

South-Jersey Republican

Orville E. Hoyt, Publisher.

Terms--$1.25 Per Year.

Vol. XXIII, No. 30.

Hammonton, N. J., Saturday, August 1, 1885.

Five Cents per Copy.

THE WALMER HOUSE,

Central Avenue, Hammonton, N. J.

Open at all seasons, for permanent and transient boarders. Large airy rooms. First-class table. Verandas and balconies to every room. Plenty of Shade. Pure Water. Stabling for horses. Special Rates for Families for the Season. For terms, address—

(Lock-Box 75)

Hammonton, Atlantic County, New Jersey.

SOMETHING NEW!

A Philadelphia
CLOTHING STORE
In HAMMONTON

JOS. REINHEIMER

Has rented a store in

Rutherford's Building,

And will put therein
A general stock of Clothing

AND
Gents' Furnishing Goods.

He has come to stay, and asks the people of Hammonton to call and see his goods.

Will be open, ready for business,
July 1st.

HERMANN FIEDLER,
MANUFACTURER
AND
WHOLESALE DEALER IN
CIGARS,
Hammonton, N. J.

Leave your order at the Republican Office if you want
Calling Cards,
Business Cards,
Wedding Cards,
Invitation Cards.

Head-Quarters
FOR
FERTILIZERS!

We have just received a supply of
Mapes' Complete Manures,
For Special Crops
And General Use.

Potato Manure,
Corn Manure,
Fruit and Vine Manure,
Early Vegetable & Truck Manure
Potash Bone, and
Pure Ground Raw Bone.

We also keep in stock
German Potash Salts (Kainit),
Nitrate of Soda,
Muriate of Potash.

No. 1 Peruvian Guano,
Land Plaster,
And the only STRICTLY PURE
Dried and Ground Fish Guano,
&c., &c., &c.

GEO. ELVINS,
Our Main Board and Bellevue Avenue,
ONTON.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every corner of the globe. Its unequalled success can be attributed to but one cause—the entire fulfillment of its promise.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all bursitis, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE
FOR THE WHISKERS

Will change the beard to a natural brown, or black, as desired. It produces a permanent color that will not wash away. Consisting of a single preparation, it is applied without trouble.

PREPARED BY
R. P. HALL & CO., Nashua, N. H.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

FOR ALL THE FORMS OR
Scrofulous, Mercurial, and Blood Disorders,
the best remedy, because the most searching and thorough blood-purifier, is
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles, $3.

TUTT'S PILLS

"THE OLD RELIABLE."
25 YEARS IN USE.
The Greatest Medical Triumph of the Age!
Indorsed all over the World.

SYMPTOMS OF A TORPID LIVER.
Loss of appetite, Nausea, bowellessness, Pain in the Head, with a dull sensation in the back part. Pain under the shoulder-blade, fullness after eating, with a disinclination to exertion of body or mind, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, Loss of memory, with a feeling of having neglected some duty, weariness, Dizziness, Flitting of the Heart, Dots before the eyes, Yellow Skin, Headache, Restlessness at night, highly colored Urine.

THESE WARNINGS ARE UNHEEDED,
SINCE THESE WILL SOON BE OVERCOME.

TUTT'S PILLS are especially adapted to such cases, one dose effects such a change of feeling as to astonish the sufferer.

They restore the Appetite, and cause the body to Take on flesh, thus the system is nourished, and by their tonic

Action on the Digestive Organs, Regular stools are produced. Price 25 cents.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.
GRAY HAIR or WHISKERS changed to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. It imparts a natural color, sets instantaneously, sold by Druggists, or sent on express on receipt of $1.
OFFICE, 43 RUE DE NEW YORK.

MY-VERY-BEST.
THE HANSELL BEATEN.

In comparing my own with the Hansell Red Raspberry, I find mine much the best. I invite those wishing to purchase plants to come and see the bushes while fruiting. DAVID FELDS, Oak Road, Hammonton.

