindness. A gentle hand can lead even an elephant by a hair.

If that teleteth thee that thou art always wrong, may be deceived; but he that saith that thou art always right is surely a liar.

La Fruere says as riches and favor furnish us what we deserve ill to a fool; but nobody could find it out in his prosperity.

It is wonderful what strength and boldness of purpose and energy will come from the feeling that we are in the way of duty.

He who indulges in enmity is like one who throws stones to windward, which come back to the same place and cover him all over.

Sudden resolutions like the sudden rise of the barometer, indicate little else than the changeableness of the weather.

There is no happiness in life, there is no real life that grows out of the dispositions which conciliate or deserve a home.

It is not wisdom but ignorance, which teaches men presumption. Genius may be sometimes arrogant, but nothing is so difficult as knowledge.

To analyze the charms of flowers is like dissecting music; it is one of those things which it is far better to enjoy than to attempt to understand.

Men of prejudices like are like rats, and men's minds are like traps. Prejudices creep in easily, but it is doubtful if they ever get out.

Bashfulness is more frequently connected with good sense than we find assurance; and impudence, on the other hand, is often the effect of downright stupidity.

There is no man on earth so pure but can find something in himself to amend.

Shows the necessity—the absolute necessity—of every man minding his own business.

If a man be graceful to strangers, it shows that he is a citizen of the world and his heart is no island, cut off from other lands, but a continent that joins them.

The thoughts we have had, the pictures we have seen, can be again called back before the mind's eye, and before the heart; but the heart is not so obliging; it does not reproduce its pleasant emotions.

You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Why not make earnest efforts to confer that pleasure on others? You will find half the battle is gained if you never allow yourself to say anything gloomy.

Now-a-days men will investigate all things, award rewards, and reward Truth, and punish falsehood and error. They go forth with nets and poles to catch these; but, with spit-like tread, they gildest away from their midst.

I respect the man who knows distinctly what he wishes. The greater part of all the mischief of the world comes from the fact that men do not understand themselves and their surroundings.

They have undertaken to build a tower and spent no more labor on the foundation than would be necessary to erect a hut.

Never leave what you undertake until you can reach your arms around it, and clasp your hands on the shoulders of the party with whom you are contempnoraneous economists. But suppose the pin in her apron?"

The judgement of a child is a terrible tribunal. One can face the world and one's equals knowing that all is in one's favor, and feeling the full force of one's rights. But the secret verdict of a boy or girl, whose natural respect will prevent expressing it or even defining it to themselves—what a thing that is to encounter!

OLD-TIME SOUTHERN DUELS.

How the Beautiful Italian City Passes the Winter Season.

On one occasion McClung had an acquaintance with a fellow-passenger, a man and a woman, who were especially prone to this malady. He administered to each of them every two or three hours a teaspoonful of the following solution: Muriate of cocaine, a drachm; spirits of wine, in sufficient quantity; and water, 150.0, beginning with the administration on starting. That it had a prophylactic effect, says the Lancet, seemed clear, for in spite of very rough weather for a period of forty-eight hours both the individuals were, for the first time in their lives, free from seasickness, and enjoyed a very good appetite the whole time. Other instances of its efficacy are:

John Croker has purchased the b. & Triple Cross by Warwick, dam Zincarella.

Fitzpatrick and a lad named Ben- der will ride for the Erdeneheim stable this year.

Burglar, a full brother to Epaulet, 2:19, is owned by A. D. Sutton, of Indiana, Pa.

The Detroit people have decided that their $5000 shall be for the 2:30 class, and at Cleveland the similar purse will be either for the 2:35 or 2:40 class.

Matt Byrne, it is understood, will continue to train Pontic, Dredow, Wimber, Pontico and Damon, purchased by the Dwyer Brothers (for $50,000) at the Lorillard sale.

The highest price obtained at the sale of T. E. Morris' trotting stock, Shawnee, Ky., last week, was $1075 for the h. c. Kentucky Boy, by Dismal, dam Bourbon Girl.

