THE FOURTH Of July Spirit!

THERE isn't a better time than right now to ask yourself the question—Am I doing my part?

Though very few of us will be called upon to actively bear arms, all of us must serve in this great cause. Each one has a duty to perform. The farmer can do his part in the field. The women can serve in the home,—knitting socks, rolling bandages, and doing a world of other things for the comfort of our soldiers and sailors.

This great Democracy is one hundred and forty-one years old. By this year "The Fourth" is more than a celebration of that fact; it has a new meaning and a deeper significance.

It isn't only a tribute to the courage of the men and women who made these United States possible, but it is a promise to their memory that, in Mr. Lincoln's words, this "Government of the People, by the People, and for the People, shall not perish from the Earth."

Let us each do our part to fulfil this obligation.

YOUR GARDEN AND MINE—PAEONIES AND IRIS

By Katharine Moore Matlock

The gorgeous peony is queen of May, June and July. All through the summer months the offerings of the garden have increased in beauty and now the peony is at its height. How exquisite the well-bred peony of today! Like a huge ball of shining silk, delicate of color, delicious of perfume, an established bush three or four years old will bear thirty or more blossoms. And such colors! Pure white, spotted with carmine, lemon, cream tinged with pink, pink with base of pale yellow, rose pink, silver pink, salmon pink, scarlet, vivid crimson, dark maroon, and wonderful purple-and-coral reds!

The plants themselves grow to the small bushes and give shade to the garden borders. When blooming time is over, they furnish a green background for lilies, gladioli and other slender growing plants. One should never try to set out plants that are blooming—I think you know that and know, too, that the proper peony planting time. And for iris, also. Then why are they being discussed now? do that you may make plans for future planting when you can see the very varieties we talk of and many more.

If there are no gardens near you that are full of peonies, visit the big nurseries during the coming week. Make notes or leave orders for Fall delivery. You will learn more in a few hours than I could tell you in the course of several garden talks. The nursery-visiting habit is a splendid, entertaining and profitable.

Planting Care. First—As to the peonies that are already in your garden. When in bloom, all plants want plenty of water, the soil kept loose about them and, if convenient, a watering of liquid manure. After the bloom is over, the true of iris, peonies, roses and, indeed, nearly all flowering plants. Do not wet the blossoms themselves as water spots are unsightly and prevent them from blooming.

Second—Peony plants are so borne down by the stem and number of their flowers that they must have some support or the lovely blossoms will trail in the dirt. A found wire peony support is best; next best, four stakes with heavy raffia run twice around, several inches apart.

Third—Don't be worried about the ants that often come on the buds. They can be brushed off any flower you wish to touch and they do no harm; they are after the sweet, sticky honey that exudes from the buds. I wish all "bugs" did as little harm to garden flowers.

Fourth—Occasionally, only once in my experience, a black rat attacks a plant, decaying the stems right at the ground and turning the leaves black. The "big rat" plant does not get to the ground and burn the leaves, as the disease is contagious. This rat may be seen in the plant and the surrounding soil with liquid blood in its mouth. Dig it up and burn it, rather than risk the rest of your peonies. This disease is usually due to excessive manure. Fortunately, as I said, it is infrequent.

Fifth—Bleached buds; well, I wish I never had any myself, but I do, occasionally, and they are very annoying. There is nothing to do about them; they just won't open, and that's all there is about it this year. Try to prevent it next year. What is the cause? A retarding growth, usually a dry spell during the French influence on our English connotations and "big" may literally be the cry of the French standard. You have all seen it, no doubt. The word "big" has been added to many words to our Anglo-Saxon tongue. Some we have kept intact both as to spelling and pronunciation. Others have undergone such change as to be almost unrecognizable. The Elizabethan flower-de-luce, see your Shakespeare.