Plants for sale next Fall.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—When I have found a good thing I like to tell it to my friends, that they get the same, and enjoy it too. Last year we raised two hundred and forty bushels of carrots, on four-sevenths of an acre, and were so much pleased with the way the horses fed on them (the cow, and calf and hogs all enjoyed them and lived on them), that this year we have planted one and a-half acres.—White Belgian Carrots. I see no reason why your readers in Hammonton might not adopt the same plan of raising a large amount of feed from a small spot unless your land needs more closeness of texture, (which I believe could be given by applying a good dressing of manure). We used a drill which opens a furrow, drops the seed, covers and rolls it, and makes a mark for the next furrow, but we found a "wheel hoe" of invaluable service in working the plants and, by the by, the wheel hoe, (Allen's "Planet Jr.") is just the tool that will dress out your strawberry plantations in the very best style.

Even here among the stones and gravel, we could not dispense with it, how much better in light gravelless sand. One drill would answer for the use of several neighbors; but I would advise each one to get a wheel hoe. Our crop was made last year in a dry season, and I see no reason why, with good care, it might not be increased fifty per cent. in an ordinary season, and yield over 600 bushels per acre. Just think, what a large amount of feed can be raised, and save your bills for feed for horses, hogs and cows! Wishing you all success, I am yours most truly,

A. H. VANDOREN,
Liberty, Va.

Desiring to keep the sails of his windmill constantly turning, wind or no wind, in order to add picturesqueness to the landscape, a Maine man moves them by steam power.

The House of Lords refused to consider the bill providing for woman suffrage, the Marquis of Salisbury saying it was impossible to deal with the subject at the fag end of the session.

Many Grand Army Posts protest against Barbierre.

It is amazing that any human being should continue to suffer from biliousness, nervous headache, indigestion, or general weakness, when it is as notorious as that the sun is the source of light that Vinegar Bitters inevitably cures these complaints. This medicine is sold everywhere, taken everywhere, and cures every where. Reader it will cure you.

The total number of emigrants from Great Britain for the half year ending June 30 last was 138,071. For the corresponding half year preceding it was 165,420. The decrease in English and Scotch emigrants was considerable, and the Irish emigrants was 10,000 less.

Bartholdi's great statue is already being submitted to criticism on scientific grounds. In a late number of a Boston paper a writer who says he knows what he is talking about, asserts that the statue will be destroyed by galvanic action due to the conjunction of the metals of which it is composed. He also thinks that the arm which holds the torch is not properly supported, and that the statue cannot, therefore, be utilized as a lighthouse.

Twenty-five thousand people are estimated to have arrived in Atlantic City on Saturday and Sunday.

The Pennsylvania Salt and Chemical Works, at Philadelphia, were almost entirely destroyed by fire, on Tuesday. The loss is estimated at nearly half a million dollars.

Cholera is spreading southward in Spain to Cordova and Lerida, and making its way into Portugal.

The curative power of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is too well known to require the specious aid of any exaggerated or fictitious certificate. Witnesses of its marvelous cures are to-day living in every city and hamlet of the land. Write for names if you want home evidence.

HOBBIES OF THE YOUNG.—
There were several dozen of the hygienists in council, each with his individual hobby. Each thought all the others were wrong. Each thought that his own hobby was the only correct one.

A gentleman present said he had taken Brown's Iron Bitters for debility and dyspepsia, and though he didn't want to make a fuss about it, he knew the use of this great tonic to be better than all the notions he had heard advanced in the council. One practical cure is worth thousands of guesses and notions. Thousands of happy convalescents speak gratefully of Browns Iron Bitters.

Cholera has already killed more than 25,000 people in Spain.

Though the temperature fell 16° after the storm, Sunday, there were fifteen deaths reported during the day due to the heat, in Philadelphia, the largest number upon any single day of the present heated term.

The most deadly foe to all malarial diseases is Ayer's Arne Cure, a combination of vegetable ingredients only, of which the most valuable is used in no other known preparation. This remedy is an absolute and certain specific, and succeeds when all other medicines fail. A cure is warranted.

The President has declined to modify his proclamation requiring cattle men to remove from the Indian Territory within forty days.

