DID YOU EVER

Stop to think what a fine piece of mechanism your watch is? and that you are injuring it by letting it run too long without having it cleaned and oiled?

A watch is injured more in one month, when running dirty, than in a year's time when properly cleaned and oiled.

Why neglect to have it cleaned, when you can get it done, and guaranteed, for One Dollar?

ASIATIC CHOLERA.

The Medical Society of New Jersey at its 127th annual meeting, June 27, 1893, ordered to be printed the following outline of essential points to be observed and emphasized by the physicians in times of threatened invasions of cholera, as presented by Dr. D. C. English, chairman, in the report of the Standing Committee:

TO PREVENT THE INTRODUCTION OF CHOLERA INTO A COMMUNITY.

1. Inquire into the sanitary administration in your community and give your most energetic efforts to secure its improvement.
 2. Obtain the service of men of sterling character and superior executive ability as members of your Board of Health.
 3. Require frequent inspections and scrupulous cleanliness of all places, public and private, particularly every street and alley; every sewer, drain, cesspool, vault and pit; every dwelling, store and office, including the plumbing; every yard, outhouse and stable.
 4. Cause all surface wells to be examined and close up those which are found to be polluted.
 5. Establish or perfect a system for the daily removal and safe disposal by fire if possible, of all garbage, sweepings, rags and other domestic refuse.
 6. Be prepared to skillfully and effectually disinfect, at public expense, all infected persons, clothing, baggage, vehicles and premises. Cause a supply of standard disinfectants to be kept ready for use by the health authorities.
 7. Exclude from the markets all unwholesome food.
 8. Provide and keep in readiness a suitable hospital for communicable diseases, and make engagements with physicians and attendants in anticipation of the need of their services.
 9. Instruct the people in regard to the nature of the disease; its mode of communicability; the value of thorough sanitation; how to live; what to eat; the importance of using recently cooked foods; the necessity for boiling drinking water; the uselessness of deodorizers and the benefit to be derived from a liberal use of soap and water, and from pure air and sunshine.
 10. Prevent the entrance of infected persons and effects into your community. Isolate every "suspect." Keep ready for reference Circular 45 of the New Jersey State Board of Health.
- To arrest its spread after its first appearance in a community: 1. Provide competent employes to carry out rules and directions of physicians and board of health.
 2. Promptly and completely isolate all cases of the disease, and also all "suspects."
 3. Watch all apparently innocent diarrhoeas.
 4. Thoroughly disinfect all choleraic discharges from patients before emptying into place of deposit. Completely disinfect all vessels, clothing, bedding and everything used by the infected person or in the sick room or house. Burn all garments and articles which are soiled by contact with the discharges.
 5. In case of death of patient wrap the body in a sheet or blanket which is saturated with a solution of bichloride of mercury, 1 to 500, and pack the coffin full of quicklime. Bury the body privately, with no attendants except those necessary to insure proper burial at least five feet below the ground surface.
 6. Give information to the public as to the existence and progress of the disease. Discourage popular fear. Provide free medical service for the poor and have it promptly rendered. Urge upon the people the greatest care in the selection of digestible food and its proper preparation by cooking; present the danger from the use of unboiled water; the advantage of avoiding all excesses. Especially urge upon the people the observance of the strictest cleanliness of person and surroundings.
- God gives peace not as the world giveth. Many forget this truth, and when all is favorable without, think they have the peace of God.

PAINT! PAINT!

HAMMONTON.

When you buy the Hammononton Paint, you do not buy seven-eighths of a gallon for a gallon, or three pints for a half-gallon; nor do you get one of those packages that weigh 12 to 14 pounds, and containing so much alkali that it appears to be so thick that it is impossible to use it without thinning; but in buying the Hammononton you get a full standard gallon of paint, weighing 14 to 16 pounds to the gallon, made from the best materials known to the trade, and costs the consumer from $1 to $1.50 per gallon for honest paint.