There are many irises, the German being the commonest and best known, the Japanese (Kameter) the most exquisite, though I sigh for the orchid-like English, as I say it. The German is the broad-leaved iris of May (in most varieties) and the Japanese is known by its taller, slimmer, more graceful (all Japanese) and its larger, stiffer, more refined flowers. There is a fine English iris, a native of the mountains, water iris (pseudo-acorus or water flag). There are tiny elegant and rock garden irises, such as the blue variety, and a hybrid sort grown to height in the gap in blooming time.

The peonies, they are to be studied now, noted, ordered, and set out in September. Here is a list to help you in your choice.

German Iris (Now in Bloom). All through May the German irises have been blooming. The common purple is lovely flower, in among the earliest. I want you to be sure to have some of the delicate blossoms of these almost transient beauties, and grow some white, rose, blue, lavender and yellow. But be sure to have those lovely yellow. Be sure to have some of the white and blue varieties.

Japanese Iris (Now in Bloom). The Japanese irises are the most beautiful of all. They are to be studied now, noted, ordered, and set out in September. Here is a list to help you in your choice.

English Iris (Now in Bloom). The English irises are the most beautiful of all. They are to be studied now, noted, ordered, and set out in September. Here is a list to help you in your choice.

Other Varieties. There are many other varieties of irises and peonies. Some are more common than others, but all are beautiful in their own way. It is worth the effort to try some of the newer varieties.

THE OLD-FASHIONED "PINEY." HOSE WHO used to love the big "piney" of Grandmother's garden should look for them under the head of peonies, officinally. Large double fragrant flowers in rose pink (red) and deep, glowing crimson (rubra). As this class blooms two weeks earlier than the usual garden peonies, it is certainly well to plant some. Two peonies come shortly after. So if you want five or six weeks' peony bloom, grow all the three classes.

There is one other peony valuable for its distinctive "leaves," having fern-shaped leaves. This is Paeonia tenuifolia Flore Pleno. All that long name means "double fern-leaved peony." The flowers are like great, sweet Jack roses and it is a very fine peony.

As to prices, most seeds and plants have advanced this year, along with everything else. But if you can get good peonies at all to be had for $2 a dozen, others $2 and more, so they seem to be fast the year. If you want them for September planting, make your lists now while they are still blooming and send your order in if once. Then an advance in Fall prices would not touch you.

Irish or Flax-leaved Iris. This, rainbow, flax-leaved, iris flower, is a flower not only to love for its beauty, but to reverence because it is the national emblem, of that noble country, France.

There are many irises, commonly called flag irises in this country, because the blossom is held high like a standard of battle over the sword-like foliage. Or it may be a survival of the Norman conquest, taking Marie for a sign. At dinner that night Winthrop was absent. It was not a cordial meal. His parents seemed still to be offended at the attitude of the marriage, even though Winthrop had got the twenty-fourth.

Winthrop didn't get in until midnight. Carl was waiting and lit him come in. He had a deeper feeling of depression as he wondered, "But where's Marie? She had! All girls liked Winthrop."

Carl ate breakfast hastily in the morning and got away before Winthrop was up. He didn't want to hear any settled announcement. And he hurried past the Olson place. He didn't want to see Marie if he couldn't help it. But he couldn't help it. She was standing down at the well, and was going straight up.

NE of the problems that often confronts us in arranging the furniture of a small room is how to group it in relation to the doors and windows so that we will get the full benefit of each. Especially is this different in a bedroom where we must handle quite the largest piece of furniture in the house—the bed.

While light and ventilation are prime requisites never to be sacrificed for effects, we often close up an unnecessary door or a window that looks out on an unpleasant view, and make it a pleasing background for the bed.

One treatment is that suggested in the illustration. The room has a number of windows. One could be spared. It was covered with a piece of figured silk tacked on in place, making a background for the headboard. A strip of the same material was cut out and mounted in panels on a linen bedcover, that gave the bed group a pleasing unity.