Arrests were made at the Hoffman House and the Albemarle House, New York, for the sale of strong drink on Sunday.

The convention of German-American teachers at St. Louis unanimously adopted reports strongly protesting against the introduction of the temperance text books in schools.

The Venezuelan rebellion has been suppressed, and a British man of war carrying rebel refugees is in the hands of the Venezuela Government.

In Spain on Wednesday there were reported 3168 new cases of cholera and 1252 deaths.

John Cadwalader was appointed by the President collector of the port of Philadelphia.

Maud S. trotted a mile in 2.03 at Cleveland Driving Park.

Tomlin & Smith

Have received this week a supply of

FALL GOODS

Ladies' and Children's Hosiery (cotton and wool)

CORSETS—Coroline, Duplex, Doctor Warner's Health, and other makes.

GLOVES—new Fall shades.

Veilings, Collars.

SOAP—Colgate's, Cachetiere Boquet.

Glycerine, Honey, and Oatmeal.

DRESS GOODS—Black and Colored Cashmere.

Dress Trimmings—Silesia, Drilling, and Cambrie.

White Goods, Nainsook, Lawn, and Cross barred Muslin.

Full assortment of NOTIONS.

New Goods Every Week

Attention!

Goods delivered to any part of town.

All parties desiring Passenger and Freight transportation or J. Ivory Teams will please apply to

D. R. BERRY.

He will be at the Depots upon the arrival of trains.

Orders left at the C. & A. Depot, at E. Stockwell's store, or Wm. Murphy's, will receive prompt attention.

Stables at Wm. Murphy's.

Photographs!

W. H. HARROLD

Has opened a gallery in Rutherford's Block, and is ready for business.

Pictures of all sizes and styles—copying included. All photographs taken by the instantaneous process.

Children Pictures a Specialty

CALL AT

E. Stockwell's

Store

And examine his new stock of

Dry Goods

And Notions,

Just received, including

Satpoons,

Buntings,

Summer

Cashmeres,

White Goods,

Gingham,

Also, White and Colored Laces

Buttons, Corsets, Mitts,

Gloves, Fans, etc., &c.

Prices to suit all customers.

E. Stockwell,

Bellevue, Avenue,

Hammonton, New Jersey.

D. W. JACOBS

REPAIRS

Sewing Machines & Organs.

Orders sent by mail (Hammonton Post Office) or left at Stockwell's store, will receive prompt attention.

BUY YOUR

Bread and Cakes

Pies, Rolls, Buns,

Etc., Etc.,

Baked Fresh Every Day,

At Packer's

"Old Reliable" Hammonton Bakery.

Patronize home industry and encourage home enterprise. By so doing you will the better enable us to serve you, and thus deserve your patronage.

Baker's Liquid Yeast

Which most people prefer, made fresh every day.

Fruits and Confections

As usual.

Wm. D. PACKER.

90 CHOICE BUILDING

LOTS FOR SALE

Close to SCHOOLS, CHURCHES, POST-OFFICES, and R. R. DEPOTS in the CENTRE of the Town of Hammonton.

Prices Reasonable Terms Easy

THE LOST LAND.

There is a story of a beautiful land,
Where fields were fertile and where flowers
were bright,
Till to-day it is lost in the morning light.

Where happy children wandered hand in hand,
Where lovers wrote their names upon the sand.

They say it vanished from all human sight;
The hungry sea devoured it in a night.
You doubt the tale? Ah! you will understand!

For a man muse upon that fable old
They give and credence always at the last,
However they have caviled at its truth,
When with a tear-dimmed vision they behold.

Sink in the ocean of the Past
The lovely lost Atlantis of their Youth.

A DANGEROUS CHARGE.

It was the last night of the year, and a few congenial spirits had gathered in the bachelor apartments of a mutual friend to spend in cheerful song and story the few remaining hours of the old year's life. Only two of the company had failed to add his share to the general entertainment.

"Come Mortimer," said the last, "it's your turn now. You that have traveled about so much ought to be able to tell something worth hearing."

