

Invitations Wanted.

A new brand of soap is wanted that won't get into your eyes and cause you to grope wildly about to find the towel, wearing the white like the army in Flanders.

Also an umbrella that will not be at home when you are about to leave the office in a pouring rain, and will not grip you from its place in the office when you come in wet through from home.

A long felt-want would be filled by a book-jack that will not let go of your boot at a critical time, causing it to give you a dig in the shin that momentarily makes you forget you are a decent Christian man and not a howling Zulu swinging an assegai.

A new sort of ice should be discovered that will be plentiful and cheap in summer and in the winter not so desperately set on making pedestrians stand on their shoulders and endeavor to kick the glittering constellations from the sky.

A laurel wreath is waiting for the man who invents a latch key that won't be safe in the pocket of one's other trousers when returning home about 3 A. M. from "a little social gathering, you know."

Some improvement is surely required in that miserable little animal the collar button—some sure way of effectively preventing it from dropping on the floor and rolling under the bureau when a fellow is dressing in a hurry. To be obliged to lie prone upon your stomach and perhaps break your watch crystal, while your wife sarcastically wishes to know if you are practicing lessons in swimming—all caused by such a little thing as a collar button, is indeed a sad commentary on the dullness of our inventors.

A kind of lightning that will strike the man who wants to know "if you ever heard a whist spoke; a telephone that won't spit whiz and hum when you want to talk to a pretty girl at the exchange; a professional beauty who is at least good looking, and a cheap and easy way of disposing of one's poor relations are all matters requiring the inventor's attention, to which might also be added an improved barber's brush and the brogue of New York politicians.

Many ready purchasers could be found for a reasonably certain plan to ascertain as the form of an impalpable acquaintance looms up in the distance, whether he intends to pay you the last $10 he borrowed or buttohole you for a further loan.

A safe and portable anesthetic would just now meet with ready sale to take while attending a modern lecture when the speaker gets to discoursing on the different shades of a moderate or the whiteness of the somewhat.

A new form of excise to replace the yonker and threaders that you got your black eye while chopping wood; night, perhaps, bring its author around; but for the man who constructs a patent front door that will fall on and kill the first man who tries to sell the family a sewing machine, nothing short of a marble monument will entice.

Mail-Makers in the Black Country.
About 24,000 people are engaged in this dismal part of Great Britain in making nails and rivets. It would not be so much a matter for surprise, for the lowness of the wages that they earn, if they were all men and youths who are engaged in the industry—one of the very worst paid in any part of the country. But it happens—and here arises the social degradation of the trade—that there are at least 10,000 females engaged day after day in the occupation. They are not mature women either; daughters work by the side of mothers—daughters who, in their tender years, ought to be either at home, if they have any home, or in bed, instead of working their weary arms in shaping, in the still small hours of the morning, molten iron into the form of nails for the benefit of what are called the "foggers." Here is a picture of what may be seen any night in this district—except, perhaps, Saturday nights.

In the middle of the night, a whole family at work in the production of these nails; father, mother, sons and daughters—daughters, too, very young in years, but with the sad look of premature age which is always to be noticed in the faces of child-workers. The gaiety of youth, its freshness and its gentleness, seemed to be crushed out of them. In the centre of the shed, with its rafters ceiling—a bleak and wretched building, through the walls of which the wind readily finds its way—there is a "heart," a bed of glowing coals. Probably there is a girl or woman blowing at the bellows, while the strips of iron from which the nails are made become molten. Or, to take an actual case witnessed by the writer a few nights since, close upon midnight: In one of these forges were a mother and Bar-Bathings in Winter.

Bar-bathing, or the rubbing of a person with soap or oil, is a practice which has been said to exist entirely at any time of the year. Of course, after the middle of September it would be needless to keep the bathhouse open, and then somebody comes to the aid of the winter, and the bar-bath is resorted to. The bar-bath is a wooden tub, and is used in the same way as the ordinary bath. The water is heated to a temperature of 100 degrees, and is poured over the person. The bar-bath is a very useful and pleasant method of keeping warm in winter.

The most persistent winter bather I ever saw was a boy about 16 years of age, who had been in the habit of bar-bathing for several years. He lived about a mile from the beach, and every morning from December 1 to February 28, at 8 o'clock, he would get up, wash his face, and then go to the bar-bath. He would sit in the tub for about 15 minutes, and then get up and dress. He would then go to work, and would not return until about 5 o'clock. He would then go to bed, and would not get up until the next morning. He would then go to work, and would not return until about 5 o'clock. He would then go to bed, and would not get up until the next morning.

He never bathed in the surf, but always in the smooth water inshore. He would sit in the tub for about 15 minutes, and then get up and dress. He would then go to work, and would not return until about 5 o'clock. He would then go to bed, and would not get up until the next morning. He would then go to work, and would not return until about 5 o'clock. He would then go to bed, and would not get up until the next morning.