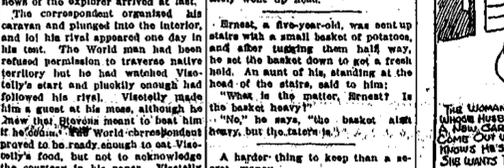

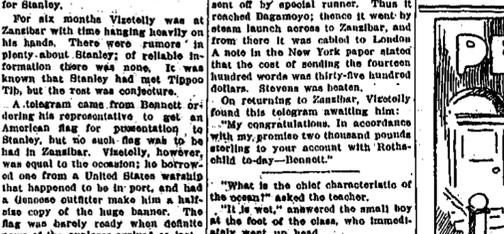

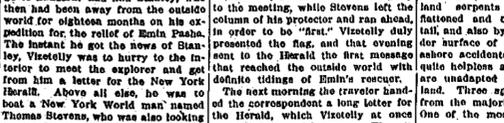

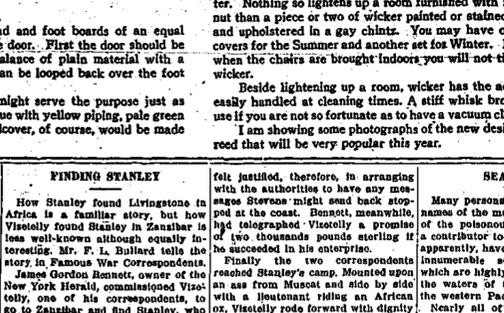

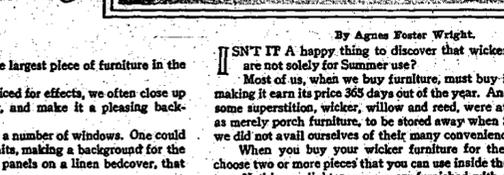

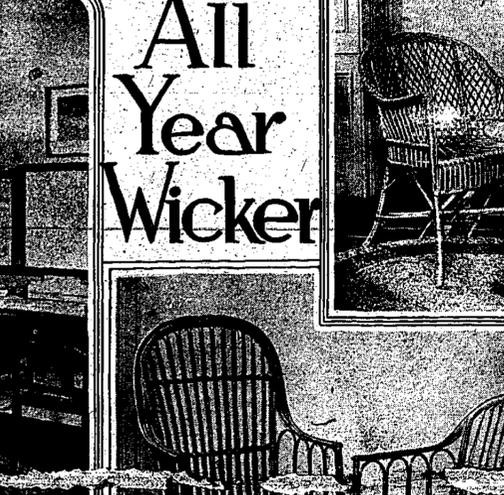

Rep, velvet or plain figured silk would also serve for this purpose. Another treatment is especially effective where the bed has head and foot boards of an equal height, or is a couch or day bed. It must stand lengthwise against the door. First the door should be draped and covered with silk or plain linen. Over the top trim fit a valance of plain material with a fringe or piping of contrasting shade. From this drop curtains that can be looped back over the foot and head boards, giving the effect of a canopy bed.

In this case the best material to use is silk, although a plain rep might serve the purpose just as well. The colors for background, valance and curtains could be pale blue with yellow piping, pale green with mauve piping or warm yellow with pale green edging. The bedcover, of course, would be made of the same material and piped in the same fashion.

By Agnes Foster Wright.

WANT IT A happy thing to discover that wicker, willow and reed are not solely for Summer use.

Most of us, when we buy furniture, must buy it with the view to making it earn its price 365 days out of the year. And because, through some superstition, wicker, willow and reed, were at first looked upon as merely porch furniture, to be stored away when Summer was over, we did not avail ourselves of their many conveniences.

All Year Wicker

Hot Water Night and Day

There was no gas in the town, and for some reason or other, the water-front in the kitchen range did not heat the water in the tank at all successfully. Perhaps it was through some accident. Nevertheless, the fact remained that a good hot bath was a rare luxury, unless one carried water upstairs.