If the purchaser doesn't want honest paint, and wants to be honest to himself, then be sure to buy the Hammononton Paint, and the manufacturer will give a receipt with every gallon sold telling you how to make two gallons of paint out of one of the Hammononton. It will cost 33 cents for the extra gallon.

One Dollar.
And then here comes Commercial Paint, in 30 shades—the best wearing paint ever put on the market for so low a price as $1 per gallon, and guaranteed to be a first-class wearing paint. If any one should not want to pay so high a price for a good exterior paint, then work the 33 cent racket, and get two gallons for $1.33. Manufactured at Hammononton Paint Works.

GEORGE ELVINS, P. M.
The County Board of Freeholders held an adjourned meeting on Wednesday, at Atlantic City. The plans and specifications for sixteen steel and iron cells, corridors and stairs were accepted and the contract given to the Pauly Jail Building and Manufacturing Co., of St. Louis, for $8,227.27. It was voted to add $5000 to the appropriation for public buildings, and to issue bonds for $15,000, to pay for the additional and alterations to court house and jail, said bonds to be payable in one, two, and three years.

Howard L. Irons' wagon shop came near being destroyed by fire on Monday. Mr. Irons went to dinner at noon, and business detained him until about two o'clock. A little earlier, some one in the blacksmith shop saw smoke issuing from the adjoining room, and going in, found a right lively blaze among the chips and shavings on the floor, which in five minutes more would have been beyond control. There had been no fire there for months, no one had been in there since dinner, the great doors were wide open, and how that fire originated is a mystery; but a charred spot three or four feet in diameter, not far from the door, tells the tale of attempted destruction.

Whatever reasons may have existed for popular hesitancy in going to the World's Fair has been finally removed by the action of the railroad in providing excursions at rates so low as to place the trip to Chicago within the reach of everybody. It is conceded, moreover, that the expense of a stay in Chicago is now no greater than the cost of a visit to any other large city. Reasonable prices prevail, and this, with the reduction in railway fares, will enable the masses to enjoy the benefits of the greatest exhibition that earth has ever seen.

The Reading Railroad announces a series of excursions via the Lehigh Valley Line to Chicago at the rate of a single fare for the round trip. This makes the price of a ticket $17.00 from New York, $16.75 from Philadelphia and correspondingly low figures from other points on the Reading System. The tickets are good only on the designated excursion trains, which are appointed to start on August 1st, 7th and 10th. The return journey may be made at any time within ten days of the date of starting.
There will be no change of cars between New York or Philadelphia and Chicago, and the trains will consist of first-class coaches only, with all the comforts and conveniences necessary for a long trip.
These special trains will leave New York at 8:15 a. m., Philadelphia at 9:00 a. m., stopping at the several junction points where connections are made from all parts of the Reading system. Persons contemplating joining these excursions should consult the nearest Reading Railroad ticket agent for details as to train connections and rates.

It is, perhaps, needless to add anything concerning the attractions and advantages of the Reading's "Scenic Lehigh Valley Route." Its picturesqueness is as widely renowned as its general excellence of construction, equipment and management.

Gen. Wm. F. Abbott, son of the ex-Governor, died last Sunday. He was a xxviii. O. G. WOOD, Hammononton.

The Jersey City Evening Journal of the 24th inst. published a lot of gross falsities about Hammononton, its people, industries, etc. There was scarcely a word of truth in its whole column article.

The committee on arrangements

U., extend thanks to Miss Eva Carlaw, Mr. Frank Wilson, and the others, for their kind assistance in making it a

The Epworth League lawn party, Tuesday evening was the most numerously attended of any this season, and the proceeds must have been very satisfactory. The entertainment pleased all who were present.

Citizens who aided the firemen, Saturday, deserve thanks. Unfortunately, one or two took upon themselves the duty of giving orders, thus greatly confusing the firemen and causing trouble for the Marshal.

Rumored that the school house lower is to be raised, to make place for

O. G. WOOD, Hammononton.

MR. EDITOR:—Speaking only as one citizen, I want to say that we simply can't half praise our fire company boys for the grand results of their work at the recent fire. They saved at least $50,000 worth of property, and possibly double that amount. And now for a chemical engine, and suits to protect our firemen. WM. RUTHERFORD.

