HAMMONTON, N. J., SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1916

No. 20

May Day To-Day.

Weather permitting, all Hammonton will be alive to-day with flags and flowers, and people from far and near, to assist in the celebration of the day, in connection with Atlantic County's Field Day. All are urged to do their shopping early, hustle through the early-morning work, dress up in one's best, and assemble at Hammonton's beauty-spot, School Park.

Exercises will start at 9:30, sharp. Two hundred and fifty children, in appropriate colors, will form a human flag, on a grand-stand; this will be followed by singing of patriotic hymns, the crowning of May Queen (Miss Miriam Elvins); Indian Song Dance, by Camp Fire Girls; Kindergarten Folk Songs; Gymnastic Drill, by Main Road School pupils; Rose Dance; Garland Drill; Dance of the May Pole; Competitive Singing, by various schools of Atlantic County. The new Columbus Band will render selections all day.

Special officers will be on hand. The poles and pennants mark grounds on which the exercises will take place; and spectators are asked to kindly keep outside that line, —and autos and other vehicles at least ten feet back.

Refreshment stands near the grounds, and restaurants on Bellevue Ave., will cater to all appetites.

The afternoon athletic events take place at one o'clock, sharp, at Hammonton Park. A dozen jitneys will make frequent trips.

About five hundred entries have been made for the various events. Both ribbon and cup prizes will be awarded. Among the events will be dashes, relay races, jumping, chinning the bar, shot-put, three-legged race, etc. Out of town Judges will award prizes impartially.

The Park refreshment stand will also be well supplied with good things. Have such a good time to-day that you will be looking forward to another one next year.

Mayor Elvins is foreman of the Grand Jury.

Mrs. Laura Fennimore is guest of her sister, Miss May Hoyt.

Henry E. Andrews is spending the week-end in Atlantic City.

Adjourned meeting of Council next Monday evening, 7 o'clock.

Regular meeting of Volunteer Fire Company on Monday evening next.

Harry Gray has been rebuilding the Baptist Church porches and steps, this week.

Local firemen will go to Collingswood next Saturday, taking their truck with them.

Miss Dorothy Myers, of Bristol, spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Eunice Seely.

Farmers' and Merchants' Building and Loan Association meets next Tuesday evening.

Walter Cusworth, of Philadelphia, is recuperating from severe illness, at his brother's.

Hammonton will have a lung-motor soon, it having been ordered by the Board of Health on Tuesday evening.

Volunteer Fire Co. will attend "Mothers' Day" services in a body, to-morrow evening, meeting at 7:00 o'clock.

Burt Simons has permission to erect an electric sign on the corner, to advertise his new location, on Second Street.

Last Saturday evening, May 6, a happy crowd celebrated Miss Margaret Foster's birthday, at her home, on Second Street.

Bids will be received until next Monday noon, by the Water Commissioners for the sinking of an eight inch artesian well.

The P. O. S. of A. and the Boy Scouts will attend Mothers' Day services on Sunday eve, meeting at the Camp room at seven o'clock.

Little Ha-Ha Council will meet at Mrs. Green's, on Vine Street, to-morrow evening, at 7:30, to attend Mothers' Day services, by invitation.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist Church are preparing a "Wall Paper Social," to be held May 26th. The proceeds will be used to paper the parsonage.

Miss Anna L. Holland, of Hammonton, is one of this year's graduates in the "Philadelphia School for Christian Workers," and was yesterday inducted as Deaconess.

A combination fire nozzle, which protects the men from smoke and fire by its spray, turned on or off at will, stood a very satisfactory test at Volunteer Co.'s drill, on Monday evening.

The Workingmen's Loan and Building Association this month matured its twenty-ninth series, —the largest in the history of the Association, paying to the stock-holders over $41,000 in cash. The total value of the series, $54,000, 136 monthly payments of $1 each were required to mature each share worth $200.

THE LITTLE REBEL

LIST enough money to last another fortnight, how much of my resources, what a wretched predicament to be in!

Placing her elbows on the table, Maisie Wain sat her dimpled chin on the palm of her hand.