A nearby hardware man suggested the remedy: "Get a water-cock! Your tub, canoe and you will have hot water by the barrel night-and-day!"

This was done in a reasonable expense, and the health and temper of the family improved correspondingly.

EVERY TEN THINGS?

Mashed potatoes with creamed codfish, served with lettuce with oil and vinegar or tomato juice dressing, and crabapples and cheese or peanut butter sandwiches. Cow peas boiled with pork and cornmeal with boiled rice, served with a green vegetable or a vegetable salad and maple syrup or date sandwiches. Beans baked with pork or bacon, served with Boston brown bread and butter and tart apple sauce and cookies.

SAVE BOTTLES

It will be well to save every bottle you can get hold of, particularly wide-necked ones. For putting up fruit preserves, jellies, marmalades, and pickles, having bottles is highly important as they threaten to be a shortage of regular jars and preserving jars.

To Make Beef Tea.

Prep a piece of steak from fat and skin, and cut into small pieces. Place the cut-up meat in a pot and pour over it a pint of cold water and add a little salt. Cover the pot and place on the stove. Simmer for three or four hours. Let the fat cool and skim off the fat. Heat as required for use.

THE PRODIGAL ELDEST

It is usually the youngest son who is the prodigal and favored. In the Holmes family it was the oldest, Winthrop, a tall, handsome young fellow, who had given his parents cause for worry nearly every week since he was born, and whom they admired inordinately. For he was clever to brilliancy. Even Carl, his secretary, stoutly boasted, admitted that, and would have been ashamed to be jealous.

Winthrop never worked much. He had position after position. But his cleverness was of that unlicked sort which forbids a man to play away his steadily day after day. The world to such presents too many brilliant openings. Winthrop was too contented with his present because amenable to discipline. At times the Holmes finances were taxed to keep him going. His father had a small estate, but the real estate holdings and father and mother counted in order that Winthrop need not. Carl, who plugged along year after year out at a shipping job, was along on his own salary as best he could and even willingly spared some of it for Winthrop.

And, contrary to precedent, it was the louty old father who was more indulgent to the spendthrift, than was the mother. For Mrs. Holmes sometimes told Winthrop that he ought to be a little ashamed of himself to be so selfish, as, for instance, when he required $200 for a trip to see about a position (which didn't materialize) and Carl therefore was denied the usual Christmas presents because such outlay scraped the family purse.

There were no girls in the family—just the two boys. Perhaps that was one reason that Winthrop was indulged. He had a certain girlishness of feature. Carl, though five years younger, felt far older—tall a certain sense of being protector. He, too, laughed over the idea that he missed the Christmas presents. And he, as well as his mother felt a certain pride in the obvious fact that the girls of the town liked Winthrop far better than was good for their peace of mind. He could pick and choose among them. Carl grinned over it sometimes. Some of the other fellows were disgruntled. Winthrop didn't seem to be aware of it—at least not in a concealed way. He said rather loftily that girls were a nuisance, though of course they were nice to dance with and take sleigh riding. He showed little preference as to whom he took, except that he always took a pretty one. There were a good many pretty ones in town. Carl usually tagged along with Marie Olson, who lived next door. Her name was a mistake. It should have been plain Mary to match her quiet, sensible, brown eyes and smooth, neat hair. Strangers smiled at the incongruity when they heard her called "Marie," and wondered what her mother was thinking of.

Carl was fond of Marie. So very fond that he used to wish Winthrop would fall in love with her and marry her. She would be an excellent wife—good, hard and capable. But he did not mention it. Winthrop would certainly laugh. And he rather resented Marie's laughing at him. Then there came an epidemic of scarlet fever. Marie's three little brothers succumbed. The three little girls were left, and the same time was a pathetic sight—so pathetic that Marie's third sick mother succumbed too and gladly lay down beside them.