An unanimous request that the host's suggestion should be carried out having been made, Mortimer began his story:

"It was as long ago as the year '45 when I was quite a young man, with very little experience of the world, though I knew more than I do now, or am very likely to know. For the last three years I had been book-keeper to a large wholesale dry goods house in the western part of New York, enjoying in no small degree its esteem and confidence, which I appreciated and did my best to deserve. With the desire to perform my duties well and acceptably, I had an additional incentive to stand high in the estimation of the firm in the form of the lovely daughter of its head partner, with whom I was madly, and, as it seemed to me, hopelessly in love.

"It was not, the absence of fortune and position that made me so faint-hearted, for I had heard her father Mr. Crofton, say more than once, that he didn't care how poor his son-in-law was, if he wasn't poor in integrity, intelligence, energy and self-reliance. I was conscious that he regarded me with an eye of favor; certainly I could not complain that he did not afford me ample opportunity to woo and win his daughter if I could.

"The chief difficulty in the way lay in the fact that I had a rival, who, having been longer in the field, had apparently obtained a footing in her favor that I despaired of ever being able to win. And then the fair Lucy herself was so shy and reserved with me. She always had a gay smile and merry word for Fred Harding, while to me she was so shy and silent that I never could gain courage to express my love, except by looks, and the persistency with which I sought her society.

"Had I been versed in the ways of women, I should not let this dishearten me so. As it was my heart sometimes beat high with the hope of eventual success, her eyes grew so wondrously bright at my approach, and she blushed so prettily when I spoke to her.

"Fred Harding was a gentleman of leisure, and quite a favorite with the fairer portion of the community. He had plenty of money, which he spent freely, though where he obtained it was not so clear. He was a slender smooth-faced chap, with soft white hands, glossy curly, and carefully got-up attire. I never liked him, though that is not very strange, considering how he monopolized the society of my adored Lucy. He was always very civil to me, but there was no love lost on either side. There seldom is between two men in love with the same woman.

"One day Mr. Crofton called me to one side, stating that he was going to give me a strong proof of the confidence in which he had placed in me, by turning to me some important business, to which it would be inconvenient for him personally to attend. I will not take up the time by describing the nature of the business, which has nothing to do with myself, merely saying that it necessitated my going into the interior of the State, and taking with me $20,000.

"I was not a little proud that a mission of so much importance should be entrusted to me, wondering in my imagination if Lucy knew how much confidence her father had in me, and inwardly resolving that I would perform it in a way that would justify his good opinion of me.

"I was to take the evening train. Just before starting I called at Mr. Crofton's private office to receive the money and his parting instructions. I could scarcely believe that the small package handed me contained so large an amount. His last injunction to me was to put it in my breast-pocket; to keep my coat buttoned close to the chin, and avoid talking to strangers.

"I took the half past five train, traveling straight on after only brief stoppages, for nearly four hours. Then we came to the junction, and leaving the express, I took the accommodation train on another and less-frequent road. There was a delay of about fifteen minutes, owing to the fact that we were obliged to switch off to let an express train pass. About five minutes before we started an old man entered, whose white hair and beard gave him a very venerable appearance. He had a woman with him who clung timidly to his arm.

"Do these cars go to Bolton?" he said, addressing me.

"They do," I replied.

"Are you going as far that?"

"I am going beyond it," I said.

"You're in luck, Emily," said the old man, addressing the veiled woman on his arm. "Here's a gentleman that's going right through Bolton, and will see that you don't get off at the wrong place."

"Good-bye!"

The last four letters formed the first syllable of Stockport, the town where I resided. On turning the paper I found some pencil memoranda, which ran thus: Bonnet, veil, cloak, scarf, gloves.

"As I recall the face beneath that veil—the short, wavy hair parted in the middle of the forehead, the arched eyebrows, the intense blackness of the eyes, which never once met mine, then flashed upon me the secret of indefinite resemblance to some on I had seen, which had struck me at first glance, but which had a particular peculiarity in my mind at the time. It was just as clear to me now as twelve years later. I had been robbed, not by a woman, but by a man, and that man, Fred Harding! He was in the habit of often lounging in and out of the store, reading the papers and exchanging the news, and had a distinct remembrance of his sitting by the stove, within hearing distance, when Mr. Crofton mentioned the matter to me, but thought nothing of it at the time.