"I return home, admit defeat?" The question seemed to hold holdies, for the girl threw back her head, and an unmistakable look of triumph came over her face.

"So she returns, with a vigorous emphasis. "Fate may be against me if I will conquer. It shall not be, and I ate humble pie. I take the sunshine with the smile of depression."

A bitter sigh caused the girl to raise her eyes. Leyland's face was white and agitated, and before Maisie could draw back had gripped her by the arm.

"I cannot let you go, Miss Wain," he declared, in a tone of intense emotion. "You have entered my life, bringing a joy beyond all understanding. Maisie, I love you and want you to share our future, is going to be with you."

The torrent of hot words ceased, and Maisie remained silent. It was obvious that she was greatly distressed, and a mingled feeling of dread and regret seized Leyland's heart.

He had been blinded to the true facts by his passionate love.

Weeks of hard unceasing work, sleepless nights, strained health, had passed, but the bitter blow which had scuttled all Maisie's cherished dreams had fallen at Millborough. Here she had been struck down by a partition severely attack of influenza which had forced her to leave the country and had passed on leaving her to make the best of the dilemma.

Arriving at a point where a rustic bridge spanned the river, Maisie paused, and for a while stood gazing thoughtfully.

"How peaceful everything is!" she muttered at length, glancing round at the pretty scenery. "How unlike our own worries exist!" Her musing abruptly ceased, and a flash of comprehension suddenly caused her to dash through the bushes to meet him, and partially screened by a thick bush stood a young man. In front of him was an easel bearing an outspread canvas.

At the moment he was regarding Maisie with a serious eye, but soon saw that she was about to heat a retreat, so dropped his palette and brush and dashed towards her.

"I am sorry I have alarmed you, miss," he said. "Can I beg of you to stay on the bridge a little longer, to meet you were doing before we saw you?"

"Why do you wish me to stay?" she asked, simply.

"To make my picture worth looking at," he replied, a touch of pleading in his voice.

The artist regarded her with expectation.

"Perhaps you would like to see my picture?" he hazarded, with quiet eagerness. "I verily believe it to be the best piece of work I have ever done. In fact, I am convinced you would be pleased."

"Be seated."

"But come, judge for yourself," he added, frankly. "I have no wish to appear an egotist."

Maisie followed her companion, who was indeed a fine piece of work, and proved his author to be no novice with the brush. The artist launched forth into an enthusiastic description of the canvas and pointed to where the fresh brushstrokes mounted the sunlit waters. "There lies a fault. Sometimess required to depict that seeming emptiness. A few moments ago you can see, and now, and, suddenly." "Any great achievement in art?"

Leyland smiled. "Those pictures, against the wall there! I once had the pleasure of seeing them in a picture gallery. I have seen nothing like them, but you may imagine."

A sympathetic look came upon Maisie's face. She thought of her own uplift field of the past few months.

"I will do my best, but remember, I was unconscious of your presence before, now I know I should have been upon me. If I should cut a woman's hair, you must be excused."

"You ought," he retorted, with eyes of shrewd admiration.

With a low chuckle he turned and stepped up his mate and brother, and Maisie flushed with confusion, made her way back to the bridge.

"That attitude is simple perfect. Really, I have been most unexpectedly favored."

And many other audible comments, from time to time, reflected Maisie's care from the direction of the birds, where her companion, still busily plowing his brushes, and the time sped pleasanly.

"I have finished. Come tell me what you think of it."

There was a look of keen delight on his face, and Maisie at once made her way to the picture.

"It's superb!" he cried, with his hands clasped. "I am going to catch the picture, and then I will paint it again."

With a long sigh Leyland picked up his palette and brush, and was about to start sketching, made their way across the fields towards the church spire, showed above the trees.

YOUR GARDEN AND MINE; MAY IN THE GARDEN

By Katherine Moore Matlack

ONE fine May, with her gay apparel full of blossoms! The birds are mad with joy. Baby birds are alight with color. Butterflies are bright, their purple and white tapers so delicately sweet, are like a memory of old-fashioned days.