That left Marie and her father alone. There was an "alone" which she married the young man, and so to (naming the bride)—for the dowry of a certain amount, to which the bridegroom replied: "I accept from her marriage to myself, take her under my care, and bid myself to protect her and yet who are present here, as they are, looking on at the ceremony, after which all present again receive the 'Patience.'"

The young man has to wait for his bright eyes or ten days after the contract ceremony, during which time he sends her presents for her trousseau, which is generally brought with the dowry.

A lawyer was questioning a Scottish witness. "You affirm that when this happened you were going home to a meal," he said. "Let us be quite certain on this point, because it is a very important matter. Did you go to tell me what meal it was you were going home to?"

"You would like to see what meal I was going home to?" asked the Scot. "Yes, I should like to know," replied the lawyer impatiently. "Well, then, he replied the witness, 'the meal I was going home to was just oatmeal!'"

SATURDAY, JUNE 30, 1917

The Home Guards did some excellent drilling last Friday and Tuesday evenings. On the latter evening, one squad carried rifles, a product of the Manual Training Department. But there is one thing noticeable—and that is, a score of unpatriotic fellows have fallen out. Whether they are getting cold feet, and fear they will have to replace the State Guard, or go to France; or whether seeds of discontent have been sown by enemies of our country, we will not endeavor to say; but one thing is sure—we must "get together," "pull together," "think together," or sure as guns we'll all "die together," and that before we are ready. Where is that red blood of which we boast?

In our next issue we shall publish the "New Jersey Workmen's Compensation Law," which becomes operative July 4th, and affects every employer in the state. According to this statute, every person, firm, or corporation employing labor will have to carry compensation insurance, or otherwise prove to the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance that they are financially capable of carrying their risk; not only for the present, but perpetually. Be sure to secure a copy of next week's Republican, and clip out the article for reference.

There is an urgent need, by the War Relief, of old sheets, pillow cases, and old muslin generally. Many people do not realize the value of old cloth, and consequently sell it to the rag-man for a song. Gather up what you have, wash it thoroughly, and let the ladies have it at once. The need is, as we said before, very urgent.

...the new paper... Pleasant Mills out of "saw-logs" while the process is not yet down to perfection, the product is much stronger than anything else that we can buy. Mr. McKeone has the right idea, and his friends here wish him success.

We hope that in case any of our residents is so wasteful as to burn up valuable powder, next Wednesday, care will be exercised to prevent a conflagration.

Take the day off, next Wednesday, and spend it at home with the family, and at the prettiest lake in South Jersey.

Good! the drinking fountain is on again. We didn't hear of any frozen water pipes this week. When you write a letter, tell how well the town is looking. It is as important as the stamp. It doesn't sound as though it would be a very sane Fourth. How about saving of powder for the Allies? We have a limited number of those Government pamphlets to which we referred last week, which treat on causing and preserving; and they are free for the asking. Of course, next Wednesday will be a legal holiday. Banking will be attended to the day before; the post-office windows will be closed from ten to half-past five, and stores close about nine o'clock, if opened at all. This office will probably receive visitors until noon.

THE PILOT Lighting & cooking plant has outlived a hundred rivals.

Since we built and sold the first "Pilot" more than one hundred "light plants" of other kinds have lived their day. Not one has been able to stand a side-by-side test. In this struggle between light plants the "Pilot" has won—solely through comparison of one plant with another. Whenever good neighbors have contrasted the services rendered by any other plant with the services rendered by the "Pilot"—the advantages of the latter have been clearly apparent. So—today the "Pilot" outsells all its rivals—and last year saw a larger increase in the number of "Pilot" users than ever before during any similar period. This constant growth in popularity has forced us to build the two largest light plant factories in the world. From these factories we ship direct to the purchaser all "Pilot" Plants sold by our salaried representatives, located in every district. The "Pilot" Carbide Lighting and Cooking Plant operates itself—it does its work automatically and silently without the aid of a noisy engine or other complicated apparatus. The "Pilot" is operated with carbide—a gas producing stone, as easy and safe to store and handle as common coal. This carbide is now furnished to over a million users, through warehouses located in every rural district of the United States. Filled with carbide the "Pilot" runs itself—and instead of daily care it needs attention only at infrequent intervals—weeks or months apart—in