"In less than ten minutes I was on my way back to Stockport. What my thoughts and feelings were during the journey would be difficult to describe, so conflicting were their nature. At one time I was strong in the belief that I should be able to circumvent the villain, who had robbed me of more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they before they were plucked?

"Black," says Berry; "black as a pine."

"Then, as the young lady took the seat alluded to, he kissed her saying:

"Good-bye, my dearest child. Don't talk; your lungs are still weak, you know. Give my love to your aunt and cousins, and write as soon as you're able."

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply

money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they before they were plucked?

"Black," says Berry; "black as a pine."

"Then, as the young lady took the seat alluded to, he kissed her saying:

"Good-bye, my dearest child. Don't talk; your lungs are still weak, you know. Give my love to your aunt and cousins, and write as soon as you're able."

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply

money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they before they were plucked?

"Black," says Berry; "black as a pine."

"Then, as the young lady took the seat alluded to, he kissed her saying:

"Good-bye, my dearest child. Don't talk; your lungs are still weak, you know. Give my love to your aunt and cousins, and write as soon as you're able."

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply

money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they before they were plucked?

"Black," says Berry; "black as a pine."

"Then, as the young lady took the seat alluded to, he kissed her saying:

"Good-bye, my dearest child. Don't talk; your lungs are still weak, you know. Give my love to your aunt and cousins, and write as soon as you're able."

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply

money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they before they were plucked?

"Black," says Berry; "black as a pine."

"Then, as the young lady took the seat alluded to, he kissed her saying:

"Good-bye, my dearest child. Don't talk; your lungs are still weak, you know. Give my love to your aunt and cousins, and write as soon as you're able."

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply

money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they before they were plucked?

"Black," says Berry; "black as a pine."

"Then, as the young lady took the seat alluded to, he kissed her saying:

"Good-bye, my dearest child. Don't talk; your lungs are still weak, you know. Give my love to your aunt and cousins, and write as soon as you're able."

"As the cars moved I stole a look at my companion—for fair she looked, and young, from the glimpse obtained through her veil. She was dressed more than life, and then my hopes went down to zero. I knew that Harding's eagerness to win sweet Lucy Crofton made him jealous of the regard with which Lucy's father regarded me, and was convinced that the object was not simply

money, but to ruin me in my employer's estimation. The result would be the same at all events. Unless I could get back the package farewell to all my bright prospects and the sweetest maidens in the world to me.

"Her unnatural pallor was heightened by the blackest eyes and eyelashes that I ever saw, though on account of her shyness and timidity, the latter had veiled the former much of the time from view. She seemed entirely unfit to be out at that season of the year, being seized at one time with a paroxysm of coughing that quite alarmed me. To my inquiry if I could get her anything, she shook her head; and remembering her father's caution to her, I said no more.

"Presently she removed a cork from a vial, whose peculiar color I remember well, and touched it to her lips. Whatever it was, it seemed to have the desired effect. Folding my cloak, I placed it on the seat back of her, and leaning her upon it she slept, or seemed to have done.

"I guess they're a little tough," he said, making another slash at them.

"They're too big for geese," says Miller.

"I bet they're turkey buzzards."

What color were they

THE REPUBLICAN.
A weekly newspaper.
Hammonton, ATLANTIC CO., N.J.
SATURDAY, AUG. 1, 1858.

BROWN IRON BITTERS
PHARMACISTS AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMENDED
QUALITY & PURITY

Cedar Shingles
Having my Mill in full operation,
I am now prepared to furnish the best quality of
Cedar Shingles.
In any quantity, and at the lowest possible prices.

A. S. GAY,
Pine Road, Hammonton.

A large lot of Cedar Grape Stakes and Pine poles for sale, in the swamp or delivered at Elwood or DeCosta Station.

