A WONDERFUL PUBLICATION.

Many suppose DEMOREST'S MONTHLY to be a fashion magazine. It is a great mistake. It undoubtedly contains the finest fashion patterns of any magazine published, but it is the case from the fact that great enterprises and persons are shown, so that each department is a guide to a magazine in itself. It is a guide to the best of everything in the world, and is a guide to the best of everything in the world. It is a guide to the best of everything in the world, and is a guide to the best of everything in the world.

the holder to the selection of ANY PATTERN illustrated in any number of the Magazine, and in ANY OF THE SIZES manufactured, each valued at from 20 cents to 30 cents, or over $3.00 worth of patterns per year, free.

HAMMONCTON ATLANTIC CO. N. J.

SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1889.

Lexington.

The following is from a letter written by Capt. W. Henry Valentine, of Lowell, Mass., to his parents in Hammoncton, under date of April 28th, 1889. It is so appropriate to this Centennial season that we asked permission to publish:

* * * You know that the 19th of April was the twenty-eighth anniversary of the passage of the sixth regiment through Baltimore. Company G, the Worcester company, was invited to visit the Stoneham company on the evening of the 18th, and partake of their hospitality in the way of an entertainment at the rink and a supper and campfire later. The programme proved too long as you may suppose, but the supper which consisted of baked beans, steamed oysters, cold meats, pies, coffee, etc., was just what the doctor ordered, and proved to be very refreshing after our siege at the rink. But as pleasant as our visit to Stoneham was, our ride the next morning to Lexington, with our entertainers, in a large capable of holding comfortably fifty people and our sight-seeing in that historic town where our ancestors first showed the British soldiers what kind of material Yankees were made of, was still more interesting. On our way we passed over the same road that Paul Revere took his memorable ride upon when carrying the news of the approach of the English soldiers. Along the road are many landmarks, in the shape of houses that were built before the revolution, also large stones, engraved with the history of the house or spot during those interesting times. At Lexington we had our dinner at the "Massachusetts House," which is the same building that was at the Continent. Previous to the dinner, however, we had plenty of time to look around.
My first visit was to the town hall, where is a painting representing the opening of the light. Major Pitcairn has just (it is supposed) ordered the rebels to throw down their arms and disperse, and being refused has ordered his men to fire; and some of our ancestors have fallen or are in the act of falling. Some of the houses seen in the painting are still standing. In the lower left are statues, paintings, and relics of "ye olden time," among others a lantern carried by Paul Revere when he carried the news. There is also a painting of him which makes him a noble looking man; also statues of Adams, Hancock, and others. There are old swords and uniforms, shoes and cock-hats, a cradle used away back before the revolution, and innumerable things that were interesting to me. But what was more interesting than all to me, was the battle ground itself, where 70 Americans dared 800 English troops.
At present it is a large green, covering, I should think, several acres, triangular in shape. In the centre is a monument containing the names of those killed on the morning of April 19th, 1775. On one side is a large boulder with these words of Capt. John Parker to his men when the enemy came in sight: "Stand your ground; don't fire unless fired upon; but if they mean war, let it begin here!" This marks the spot where the left of the brave seventy stood. Major Pitcairn rode forward a few rods (says history) and ordered: "Disperse, you rebels! throw down your arms and disperse!" and his order not being obeyed he ordered his men to fire. The result we know.

A house still stands near by which was then occupied by a family named Harrington. The owner was wounded by the enemy's first fire, but crawled toward home. As he reached the door, his wife hastened out and tried to carry him into the house, but he died in her arms. Another house (still standing) on the east side sheltered some of our men, who made no havoc among the red coats, and they in turn riddled the house with bullets. By frequent painting, and the best of care, some of the bullet holes are still to be seen.
Why the house was not burned by the enemy, is a mystery to me. On the night previous to the fight, both Hancock and Adams slept in a house a few hundred yards to the north of the common, and were aroused by Paul Revere in the early morning, as it was supposed that the enemy were to capture them if possible. There are perhaps a dozen or more of these old revolutionary houses around the town, and most of them have boards fastened to them, on which is painted the principal points of their history. It seems to me now as though I can see the whole thing, as though I was there and took part myself. My experience in the rebellion, and now looking over the very ground on which those stirring events occurred brings to me more vividly than ever before the exciting scenes of April 19th, 1775. I don't remember when I have enjoyed a reunion as I did the one at Lexington,—never, I am sure. I would like to go there again with plenty of time.

one who would like to buy a fine business lecturing tour.

☞ When you buy a twenty-dollar sewing machine, remember you are buying only a cheap cast iron machine, liable to give out at any time, and not re-adjustable.

☞ St. Mark's Church, Second Sunday after Easter, May 5th, 1889. Litany, Sermon, and Holy Communion, ☞ Major Jordan returned from up-Jersey last Friday night, after two weeks' absence, but had another engagement waiting to fit up a broader house in Gwynedd, Pa.

☞ Centennial services were held at St. Mark's Church, Tuesday morning, according to an order appointed by Bishop Scarborough for use throughout the Diocese of New Jersey.

☞ Rev. G. R. Underhill has received a call to the rectorship of St. John's Church, Brandon, Vermont. It is not yet publicly known whether the invitation will be accepted or not.

☞ The current work is beginning his season's work. Feed him on white helobene, dusted on when foliage is wet, or mixed with water and sprinkled on.
Bassett & Son sell the medicine.

☞ Two interesting games of ball, on Tuesday, between the Hammoncton and Haddonfield Clubs. In the forenoon, our home nine were defeated—11 to 6—but sustained their reputation, after a good dinner, by winning the second game in ten innings,—score, 8 to 7.

☞ We have the Guide and Friend for April. It is full of matter interesting to poultrymen and lovers of pets of all kinds. Send 25 cents to M. K.
Boyer, Hammoncton, N. J., and try it for one year.

☞ A few members of our Grand Army Post joined in the celebrations at Elizabeth and New York City, this week. They took a special train on the C. & A. road, at three o'clock Monday morning.

☞ Basket worms are abundant in some places, and should be taken care of at once. The Town Council have had their attention called to the matter, and will do all they can to abate this and other nuisances.