THE AMERICAN FOR CHRIST

THE YOUNG MAN WHO REJECTED LOVE

Second—Pilate had the personality of Jesus to influence him against giving Christ into the hands of his enemies. Never before had such a character been taken before Pilate as a prisoner. He stood there quiet and calm, silent amidst all this accusation, and those who had not been disappointed from deafness, or who had not been healed from lameness, or from whom a devil had not been cast out, or who were not there because their relatives and their friends who know of the wonders done by Jesus, Pilate and heard of the name of Christ, he is no doubt that he was curious to see this man, about whom the people talked so much. He had the miracle of Jesus to encourage him to do the right and manly thing.

HIS WEDDING DAY

A SHOOTING STORY

With nesting boxes. After trying various kinds and materials, she found that the best was made of wire mesh, with a floor of wood. The boxes should be placed in a quiet place, and the birds should be kept in a clean, well-ventilated house.

framed Lucy's flower-like face most attractively. Over the bonnet she elaborated her sister's black lace veil, tied her hair, and so long that it fell almost to her feet. A rich tinted recently returned from Europe had brought the veil to Mrs. Thorne, and it was the envy of Lucy's heart.

Lucy looked at some notes in her hand. "Mrs. Merrick's Jimmy is worse, and she'd like to see you wrap up on your shoulder, I suppose! Mrs. Thorne's Edgy is growing troublesome, and she thinks you might advise her as to the best way to manage him. Miss Molly Hubbard wants to borrow your shawl pattern, and Miss Milly your recipe for green tomato pickle; and—there, you shall not be bothered when you are sick, anyway. I won't tell you another thing!"

Speedway Test That Further
Proves Hudson Endurance

Four Cars Entered—Four Finished. First Place in the Free-for-all; Second, Seventh and Ninth Places for Hudson Super-Six Specials in the 250-Mile Cincinnati Memorial Day Sweepstakes Races.

The Hudson Super-Six was not designed for racing.

The aim was a car that would endure. All its records were made in tests that prove endurance.

With some changes a stock car is made suitable for racing, capable of out-performing most cars that are specially built for racing. The reason for this is the patented Super-Six motor which minimizes vibration.

Hudson Super-Sixes are entered in almost every race this year. Except for the championship events, they are entered by men whose only interest is to win prizes. These men are given no inducement to drive Hudsons, save the advantage the Super-Six gives in its performance. No price concessions are made them. They must make their cars suitable for racing at their own expense.

Ira Vail was the first driver to recognize the racing possibilities of the Super-Six. He bought a dealer's demonstrating car, removed the touring body, shortened the frame to racing length, mounted a racing body and in the 150-mile Metropolitan trophy race at Sheepshead Bay won second place and a $2,000 prize.

Now other drivers are doing what Vail did. There could be no stronger endorsement of the Hudson Super-Six. These experts want cars they can rely upon in the hardest trials known to the automobile.

You are not urged to buy a Hudson Super-Six to use as a race car. We know you will never want it for such purpose. You won't ever care to drive it at the rate of 102 1/2 miles an hour, or to equal its record of 1,819 miles in 24 hours, both officially made by a stock chassis. You will never care to make a round trip across America in 10 days and 21 hours, the record excelling each way that of any other car, made by a Super-Six seven-passenger touring car.

But that the car you own is capable of such service is proof that there is no task you will impose that it is not more than equal to.

That is why the Hudson Super-Six is the largest selling fine car with a price above $1,200. Can any car offer greater proof of its endurance?

There are eight body types of the Hudson Super-Six chassis. Each car is in keeping with what you would expect to find on a chassis that has shown such convincing proof of its endurance.