Dr. J. A. Waas,
RESIDENT
DENTIST,
Successor to Dr. Geo. W. Shultz
HAMMONTON, : : N.J.
Official Days—Wednesday, Thursday,
Friday and Saturday, each at GAS ADMINISTRATION.

No charge for extracting, when teeth are ordered. Phited's Office, 120 Spruce St.

NOTHING EARLIER.

It appears, on further trial, that the BRESCEN is without any doubt the earliest strawberry grown. In 1854 I picked and shipped on the 25th of May.
This season I picked ripe berries on the 28th of May, and shipped June 2nd.

The plants of this early variety will be for sale after picking—probably during July and August, by

DAVID FIELDS.

Oak Road, Hammonton, N.J.

BROWN & MONROE,

Fruit & Produce
Commission Dealers,
73, 75, 77 Dixie St.

Providence, R. I.

Shipping Cards will be found at Union
Depot, Elm, and C. P. Hill's.

Berry Growers

TAKE NOTICE.

The undersigned begs leave to call your attention to a new fruit berry basket

HAMMONTON PLT.—

That he is making and has for sale. It is made to fit the standard 32 qt. crate
—60 pins to the crate—and is of good portion and shape, so the contents will not settle as much as in the ordinary basket. I am making but a limited number, so order early, to be sure of a supply. Samples to be given at the RE-PUBLICAN office, at Union Depot, and at Elvins' store. Try them.

W. HANCOCK,

Principal, Trenton, New Jersey.

Trenton Business College.

1st Annual Session begins
September 1st, 1858.

New and Elegant Apartments

In the Masonic Building.

The Best

Teachers,
Course of Study,
Equipment,
Buildings.

Accommodations more in the same than any other similar school.

Gymnasium Free to Students.

Send for Catalogue with full particulars to

A. J. EIDER, Principal,
Masonic Temple, Trenton, N.J.

Hammonton Shoe Store,

(Next to the Harness Shop.)

D. C. HERBERT,

Dealer in

Boots and Shoes

Of all kinds.

Custom Work and Repairing
NEATLY DONE.

Brass-Nail work—our own make—on hand, or made to order.

STEAM Laundry

Having added Steam Power and other conveniences, I am better prepared than ever to do all kinds of Laundry work in a satisfactory manner. Rates reasonable.

NATHAN ELLIS,

Battery Ave., Hammonton.

Warm Brown Bread.

Leave your orders for Brown Bread at Packer's Bakery before five o'clock on Saturday.

BEANS baked to order, or furnished if ordered by noon on Saturday.

THIS PAPER may be had at E. F.

Newspaper Advertising Bureau, on Spruce Street, Hammonton.

It may be had at NEW YORK.

is a weekly paper, published at Elwood, N.J.

POD FOR THOUGHT.

"A man's true worth is never known until he has given up his possessions to save his life."

"It is easy to add to things which have once been invented."

"In the world there are so few voices and so many echoes."

"A sensual disposition deforms the handsome features."

"Great truths are generally bought, not found by chance."

"Insanity is often the logic of an accurate mind overtaxed."

"He conquers a second time who conquers himself in victory."

"He who leaves nothing to lose, enriches himself the most."

"Love is immoral, when it is rooted in virtue, as virtue herself."

"The purest treasure mortal times afford is spotless reputation."

"Moderation is the silken string running through all virtues."

"Every man has just as much vanity as he wants understanding."

"Everyone loves power, even if they do not know what to do with it."

"Knowledge like religion must be experienced in order to be known."

"Divine vengeance comes with feet of lead, but strikes with hand of iron."

"Genuine suffering often jets best, for it knows no idle longing for tears."

"To meet under the tree of life, in heaven families must meet at the cross on earth."

"Ignorance is the curse of God. Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven."

"Women love always. When earth slips from them they take refuge in heaven."

"Of all things that man possesses, women alone take pleasure in being possessed."

"He needs no other rosary whose thread of life is strung with death and thought."