If you look at where they are, you see cherry and peach blossoms. I see them growing over trees, and the blossoms are like a new life. See the trees down, the matines and the flowers, for bad weather. Don't miss Maytime.

"This really is to be the end of our friendship, Miss Wain?" Speaking for myself, I sincerely hope not. Why should I be?

"I am sure that you must come to an end, Mr. Leyland," replied Maisie, keeping her eyes on the rippling water below. "To-morrow I go north, wild and free. I have a joy beyond all understanding. Maisie, I love you and want you to share our future, is going to be with you."

A bitter sigh caused the girl to raise her eyes. Leyland's face was white and agitated, and before Maisie could draw back had gripped her by the arm.

"I cannot let you go, Miss Wain," he declared, in a tone of intense emotion. "You have entered my life, bringing a joy beyond all understanding. Maisie, I love you and want you to share our future, is going to be with you."

"I am sorry if I have offended you—caused you pain," he said, with sudden contrition. "I thought you might have called me. Forgive my impulsive words."

Tears came into Maisie's eyes, but she swept them away with an angry gesture.

"I don't think you foolish in the least, but I appreciate the fact that you have done me. Please let me go."

The village was reached in silence, and John, after seeing Maisie safely to her lodgings, made his way home, bitterly懊恼ing himself for the pain he had inflicted.

Meanwhile Maisie had entered her sitting-room. Her face was pale, and her eyes held a mournful light.

"What an unfortunate little brother I am! Why does everything conspire to bring me misfortune?"

Then there was silence in May.

"The garden, the garden," she murmured at length, glancing round at the pretty scenery. "How unlike our own worries exist!" Her musing abruptly ceased, and a flash of comprehension suddenly caused her to dash through the bushes to meet him, and partially screened by a thick bush stood a young man. In front of him was an easel bearing an outspread canvas.

The succeeding days were with surprising rapidity filled—days to be forgotten. The weeks through wood and drift, the days on the river, together with the genial friendship of John Leyland, and effectually dispelled all signs of recent gloom. Friday evening had arrived, bringing with it a sense of quietude, and the girl threw back her head, and an unmistakable look of triumph came over her face.

"So she returns, with a vigorous emphasis. "Fate may be against me if I will conquer. It shall not be, and I ate humble pie. I take the sunshine with the smile of depression."

joined the guest, gentle Maisie had known at Riverside. Jim roused him with a clasp on the back.

"Come along, old man," he devoured. "I'm going in Maisie's dressing room."

They found their way to the stage-door, and were at once admitted.

All was quiet and hush-hush, dimly-lighted corridor, and Leyland picked his way with difficulty. The watchword is "marchioness." As soon as roses and other plants have come into bloom, beauty is gradually hardened off, indurated, and becomes more and more difficult to remove.

If you look at where they are, you see cherry and peach blossoms. I see them growing over trees, and the blossoms are like a new life. See the trees down, the matines and the flowers, for bad weather. Don't miss Maytime.

An Extra 34 H. P.
From a Small, Light,
Simple Motor—in the

$1375
at Detroit

Entered by Hudson
Patent No. 165650

Hudson Super-Six

NOTE that we add no size, no cylinder in the Super-Six. It is still a small, light simple Six. The size is identical with the former Hudson Six.

But our new invention—a Hudson patent—gets 76 horsepower from this Light Six. Therefore, at its best, it delivered 42 horsepower.

NEVER TAXED

This vast reserve power shows in marvelous performance. It shows in hard climbing—shows in quick acceleration.

Then adding 80 per cent to a motor's efficiency. Can you realize such much that means?

It means a motor which is never taxed. At half load it does what a motor twice its size did in former (big-size) motors.

This is due to ending motor vibration. We save the power which was lost in friction.

All Other Cars Outrived

At Sheephead Bay, under A. S. A. super-speed record, the Hudson stock car exceeded all other stock cars in these tests:

100 miles at 80 mph., 21.4 c. sec., averaging 74.67 miles per hour, with driver and passenger; 75.62 miles per hour with driver and passenger.

Standing start to 50 miles an hour in 16.2 seconds.

Driver 1550 miles at top capacity, at speed exceeding 70 miles per hour, without disconnection or wear on any part.