Margaret (by Sultan) the stallion just purchased by Kentuckians, trotted 2:28 at Los Angeles, Cal., on February 26, won the first trotter to enter the 2:30 list in 1886.

Robert Steel has sold to the Avondale stock farm Lou Livingston, b. m., foaled 1879 by Happy Medium; Elfreda, b. m., foaled 1880 by Elmwood Medium, and Wallie, b. c., foaled 1885 by Wallie.

Highs Bros. of Canton, Ill., sold to Mr. Harvey, of Glenview, Ill., the 4-year-old colt Tom Underwood, by Dan Mace, dam by Sir Henry, and to J. Flynn, of Peoria, Ill., the 5-year-old stallion Tom Bay Underwood, by Dan Mace, dam by Sir Henry.

Frank Van Ness has in training at Lexington, Harry Wilkes, 2:15; Albert Francis, 2:20; Snooks, 2:30; a brown gelding, 5 years old, by Lumps, dam by Surplus, and a gray mare, 5 years old, by Young Jim. He will bring them to Philadelphia about May 1.

Orrin A. Hickok telegraphs from California that the challenges issued by Mr. Willey on behalf of the trotter, Alib, will be met to-morrow, so early in the morning that the horses will be sent to the racing track.

Charles the Great, a 2-year-old, by the stallion Charles, and a 3-year-old, by the stallion Charles, will be sent to the racing track.

Both cork and camphor trees grow sharp, almost every one seeks shelter. What becomes of the women of the lower middle class, it is difficult to say; probably in such weather they go to bed as early and get up as late as they can, unless it is a Sunday or festival.

McClung, the noted duelist, was born in Faquier county, whence his parents moved to Kentucky, where his brother, John, was a member of the legislature.

JOHN BULL'S
SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the patient in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and scrophulous affections.

THE INDEPENDENT

The Largest, the Ablest, the Best Religious & Literary Weekly.

The most influential religious organ in the States,—Spectator, London, Eng.

The Independent is one of the best papers in the world. Its good points are many and striking. They have only to be stated to be appreciated; and for proof of its claims, we refer you to any of the after issues of the year. Any number will show that its contents are marked by ABILITY, VARIETY, and INTEREST.—The great thinkers, the great story-writers, the great poets, men of the highest reputation in all departments of human knowledge, make up its list of contributors. Religion, philosophy, science, literature, art, travel, discoveries, stories, and all conceivable topics are embraced in the contents, and everybody, old or young, learned or unlearned, without regard to sex, employment, or condition, will find something of interest in every issue.

Comprehensiveness.—It is a religious, a literary, an educational, a story, an art, a scientific, an agricultural, a financial, and a political paper combined.

BREADTH, CANDOR, HARNETNESS.—The Independent is tied to no denomination; it is the organ of no clique or party in State or Church. It is free to discuss all questions, and to speak its mind candidly. It is not swayed by fear or favor. It is a vigorous defender of the Evangelical faith; it preaches practical righteousness, earnestly supports all moral reforms. All its columns—the advertising as well as the reading—are free from everything of doubtful or objectionable character. So invite your friends to travel with the "Independent," and know what the brightest minds are thinking of, what the ablest pens are writing about, and what the world at large is doing—he should read the Independent.

Whenever a bill designed to decrease the sale of intoxicating drinks comes up in the Legislature, every Democrat votes against it with emphasis and unanimity. And yet, the Prohibitionists propose to rally once more for the new campaign in the Democratic interest. If they were paid to assist the Democratic party, they would act just as they do now.

A horse afflicted with hydrophobia was shot in the stable of H. A. Page in South Orange on Sunday.

The New Jersey M. E. Conference has reappointed Rev. A. E. Ballard a State Temperance agent.

Next month the City of New York will be 200 years old.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria, When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria, When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria, When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,