We shared the pleasure with others, Thursday eve, of seeing two opening blossoms of night blooming cerus, at the residence of Mr. Daniel Baker. Of all plants, this is the most mysterious to us, and most admirable.
Its graceful beauty and wonderful per-buds on the same plant will unfold ere many days.

Fire! Fire!

The Fay block, corner of Bellevue Avenue and Egg Harbor Road, was destroyed by fire last Saturday morning.
The building was a two story frame, one of the oldest business structures in town, containing two stores, occupied by Capt. A. D. Dent, dealer in coffee, tea, and spices, and Jesse Treat, auctioner and second-hand goods. A one story addition, on the avenue, contained G. W. Swank's oyster saloon; another, on Egg Harbor Road, contained Reed & Entrieke's marble yard. The second story was fitted up and furnished for a billiard and pool room, but had been closed for several weeks.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but incendiarism seems to us the only reasonable theory. As nearly as we can ascertain, Mrs. Vaughn, Sr., living with her son Walter, just to the rear of the Fay block, was awakened by smoke, discovered the fire, and woke her son, who ran up street shouting the alarm, and later woke Fire-Marshal Brown.

When the Marshal arrived, the fire was slowly eating its way downward from the upper story into Treat's store. In a few moments it began to burn furiously, throwing up a black smoke. The firemen were soon on the ground, and did heroic work. There was little hope of saving the block, yet the north end was kept wet to protect the brick dwelling which stood but a few feet distant.

The third story of this house was built of wood—a sort of mansard roof,—and took fire several times,—once seemed entirely filled with fire, flame streaming from every window. Just then came the hard work. A score of men on the neighboring roof, with pails, the hose with its managers, a ladder laid across to the threatened building, and plenty of water from the cistern, formed too powerful a combination for the fiend, and in a short time the danger was past. Were it not for effective work at this point, no human power could have saved the adjoining buildings, and the extent of damage no one could predict.

The fire was discovered at 1:25 A. M., at 5 o'clock the engine was hauled, the block an unsightly heap of smouldering rums, the interior of the Fay house scorched and blackened throughout.
Mr. Swank lost his fixtures, etc. Very little was saved of Mr. Treat's stock.

Capt. Dent saved his desk and account books, and a couple chests of tea. In his store was a valuable collection of nautical works and charts which cannot be replaced.—We believe that everything was saved from the marble yard.

We have heard no official estimate of individual losses, but the total will foot well up into the thousands.

Two things were settled beyond dispute, by the fire,—our Fire Company is an organization of which Hammononton ought to be proud, and for which we ought to do everything within our power. The purchase of the fire engine and fixtures, and building cisterns were paying investments. We do not mean to disparage the work done by others, not members of the fire company; they did well, and deserve praise.

A party of young folks were out for a ride, Monday evening. While in the Park, their horse took fright and started to run, but the carriage caught on a tree, and the horse stood and kicked so viciously that four of the party were injured. Miss Mary Johnston, side and shoulder bruised; Marie Setley, three teeth knocked out; Maud Wilson, arm bruised; Harry Jacobs, arm badly lacerated and bruised. Help came in a few minutes, and the horse pacified.

One point, settled by the late fire, must not be lost sight of. Insurance companies have been considering the business in Hammononton, claiming that we had no facilities for fighting fire, and hence their risks were extra hazardous here. Our firemen have proven to the satisfaction of all, we believe, that fire can be stayed, even when circumstances make the work difficult. It is to the interest of our whole community that every facility possible be provided. They not used for years, the fact of their possession will affect insurance all over town.

Sabbath day resolves that you will give to the world your fears, and your frustrations, and your distresses.

The merchant comes from the store. There had been great disaster there. He has been in the store for some time...

Again, I remark that many of our business men are not careful for tomorrow. How often it is that the store and the home come to clash...

