[For the South Jersey Republican.] Only One of Many.

I cut and fit, and baste and stitch,
From early morn till twelve at night,
Then drop to sleep and in my dreams
Again go over the bitter fight—
The fight for bread, 'till I wish I were dead;
For why should I live when hope has fled?
And this is the life I lead each day,
From morn 'till morn, year in, year out.
So sometimes I cry and sometimes rave,
'Till even the justice of God I doubt;
Yes, this is the way I live each day—
Work, work, while I starve, for a pittance of pay!
Great God! and was it for this I came
Into the world, a slave to be?
And he for whom I toil and starve
In a palace lives most sumptuously.
While his daughters fair the garments wear
The stitches of which my life-blood bears!
From my dreary room I sometimes gaze
Into the blue and beautiful sky,
And then I think of the country fair,
And for its charms I yearn and sigh;
But, oh, how vain, though I rack my brain,
God only knows who knows my pain!
Oh Christ, look down and pity me,
And help me bear my heavy load;
The way is dark, and, oh, so drear,
That leadeth to thy blest abode!—
Oh, pity me—oh, pity me,
Dear Christ, and lead me safe to thee!

"Morley's" Letter From New York.

[FROM OUR OWN REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]
New York, May 21, 1879.

THE COMING EXHIBITION.

Energetic measures continue in preparation for the coming exhibition. After an extensive canvassing and several partial settlements upon a time, the date has been fixed positively for 1883. This is, next to 1776, the memorable year in our early history, and nothing could be more fitting than its selection for a great national jubilee of a practical kind. On the 19th of April, 1783, the close of hostilities was officially proclaimed to Washington's army, then at Newburgh. May 13th, the Society of the Cincinnati was formed, with Washington as President, and Gen. Knox as Secretary. On June 8th, Washington issued that famous letter to the Governors of States, in which he pleaded so eloquently for "An indissoluble union of the states under one federal head; a sacred regard to public justice; the adoption of a proper peace establishment; and the forgetting of local prejudices and politics," adding, "these are the pillars on which the glorious fabric of our independence and national character must be supported." Who can read these lines without asking: "Was Washington also a prophet that he should look down the vista of a century to come and see so clearly the precise dangers that should menace his beloved country at its close?" There is more truth and statesmanship in that single letter than the country has had from all its political teachers for fifty years. The celebration of 1883 will do much for our country's future peace and welfare, if it does no more than turn public attention to this prophetic utterance of its great founder. September 3d, the fiscal treaty of peace was signed; November 3d, the army was disbanded; November 25th, the British troops evacuated New-York and Washington formally entered it, and on the 23d of December resigned his commission into the hands of Congress. Richly freighted as the year 1783 is with hallowed memories and associations, the people will find some means of celebrating these events, and a great international convention and jubilee will inevitably give a force, completeness and unity to these observances which could not otherwise be attained.

THE LIGHT BRIGADE OUTDOOR.

Can you stand another war incident? It is not as grand a scene as Gottenburgh, nor perhaps as big with results; but the many ringing responses to my last (which I confess was offered in your New York correspondence with many misgivings) have somehow stirred the ghosts of many thrilling memories which have chased each other through my mind till silence is impossible. Few Americans ever dreamed that among the dark and gloomy pines of Chancellorsville was enacted a tragedy worthier to live in epic verse than the famous charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava. Only once in all the histories of the war have I seen it mentioned, and to-night my thoughts brood over the nameless graves of those unseemly heroes till my soul cries out in protest against the favoritisms of historic fame, and for these humble heroes I must crave the meager justice of a passing mention in the ears of their countrymen.