Lieutenant Gardiner, of the United States Army, who is now stationed at Fort Buford, in Dakota Territory, and who has charge of the Government steamer "Proton," that was sent to the Arctic region last summer in search of the Greely party, is in Pittsburgh recently, and when interviewed said: "I am sorry I cannot give you a complete report, as I have been working hard all day and feel very tired. I suppose the people would like to know my opinion as to whether the Greely party are alive or not. There is not a bit of news from them, but I don't see how it can be other than that they are at Lady Franklin Bay, as they are certainly alive and well. Greely had plenty of food, and when he was in the winter, and he was stationed where he could get plenty of fuel, and I see no reason for his not being alive.

"I don't see how he could well get away from the bay, and he has no provisions on land there. In the spring, and that is the only way he could move. I don't think he would attempt to move in the winter, and when he was in the winter, and he was stationed where he could get plenty of fuel, and I see no reason for his not being alive.

Americans and Weak Eyes.

Within the past quarter of a century the number of Americans who are afflicted with weak eyes has increased 400 per cent. At that not very remote period, in country districts especially, the eye-glass was regarded as a luxury, and his wearer as a person of some importance. The business of the country has grown to immense proportions. All the superior lenses are imported from England and France, and the number of them is increasing at the rate of 60 per cent. of them are mounted in this country, the principal factories for the purpose being in Philadelphia and in Southfield, Mass. The work done in these establishments is superior to any turned out in Europe, although not one of them was in existence ten years ago. It is estimated that there are at present in the United States ten million persons who wear glasses, and the number is constantly increasing. Some very interesting statistics and general information on this subject were obtained from Mr. J. Easton, an optician and manufacturer of Brazilian bibles, who had been engaged in that business for the past twenty years.

"The large increase in your business is an argument in favor of the theory that the human race is degenerating in our times," inquired the writer.

"Not by any means," said Mr. Easton promptly. "There is nothing to be feared from the eyesight of farmers and other men who work and return with the sun in not so good a way as it was, nor that the eyes do not see as well as they used to. The great increase in the wearing of glasses is due to the fact that the number of persons who are afflicted with weak eyes is increasing. Every year brings some new cases, and the number of persons who are afflicted with weak eyes is increasing. Every year brings some new cases, and the number of persons who are afflicted with weak eyes is increasing.

"Not to the same extent. You by the population that is compelled to work under the weight is on the increase, and the number of persons who are afflicted with weak eyes is increasing. Every year brings some new cases, and the number of persons who are afflicted with weak eyes is increasing. Every year brings some new cases, and the number of persons who are afflicted with weak eyes is increasing.

Though Chartrand could not be said to be in danger from El Mahdi, it is likely to be put to serious inconvenience. The countries which the Mohammedans occupy are a vast extent of territory, they interlace with Christian countries, and across several of them lie some of the world's most important highways. Others lie in the heart of the continent, and are only valuable for their strategic position to the world's commerce. In discussing the question we have to consider the different opinions and interests among Mohammedans. They are of two kinds, the one being in favor of the present, and the other in favor of the future. The Mohammedans are of two kinds, the one being in favor of the present, and the other in favor of the future.

"There are two kinds of near-sightedness, the one being in favor of the present, and the other in favor of the future. Republican State Convention. The Republican electors of New Jersey, and all other voters, without regard to past political differences, who are in favor of electing and organizing a national labor, protecting and extending home industries, giving free popular education to the masses of the people, securing free suffrage and an honest counting of ballots, effectually protecting all human rights in every section of our common country, and who desire to promote friendly feeling and permanent harmony throughout the land by maintaining a National government pledged to those objects and principles, are requested to send delegates to a State Convention, to be held at TAYLOR HALL, in the city of Trenton, on THURSDAY, THE 17TH OF APRIL, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing four delegates at large to the Republican National Convention which will assemble at Chicago on June 1st next, for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President, to be supported at the next general election. The basis of representation under this call will be one delegate for each two hundred Republican votes cast at the last Presidential election, and one delegate for each fraction thereof exceeding one hundred votes; provided that every township, ward and precinct, legally defined as such (as in Jersey City), shall be represented by at least one delegate. Under the rules prescribed by the National Republican Committee the Republicans of each congressional district have the option of electing their delegates to the National Convention either in conventions held in the respective districts within fifteen days next prior to the meeting of the State Convention or as sub-divisions of such State Convention, but the precincts in this State having uniformly been to elect the district delegates at the same time as the delegates at large, it is recommended that this usage be adhered to, and that the delegates to the State Convention from the district delegates be elected at the same time as the delegates at large. By order of the Republican State Committee, GARRET A. HOBART, Chairman, JOHN Y. FOSTER, Secretary.

At the party last night I noticed you were a little too much like the toasts. Why were you the toasts? They were drunk!

The Washington Sentinel, the brewer's organ, speaks of 'elderly women of both sexes.' And yet they say that lager beer is not intoxicating.