The family table, which ought to be the place for pleasant discussion and cheerful conversation...

The temptation of limited capital has ruled men in two ways. Sometimes they have shrunk down to the level of the masses...

The small craft that could have stood the storm in the past, is now being crushed by the great sea of speculation...

How Stephen Girard started his Drydock and the Road to Fortification. The advice of a shrewd business man is sometimes more valuable than a diatema.

It proved to be so in the case of a drydock man who was employed by Stephen Girard the Philadelphia merchant.

One day the drydock man, who was an industrious, bright fellow with a good many mouths to fill at home, was heard to remark that he wished he was rich.

"What that?" sharply said Mr. Girard, who heard the grumble. "Oh," said the man, "I was only wishing I was rich."

"How do you wish to get rich?" asked the millionaire, harshly. "I don't know how without money," returned the drydock man.

"You don't need money," said Girard. "Well, if you will tell me how to get rich without money, I won't let the grass grow under my feet."

"There is going to be a ship load of goods returned to the port tomorrow and by it in, and then come to me."

"I have no money to buy a whole ship load of goods," said the man. "You don't need any money, I tell you," snapped the old man. "Go down and bid on the whole cargo, and then come to me."

The next day the drydock man went down to the sale. A large crowd of retailers were present, and the auctioneer said that those bidding would have the privilege of taking one case on the whole ship-load.

The auctioneer was astonished; but, on some one whispering to him that it was Girard's man who was the speaker, his manner changed, and he said he supposed it was all right.

The news soon spread that Girard was buying tea in large quantities, and the price rose several cents. "Go and sell your tea," said Girard to the drydock man the next day.

The drydock man was shrill, and he went out and made contracts with several brokers to take the stock at a shade below the market price, thereby making a good sale.

In a few hours he was worth fifty thousand dollars. The wild jungle cats of southern India are tall, long-legged, both and dangerous animals.

Almost without exception they are men who, while beyond their own country, have a past which they wish to bury.

A writer states that in one company he has found a Roumanian prince, who was under suspicion of having murdered his brother, an Italian Lieutenant Colonel of Cavalry, bearing an illustrious name, who had been dismissed from King Humbert's army in disgrace.

POLLY AND THE TRAMP. An Unhappy Customer Given a Leave by a Friend.

"Yes, Polly is a pretty bird, and as bright as the sun," said Aunt Abbie to her children, who crowded about the cage to admire the bird's bright plumage and pert manner.

"Well, children," she began, "you know Uncle Daniel has lived with me for years. As he is old and feeble, he stays in the sitting-room and reads or sleeps most of the time."

"I never forgot to feed a hungry person, so I brought out what food there was in the pantry and placed it on the table. Nearly all my table-linen were down cellar, so I was afraid to leave the man alone to go after them."

"I was thoroughly frightened, and had decided to run to the neighbors for help when Polly, disturbed by the man's loud talk, came to the rescue by screaming, 'Uncle Dan, Uncle Dan, you are wanted!'"

"An open door hid her face from the man, who was in the direction of the voice, and rushed from the house, thinking no doubt, it was a child's voice calling some man about the place to my aid."

"I was very poor, he had many expenses, and he was very dear to me. 'True, your majesty.' 'I think I shall soon turn my attention to the most important problems that have ever troubled mankind, and that is, the direct control of the energy that is stored up in coal, so that it may be employed without waste and at a very small margin of cost.'"

Warning Out of Railroad Damage Suits. A new enterprise of some account is looming up. It is the farming out of railroad damage suits.

These are the officers of one of the trunk lines asked a firm of lawyers what they would take to defend the road in all suits arising from death accidents and destruction of property.

The lawyers named a figure and have since relieved the officers of all anxiety and, virtually, of responsibility. The undertaking, like insurance, is somewhat speculative, but they have killed so many suits in the courts and have compromised on such advantageous terms in other cases...

After the restoration in 1814, among the titled followers of Napoleon were the most anxious to obtain employment at the court of Louis XVIII, none showed more serenity and equanimity than Fouche, Duke of Otranto, in exercising all his famous facilities of intrigue to secure a position at the court.

