Our World's Fair Letter.

CHICAGO, JULY 8, 1893.

With waving flags, terrific fireworks, and an attendance of over 300,000, Liberty Bell day at the Fair (the Fourth) will go down in history as the greatest day of the Exposition, thus far, and probably of the entire period. Chicago, the World's Fair directors, and Philadelphia's Liberty bell were the happy combination that produced the happy effect.

By eight o'clock thousands of people were wandering about the park, and until night, the gate-keepers had a busy time. At two o'clock, 210,000 people had passed the turnstiles, breaking all previous records, even at this early hour.

At half past ten o'clock the American exhibitors formed a procession on the east side of the Manufactures building, and marched to the Plaza, between the terminal station and the Administration building, where the ceremonies were to take place, a grand stand having been erected there for the speaker, orchestra and chorus.

At 11:30 the Plaza was packed with a good-natured crowd pushing and struggling to get within hearing distance of the speakers.

The opening prayer was made by Dr. Canfield, of Chicago. Director General Davis next introduced Vice President Stevenson, who delivered the opening address. An immense chorus of nearly 1000 trained voices rendered "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," the multitude joining in the chorus. Mayor Harrison made an eloquent address, finishing a few seconds before twelve. A hush of expectation then went over the assemblage as each second brought nearer the time when the electric button should be touched that would set the Columbian Liberty bell at Troy, N. Y., to pealing, while Mrs. Stafford would hoist the original Paul Jones flag. The button is touched, the flag is raised, the pent-up enthusiasm breaks forth in prolonged cheer upon cheer, all the bells in the great city are pealing out their glad acclaim, steam whistles, too, of all the boats and machines in the vicinity give voice to their approval of America's greatest day. Rev. Hampton B. Carson, of Philadelphia, made the closing address.

"Where is the Liberty bell?" "Well, how do you get to the Pennsylvania building?" were the questions asked on every hand on being assured that old "Liberty" had not and would not leave the Pennsylvania building. The scene at the building was enough to make glad the heart of every loyal American. From early in the morning eager crowds surrounded the precious relic. Soon the crowds increased to such an extent that the people moved about the bell with difficulty, many getting only a glimpse. The building was taxed to its uttermost capacity. Usually only two policemen guard the bell, but to-day it required four to manage the surging multitude. The bell was decorated with potted calladiums from the greenhouse of Geo. W. Childs, while a band of roses encircled it twice.

Enthusiasm about the old bell rose to the highest pitch when the original Paul Jones flag was thrown over its frame and W. O. McDonald made an impromptu speech on the flag and the bell. At this time the building was a mass of living beings and the doors had to be closed to prevent those on the inside from being crushed. After the address the De Moss family quartette sang a patriotic selection of their own composition entitled "Philadelphia Beloved." They sang well, and a burst of applause followed each verse.

People gazed tenderly, lovingly and almost sacredly, and showed as scarcely ever before, how dearly Americans love and almost idolize this most inspiring old relic. It did not cease to be the central attraction at the Fair until, as usual, the building was closed at 6 o'clock P. M.

Toward the close of the day each individual of the three hundred thousand who had gathered to witness the great pyrotechnic display, was looking for a vantage point from which to view the grand scene. While the band was discoursing patriotic music a great shout rent the air, every face was turned skyward, and the eyes of the wondering multitude beheld a balloon high in the air, from which was suspended the American flag in fire. As it floated gracefully over placid waters of the Lake, one of the powerful search lights was thrown upon it, and there outlined against a dark background of clouds, presented a picture that will not soon be forgotten.

"WHEN MY SHIP COMES IN,"

"When my ship comes in," runs the young man's song.
"What brave things shall I do With the strength of my wealth and the courage of my youth!"

He walks and waits "neath storm and sun
By the shore of his life's broad sea,
And the days of his youth are quickly run.
Yet never a sail does he see."

"My ship has gone down!" in sober strain
Sings the man, and to duty turns.
He forgets the ship in his toil and pain,
And no longer his youth he burns.

Yet again by the shore he stands gazed and
With the course of his years well gazed,
And gazing out on the deep—beyond,
A dim ship landward bends!

No banner she flies, no spears are borne
From her decks as she nears the land;
Silent with sail and oar she looms and looms,
She is safe at last by the strand.

And lo! To the man's old age has brought
Not the treasure he thought to win,
But honor, content and love—life wrought,
And he cries, "Has my ship come in?"

MALCOLM'S IDEAL

BY ANNA EHRLICH.

"She must be tall, Bab; she must be graceful as a willow branch, with eyes of midnight darkness, classic features, hair like the raven's wing."

Bab, who was stirring cake, looked up at the door window and saw that the old-fashioned kitchen from the garden beyond. Seated there, swinging one foot idly, sat Malcolm Hoyt, describing the future Mrs. Malcolm.

"Well!" Barbara said, presently, after a glance from the tall boyish figure and frank, handsome face, to a small mirror that reflected her own face, and the true suburn, and numerous freckles.