THE OVERLAND

Electric Control Buttons at your Finger Tips.

Naturally, you want a car that can be operated easily,—you realize that the extent of pleasure and safety in driving depends upon the ease of control.

In most cars the details of control seem to be planned with an eye for convenience in assembling the various parts.

But the Overland control was arranged just as you would arrange it if you were designing a car for your own convenience.

You control the electric magneto, the electric lights, the electric horn, with your finger tips, without bending forward.

To start the motor, you merely touch a foot button on the floor.

Cars are here on our floors for your inspection.

SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1916

As will be seen by our table of Town Council's vote on licenses, they were not granted unanimously. Mayor Elvins stated that his position was—that the people had voted license, and he would vote for those he deemed wise, reserving the privilege of voting in the negative when advisable. Mr. Nicolai adopted those as his sentiments. Mr. Holland wished to make an exception of two—those nearest to his own home. But the stand which Mr. Snall took was, in our opinion, one to be admired by every lover of home, morality, and good citizenship—he voted "No" on every application. He realized that no one has moral right to place a stumbling-block in the way of a brother, even though a slight majority of voters did, in a less enlightened age than this, vote the town wet.

To-day's May-Day Pete is a fitting celebration,—the Town of Hammonton being just fifty years old on the fifth of March last. It started at that date with 1422 inhabitants, and made slow growth for a few years—but 1776 in 1880. Its present population is probably over six thousand, and rapidly increasing. With an abundance of health air, water and fruit, and occupation for all who are not too lazy to work, the slogan, "Hammonton, the Hub of South Jersey," is indeed an appropriate one.

Among the earliest settlers in Hammonton we see the names of S. T. Towne, B. E. Henshaw, F. E. Priestley, George Elkins, Orville E. Hoyt, A. J. Smith, H. J. Montfort, D. F. Lawson, M. L. Jackson, J. C. Anderson, Samuel Anderson, J. T. French, S. E. Brown, C. F. Osgood, Wm. Bernhouse—all of whom are now living, though not all at present in Hammonton.

We very much regret that Prof. L. C. Armstrong will be transferred from Hammonton to Iggy Harbor City,—an all-around shifting of the institutions. Prof. MacDougal will come here, from Pleasantville.

We saw a strange combination on Thursday,—a horse, sadly in need of oats, and an automobile running in the wagon. Evidently, that was what the poor beast had been living on for the past fortnight.

According to the county papers, there will be no more gravel spread on county roads; but the line from Absecon to the Camden County line will be paved with permanent material.

Mother's Day to-morrow. Wear a white carnation in memory of mother; or, if she is living, spend an hour or two with her.

Chairman Nicolai was right: all graveling of roads should be done now, that it may have time to settle and roll down hard.

No, gentlemen, we believe that Sunday should be a quiet day. All public celebrations should be postponed until Monday.

House cleaning time: oh, joy!

PULPIT TOPICS

SABBATH SCHOOL LESSON.	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC.
For May 11, 1916. THE KEY TO THE TREASURY. The Text was from Acts 10: 32 & 37.	For May 11, 1916. WHO WE TURN TO THE GENTILES. Acts 13: 43, 45.

The chief business of the church is for a light of the Gentiles, that thou set forth in the world spoken by Christ to His first disciples. Paul said, "I have given you a commandment, that ye love one another." In every direction she is acting as if every other activity but this were what Christ had given us. If Paul did any work in Perga or any of the places between Perga and Antioch, he did it in secret, so that the Gentiles would know that the ideal Everything ought to be subordinated to that. But the sad thing is that in many instances it has almost entirely lost sight of the time that he left Jerusalem under orders from Christ to go and preach to the Gentiles and the time when Barabbas was released for love of God. (John 4: 5-11.)

"God is love and he that abideth in love abideth in God, and God abideth in him." (1 John 4: 16.)

It may be that for some reason the Holy Spirit did not permit Paul to preach in these places. We know that he wanted to preach in Jerusalem, but was forbidden, and afterwards he even regretted that he had tried to go to Antioch.