"I was afraid to go down into the cellar, thinking he would either follow me or rob the house in my absence, so I told him that was the best I could do for him."

"He brought his fist down on the table with an oath, and demanded a good hot breakfast. 'I was thoroughly frightened, and had decided to run to the neighbors for help when Polly, disturbed by the man's loud talk, came to the rescue by screaming, 'Uncle Dan, Uncle Dan, you are wanted!'"

Chief among them is the collection of documents owned by the Spanish Government, including the autograph of Columbus, the royal letters patent from Ferdinand and Isabella, the great discoverer, when he sailed on his first voyage, an autograph letter from Queen Isabella, returning a book which Columbus had loaned her, and many letters written to his son Diego in 1492.

A fac-simile of the cross erected by Columbus after a fight with the Indians on his second voyage is placed in the nave of the altar. On the steps of the altar are shown six roughly hewn blocks of stone which are all that remain of the first Christian Church of the Western Hemisphere; the site was on the north shore of the land of San Domingo overlooking Isabella Bay. The bell of this church, presented to Columbus by King Ferdinand, will also be exhibited together with the bell given by Pope Alexander VI. to the church in Carthagena, Columbia, in 1518.

At the sides of the altar stand two anchors used by the great navigator. One of them was lost from the flag ship Santa Maria at La Navidad, and was raised by the Indians from the ocean's bottom after lying there for three years. One of the four cannon of the Santa Maria is in the collection. The main part of the altar is to be finished by the artist, who has loaned by Pope XIII—consisting of many pictures illustrating the career of Columbus.

The monastery itself will be used as an art gallery where will be shown nearly a thousand pictures, including portraits of Ferdinand and Isabella, and of the Lief Erickson, Marco Polo, Amerigo Vesputi, and other discoverers. The room will be known as the Columbus room, and will contain seventy-four pictures of him by various artists. Finally there will be a miscellaneous collection of books, documents, maps, etc., relating to the discovery of America.

Palpitation of the Heart. By palpitation of the heart is meant the sensation either of irregularity in heart action or of rapidity of heart-beats. The person who experiences it is usually alarmed by the symptoms, and calls in a physician. But it is most cases of this sort which are brought to his attention, the physician finds nothing out of the way with the heart, and hence of danger to the patient is excluded.

In almost all cases of actual heart disease, no intimation of it is transmitted to the patient by palpitation of the heart or by a sensation of irregularity or like sensation of heart rhythm. As a symptom, palpitation is valuable to the physician, in that it directs the attention of the patient to the heart, and calls in a physician. In this region usually leads one to consult his physician at once. Symptoms felt in other parts of the body usually wait for the more convenient opportunity.

Dr. Austin Flint was once summoned to attend a young lady dying of heart disease. The family informed him that his presence was wanted merely to satisfy the lady's friends, and that she was in a room from which not only light but everything that might lead to the slightest nervous excitement was excluded. It was suggested to the doctor that an examination of the chest be omitted, and that all communication with the patient should take place through a friend, lest the exertion should result in a fatal dissolution.

To this the doctor objected. When admitted to her presence, he found that she answered his questions in whispered monotones.—Examination of the chest showed that there was a disease; and consequently the cause should be found out and remedied. Among the common causes of palpitation are to be numbered the excessive use of tobacco, tea, coffee, alcohol, or other stimulants, which, in excess, or of any kind.—Youth's Companion.

We're less apt to criticize the extravagances of others when we are made the favored patrons thereof. Benson, the German sculptor, is an American citizen, a resident of New York City. One of the attractions of his studio is a beautiful monument for a soldier. Another is a grand hand, the ideal bust of the Scottish bard, represented as an old man. Beror's model for the Goethe Monument could be the very epitome of German idealism. The statue of Shakespeare's noble Hamlet is a masterpiece of art. New York, now on the occasion of the exhibition at the Columbian Exposition, is by Beror.