"Well! Tall, dark, classically featured. Any other perfection?"

"Accomplished, of course. She must dance like a sylph, sing like a nightingale, draw, play on the piano."

"Make cake!" suggested Bab, vigorously stirring her batter.

"Why, no—Mrs. Hoyt will not need to make cake, I think. Not but what it is very jolly to have a wife addled hastily," but Mrs. Clark might resent any invasion of her especial department.

"Yes, I see," said Bab, dryly. "You don't want your wife to be a kitchen-maid."

Malcolm blushed furiously; he was not quite twenty-one, and had not yet gotten used to blush.

"I don't mean that at all," he said, and then laughing heartily, added, "don't you think we are talking considerable nonsense, Bab?"

"I don't know," said Bab, slowly. "You say your wife is to be a kitchen-maid, and as you are in quest of a wife, you might as well have some idea of what you would prefer."

"Just like choosing a necktie," said Malcolm, "though I think I should feel more interest in the necktie. By the way, what is your ideal, Bab?"

"I haven't considered," said Bab, bending her face low over the pan into which she was pouring the cake.

"Nonsense!" said Malcolm, reverting to his ideal of a wife.

"As if a girl ever lived to be eighteen without an ideal."

"Then Bab violated the truth with a daring voice, and bright eyes, for she said:

"My ideal doesn't sit on kitchen window-sills and talk nonsense, at any rate."

"You don't know what he might do under sufficient provocation," said Malcolm, testily.

"I don't know," said Bab, looking at him with a merry twinkle in her eyes.

"Stephen Hays!" cried Bab, scornfully, and lifted the pan to carry it to the room beyond, where the fire was lighted in summer.

Her heart was swelling with indignation. She was only a farmer's daughter, she told herself, and Malcolm Hoyt was heir to a magnificent estate and fortune, college bred, and could marry to aristocratic circles. But, she thought, she could look at Stephen Hays, her father's "help," a man who could not read! It was insulting, little Barbara thought, and she took an unreasonably long time to adjust the cakepan on the oven-bars, and pile on fresh wood in the stove.

"Good-bye!" shouted a cheery voice, presently. "I'm off to the postoffice, but I'm coming to tea to eat some of that cake."

"I've a great mind to scorch it," thought Bab, spitefully. "I would too, if it wasn't father's favorite."

"I do believe the girl is fond of Steve," thought Malcolm, as he saw the girl stoop to the saddle. "She blushed as red as a poppy when I mentioned him. I suppose it would be with my father call a suitable match, but she's a thousand times too good for him. Why, she's as good a Latin scholar as half our college fellows, and she sings so beautifully, that it is a burning shame she has had nothing but a concertino to accompany her voice." Then his reverie took another turn, and he thought: "Wonder if father is ill!"

It was the nineteenth century, and Malcolm was an only child, denied no indulgence from his infancy, but he never thought of his father as the "governor" or the "old man." His mother was but a memory, for when he was five years old, her golden-haired beauty was hidden under the daisies. He liked to think his great, blue eyes and curly blond hair were like those in his mother's portrait, but imagination was more potent than actual memory in recalling her.

"Wonder if father really is ill!" he thought, jumping alone slowly.

It seems to have me settled, and that means married. He seems to think I will marry of old age, home, if I have no family ties to bind me there."

And then father pointed again that exquisite, graceful and accomplished being he had endeavored to describe to Barbara. It was odd that even with this mental vision before him he thought what a home Bab would make of the stately place that was to be his labor-tance.

"There is not much that is home-like about it now," he thinks. "For Mrs. Clark is too old to fuss much, and I imagine the servants have it all their own way. But how Bab's little trim figure and red hair would lighten up those big gloomy rooms."

A week later, he is on his way to New York, to visit his aunt, to see society, and by his father's express desire, to find a wife.

Heart-whole, fancy-free, he mingles with the guests who gather at Mrs. Markham's, his aunt's, escorted by his cousin Mabel to opera, theatre, concert, dances gracefully with one belle, takes another out to supper, makes himself agreeable with a third on a sleighing party, escorts a fourth to a promenade, and so on—sixteenth, eighteenth, numbers indefinite, coming under his care, but not one stirring his heart as Bab's cordial greeting did when he returned from college.

Bab! There is scarcely a frolic of his lonely childhood that is not associated with Bab. How many times has her mother called him in from snow-bell, but she could not resist the temptation to come to the door, to see if he was really as good as dead, or if he was only as good as asleep.

She could only answer by shy blushes, by trailing the soft, brown eyes to hide their happiness. But Malcolm was satisfied; and when she asked, presently: "But your ideal, Malcolm!" he answered, triumphantly:

"She is here in my arm, Bab—my first and only true love." (New York Ledger.)

A pneumatic shoe sole is new. Sydney, New South Wales, has a 12,000,000 electric light.

A company has been organized at Grand Rapids, Mich., for the manufacture of paper matches.