It may be that for some reason the Holy Spirit did not permit Paul to go to Asia Minor, and of Asia Minor or in India. (See Acts 22: 17-21 and 16: 6, 7.)

What Christ told Peter, the experienced fisherman, with, perhaps, the best heart and soul on the Sea of Galilee after a night's toiling without catching anything down his net, with the promise that he would get them drunks of fishes, his whole previous training and experience told him all such a possibility was contrary to all he had been accustomed to believe yet, except the words which are a short rebuke to most of us who follow at Thy word I will let down the net." And the success that followed is the argument for all time in favor of my contention that loyalty to Christ is the greatest sacrifice.

With fish are enough funds are found. "Go then to the sea and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shall find a piece of money; that take and give to a poor man. And he did." The catch of that fish by Peter at the command of Christ and the finding of the money, is a picture of the way in which God would have His church financed to-day. Great expenses are being made for the propagation of our spiritual seed. Those who are most deeply conscious of their indebtedness to Christ give largely to the work of the church. That that has been so in the past you will find if you study the history of the church in the New Testament. Those early disciples seemed to feel more than we do how much they owed to Christ; therefore, we are not greatly surprised when we read: "And all that believed were baptized and sold their possessions and goods and parted them as every man had need." (Acts 2: 41.)

In this lesson we have a specimen of Paul's style when speaking to Jews in Chian 17: 22-23 we have a specimen of Paul's style in speaking to Greeks. The difference between these two addresses shows how careful Paul was indeed in his method of presenting the gospel to different classes of his audience. He tried to soften the sharp and clear prejudices by opening his address in such a way as to show that he was interested in things in which they were interested. But no matter what Paul did, he always got along well with Jews and the reasoning of the Lord Jesus and great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them that backed him.

Examine those scriptures in the light of the fact that the church which manifested such a spirit of self-sacrifice was a church devoted to the work of bringing men to Christ. Its devotion to its chief business and loyalty to its Lord was rewarded by the greatest gifts of the spirit.

I am not pleading here for the method which they adopted, although it might be the greatest blessing of all we did in an age which is characterized by the narrowness and pride of man, and his lack of sympathy which expressed itself in this way the spirit which is seen in that lesson is not in itself an evil spirit. I hold it for the Devil can but a steward of the resources which God has given him. He can but a steward of the world. The Devil has been known to have to day. And rather than get back to the place where it was born and meet the conditions upon which it was born, he has moved away to a part of the earth, far off, to help the church militant in her fight with the world the flesh and the devil. What a sorry spectacle is presented to the world we are equipped and unprepared. What can we expect? We must be prepared to suffer for the sake of the truth. But the Jews were very angry, although Jesus himself was a Jew and the men who proclaimed His messiahship were the ones that are the world, the key to the treasury, the means to the salvation of the world.

He who did this to the business of bringing men to Christ, returning to be turned aside for any reason under heaven, and I am convinced of the same will surprise me. I am bleeding abund-

Paul's first talk at Antioch seems to have interested the Jews to whom he was addressed very much and they were not slow to accept his message.

The third demand in our texts is that we shall bear fruit. We must put out all our talents out at interest. We must make ourselves useful by not only trying to be Christians but also by being useful to others.

What other commands has Jesus left for us? Turn to the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. 5: 6, 7). In that sermon He set forth the principles and ideals of His own life, as the standard for those who follow.

EPICURE LEAGUE TOPIC.

JUST ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

For May 11, 1916.
MOTHER

It is interesting to note that the putting of reverence for mother on a level with reverence for father in the Epicurean League of City, the greatest city in the world, is more than a革新 than a revolution has "The Standard" watched and proclaimed the growth of this noble organization and carried the news of its merits all over the country.

The members of the large club have made many changes, remarkable changes for the better, but none can be compared with the mutation of the present spring. We have now more and better hotels than ever before, and more and better amanuenses and means of entertaining guests at trade.

The hotels are not excused for elegance by any in the world. Indeed, the sharp rap at the door. The servants will run all day. The elegant movement of the servers, but the one change that is most noticeable is that the influence of the Bible has always been on the side of the women.