It was the night Stonewall Jackson received his death wound. He had completely surprised Howard's Eleventh Corps and was driving them in the wildest confusion along towards the centre of our line. In their flight they passed through a woods, just beyond which, in a clearing, lay four of Sickles' batteries, and a flying artillery battery and the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry of Gen. Pleasanton's. The batteries were not in position but were "parked" waiting orders. Through their lines dashed the panic-stricken fugitives, hotly pursued by Jackson's immense corps of over twenty thousand men. The field became a sight for a painter. Infantry, artillery, ambulances, pack mules, negroes and stragglers, the worst scared men I ever looked upon, came tearing like mad past us. The batteries had no common commander, but each captain excitedly asked for himself, "Battery—left wheel. Fire to the rear. In Battery: Cassions press your pieces, trot—march!" and a frightened bugler caught only the word "trot," and sounded it and no more. It rang out clear above the woe than Babel; many took it for a general stampede signal, and across the field, and down the hill, and across a stone wall near its foot, in that famous ravine dashed several caissons and a few guns. "Fix prolongs to fire retiring." "With canister—load." On came the fugitives, nearer and nearer through the sounding woods came that Confederate yell, and the rush of Stonewall Jackson's victorious legions. Sickles was almost a mile away, pushing through the woods with his splendid corps. Not a Federal musket was in sight except what the Eleventh corps men were carrying to the rear as rapidly as their legs could take them. We must make our fight against those tremendous odds alone—five batteries of us and three hundred cavalrymen—not over six hundred men, all told. On swept twenty thousand Confederates, and we were not yet ready to fight. Our line was confusion worse confounded; guns stood pointing whither, ever the excited cannon ears listed, and at the first fire one half of us would blow the other half into eternity, and Stonewall Jackson would have Hooker's headquarters, and double up our whole army—a cheering prospect that! The sun had set behind the thicketing gloom, rushed Jackson's troops. Suddenly out in front of our guns rode the familiar form of General Pleasanton. Above the din rang his shrill voice: "Align these pieces!" It was a work of many minutes, and Stonewall was now just upon us. Time! Oh for ten minutes time! How to get it? There sat Major Keenan with his three hundred heros. Here was the sacrifice, which, if every man were a patriot like Arnold Winkelried, would give us those precious minutes. Gen. Pleasanton said quickly to Keenan, "Major, you must charge in those woods with your regiment, and hold the enemy till I can get these guns into position. You must do it at all cost." Pleasanton says: "It was just the same as saying 'you must be killed,' but with a smile he replied, 'General, I will do it.'" Oh what a sight was that! Would to God some American Tennyson might see that sight, and lift these humble names into immortality! Three hundred troopers, with deep set spurs and flashing sabres, rushed at the throats of twenty thousand armed men. Nobody had blundered, but somebody must die to save the army—that was all! So mad a blow did they strike in Jackson's very teeth that he stopped his onward rush to reform his lines—surely there must be more coming—no single regiment could be charging his army single-handed—and when no more bold riders came, then it was that brave Keenan died, at the head of his regiment, and whose pintoos perished with their feet in the stirrups! But they did not die in vain. Ten minutes purchased at that fearful price to us were costlier still to Jackson. When he came on again, flesh and blood could not stand up before our terrific canister fire. His veterans quailed before that stroke of death. He rode up to rectify his line, was mistaken in the gathering darkness for one of our cavalrymen, and shot by his own men. Our "three times three" had hardly ceased to ring when Sickles, who had dashed ahead of his veterans hurrying to our support, rode up among our guns and called out: "You're done nobly, boys! Stand firm, and in ten minutes I'll have 15,000 men here who don't know any thing but fight." He was good as his word, and quickly the old Third Corps filed in behind the guns and Jackson's famous corps had received its first dolent. Three hundred men made Thermopylae live through the centuries; six hundred at Balaklava rode to fame in the sight of the whole world; but the cynicism of America has left to slumber in unknown graves beneath the pine cones of Chancellorsville, a little band of men whose deed was as great and worthy of renown as those whose fame poets have sung through all ages. MORLEY.

If in this season of banana skins on bedside-walks, any flag should pull down the American man—shoot away from that spot.—N. Y. Herald.

A man who married a scold witnessed the play of "Taming of the Shrew" the other night for the first time. He went home full of inward chuckles, and mentally resolved that he would also embark in the "taming" business before the sun again gilded the western horizon. So the next morning he procured a cart-whip and when his wife ordered him to take his feet off the mantle-piece, he snapped the whip defiantly, smashed a coffee pot, a sugar bowl, a doll's pitcher and two plates, and—and that was all. He says Shakespeare: so was a colossal fraud, and he is glad he is dead.—Norritown Herald.

Notice!

In the face of everything, Wanamaker & Brown increased their great clothing business last year at Oak Hall nearly a quarter of a million dollars, and for 1879 the new plans will make the house more popular and increase the business much more. Eighteen years in the people's service at the old corner of Sixth and Market has taught us how to do the business well.

Notice!

Whatever may be said, no house in the United States sells anything like so much clothing at retail as Oak Hall, and no house in Philadelphia sells more than a quarter as many goods as Mr. Wanamaker sells in clothing alone. Doing this large business shows the people's regard for our goods, and enables us to buy cheaply and sell at small profits.

Notice!

New patterns have been made this year and new styles introduced through Mr. Robert C. Ogden (formerly partner of the famous firm of Devlin & Co., New York), who is now associated with Oak Hall, and will give his whole energies and valuable experience to improving the manufacture of our Boys' and Men's Clothing. We do not buy clothing like the dealers, but make it expressly for our own sales. The Spring stock is splendid, and no other make of goods, so far, have as much merit, or are sold as cheaply.

Notice!

Impressions have been erroneously given to the effect that Mr. John Wanamaker, who founded Oak Hall, is not interested in the old store, and that it does not have his attention; on the contrary, his ownership of it remains unchanged, and he has lost none of his love for it. Every day finds him supervising all its departments. Mr. William H. Wanamaker spends his entire time on the Oak Hall business.

A VISIT THIS SPRING PARTICULARLY INVITED.

CUMBERLAND MUTUAL

Fire Insurance Company.

BRIDGETON, N. J.

Conducted on strictly mutual principles, offering a perfectly safe insurance for just what it may cost to pay losses and expenses. The proportion of loss to the amount insured being very small, and expenses much less than usually had, nothing can be offered more favorable to the insured. The cost being about ten cents on the hundred dollars per year to the insurers on ordinary risks, and from fifteen to twenty-five cents per year on hazardous properties, which is less than one-third of the lowest rates charged by stock companies, on such risks—the other two-thirds taken by stock companies being a profit accruing to stockholders, or consumed in expenses of the companies.

The guarantee fund of premium notes being now Three Millions of Dollars.

If an assessment had to be made of five per cent. only, twice within the ten years for which the policy is issued, it would yet be cheaper to the members than any other insurance offered. And that large amount of money is saved to the members and kept at home. No assessment having ever been made, being now more than thirty years, that saving would amount to more than

One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars

The Losses by Lightning.

Where the property is not set on fire, being less than one cent per year to each member, are paid without extra charge, and extended so as to cover all policies that are issued and outstanding.