Concentric wiring for electric work is rapidly gaining ground, it being regarded as safer for lighting purposes than the two wire system.

The new system of transmitting power by means of compressed air, which was recently tried in Offenbach, showed a loss of but thirteen per cent. in the daily output.

The recent losses by fire in the cargo of ships carrying cotton has shown that cottonseed oil when held in the cotton in the outside of the ball, rapidly oxidizes and generates spontaneous combustion.

A disinfectant which combines cheapness with general utility is found in the use of potassium permanganate. It is a crystal and can be kept in this state until ready for use.

The Cambria Navigation Company, of Wales, has recently built for one of its ships a new and highly efficient fan, which is claimed to be the largest ever constructed.

Under favorable conditions the fan will deliver 500,000 cubic feet of air per minute.

France is fortunate in possessing 1101 mineral springs, of which 1027 are turned to account, and Algeria has forty-seven in use. Of the total in France 315 are sulphurous, like that of Amelie-les-Bains; 364 are alkaline, such as Vichy; 185 are ferruginous, for instance Orezza, and 210 are of various sorts, some containing common salts, others sulphate of sodium, and a third group sulphate of lime.

A California physician has invented an attachment for gas burners to stop the flow of gas immediately when the gas is blown out. The device accomplishes its purpose by means of the expansion and contraction of a liquid in a hermetically sealed receptacle, so that when the gas is blown out the liquid expands and contracts the gas, thus stopping the flow.

The Prussian Government has made a report upon its buildings struck by lightning during the years 1877 and 1880. There were 1,023 buildings struck. Of these, 284 were struck by lightning, 284 of these were struck, or one-half of one per cent. per thousand annually. Of the total number, fifteen only were killed with lightning.

There were many matters needing supervision, and again Malcolm reproached himself that all the care of the estate hands while he was pleasure-seeking.

"But I will never leave him again," he said to himself as he assisted his father to bed.

NEVER GIVE UP.

Never give up! It is wiser and better. Always to hope than once to despair. Fling off the load of doubt and hesitating fear, And break the dark spell of transitory care.

Never give up! or the burden may sink you. Providence kindly has mingled the cup; And in all trials or troubles, be patient. The secret of life, must be, never give up!

Never give up! There are chances and changes. Holding the hopeful a hundred to one; And, through the chaos, high wisdom arranges.

Ever success, if you'll only hope on. Never give up! for the wisest is boldest. Knowing that Providence mingles the cup; And of all maxims, the best, as the oldest, Is the true watch-word: "Never give up!"

Never give up! Though the grasp-shot may rattle, Or the fall thunder-cloud over you burst; Stand like a rock, and the storm and the battle Little shall harm you, though doing their worst.

Next sign up! If adversity presses, Providence wisely has mingled the cup, And the best counsel in all your distress, Is the stout watch-word: "Never give up!"

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

NEW CARROT WITH CREAM SAUCE.

Wash and boil till tender in salted water, a sufficient number. Drain the carrots, and cut them in halves.

Put them in a saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter and a dash of salt. Cook for ten minutes. Then add a moderate quantity of cream, and let them simmer for ten minutes. Break these scoops apart, and place on one half a mixture of raspberries lightly mashed with sugar, and a little thick cream; cover with the following: Stir over the fire three-quarters of a pound of tallow, and add a dash of salt.

Use a deep earthen dish; stone enough ripe red cherries to heap it well, and put plenty of sugar over the top; make a rich pastry crust, and lay an upper crust loosely over the cherries; bend the forefinger of the right hand, and press it all around the crust, just within the rim, to form a little groove; in this groove make three or four small cuts; brush the pie with well beaten egg and bake it for about half an hour; dust it with sugar and serve hot.

Sweet cream beaten to a stiff froth and served with any kind of fruit pie is delicious.

Sweet cream beaten to a stiff froth and served with any kind of fruit pie is delicious.

Use a deep earthen dish; stone enough ripe red cherries to heap it well, and put plenty of sugar over the top; make a rich pastry crust, and lay an upper crust loosely over the cherries; bend the forefinger of the right hand, and press it all around the crust, just within the rim, to form a little groove; in this groove make three or four small cuts; brush the pie with well beaten egg and bake it for about half an hour; dust it with sugar and serve hot.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

Drugs are taken into the stomach. For this reason their action is not direct.
 Compound Oxygen is taken into the lungs, and therefore, comes immediately into contact with and is absorbed into the blood.
 Drugs, being generally poisons, act by causing a disturbance in the body.
 Compound Oxygen, being composed of the elements of the air, and acting upon the blood, is not open to this objection.

But, however it may act,
 it has certainly cured many cases of chronic disease,
 in which drugs have failed.
 This is the point of greatest interest to all chronic sufferers. To all such we say:

Send for our book of 200
 pages, — sent free. Read for yourselves what Compound Oxygen is, how it acts, and, above all, what it has accomplished.