"Virtue dwells at the head of a river, to which we cannot get but by rowing against the stream."

"No life can be utterly miserable that is heightened by the laughter and love of one little child."

"True benevolence is to love all men. Recompense injury with justice, and kindness with kindness."

"He who, with good health, has a true friend, may laugh adversity to scorn and defy the world."

"Without publicity there can be no public spirit, and without public spirit every nation must decay."

"Flowers sweeten the air, rejoice the eye, link us with nature and innocence, and are something to love."

"Poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue. It is hard for an empty bag to stand upright."

"This is the present reward of virtuous conduct—that no unlucky consequence can oblige us to regret it."

"Great men should think of opportunity and not of time. Time is the excuse of feeble and puzzled spirits."

"The essence of education is the education of the body. Beauty and health are the chief sources of happiness."

"If you let trouble rest upon your soul like a hen upon her nest, may you expect the hatching of a large brood."

"Good qualities are the substantial riches of the mind; but it is good breeding that sets them off to advantage."

"Strive to be rich in knowledge. A man gets more than the value of whatever he gives in exchange for learning."

"A patient and humble temper gathers blessings that are marred by the peevish and overlooked by the aspiring."

"When a man is always attributing evil motives to people you cannot help recalling the adage, set a fox to catch a fox."

"A holy life that speaks when the tongue is silent, is either a constant attraction or a constant reproof to others."

"Justice exists independent of the law, and no statute can modify its principles, although it may effect attain-

"Any man may do a casual act of good nature, but a continuation of them shows in part the temperament of the individual."

"If you should boast that you never told the truth perhaps you would do it at that very moment for the first time in your life."

"There can be no excess to love, none to knowledge, none to beauty, when these attributes are considered in the purest sense."

"Venture not into the company of those that are infected with the plague; no, though thou think thyself guarded with an antidote."

"Like dogs in a wheel, birds in a cage, ambitious men still climb, with great labor, and incessant anxiety, but never reach the top."

"By utilizing selflessness greater good can often be done than by decrying it. Self is at the bottom of many good actions in their motives."

"He who wishes to secure the good of others has already secured his own. One forgoes everything to him who forgoes himself nothing."

"To pronounce a man happy merely because he is rich, is just as absurd as to pronounce a man healthy merely because he has enough to eat."

"The highest mark of esteem a woman can give is to ask his friendship; and the most signal proof of her indifference is to offer him her heart."

"Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematicians, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; moral, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend."

HORSE NOTES.

"Commodore Kilton's colt Freddie has been turned out and will not be seen again this season."

"A. J. Casatt has nominated several of his Stratford yearlings for the grand Prix de Paris of 1887."

"Nettie R., a trotter, was put to racing at the Kalmaroo meeting, and the odds fair to do well at the new track."

"It has been decided that the Fall meeting of the Kentucky Racing Association will open on September 14, and continue six days."

"Prixies from Italy purchased last week from Mr. Kearney, of Albany, N.Y., the b.m. Amilia C., record 2.194, by Dexter Bradford."

"Emma B. and Binghamton Girl have been matched for $500 to pace a race at Syracuse or Binghamton, N.Y., during the present month."

"In 1886 the Monmouth Park Association will give $150,000 in purses and added money. This will be the largest sum ever given by any association."

"The members of the Buffalo Driving Club will give a trotting meeting early in September. Somewhere between $5,000 and $10,000 will be hung up in prizes."

"John Croker has purchased of the executors of the estate of the late Dan Mance the ch.f. Witch (2), by imp. Mortimer, dam, Lady Wallenstein, by Lexington."

"R. Porter Ashe, the California turfman, has purchased a number of Kentucky youngsters, including the ch.f. Gold Sheaf (3), by Bullion, dam by imp. Glengarry."

"Dalmont, black horse, by Beaumont, dam by Pilot, Jr., was purchased at New Castle, Pa., recently by Elizur Smith, owner of Highlawn, Lee, Mass., for $2000."

"Phallas, Maxey Cobb, Majolica, Harry Wilkes and Trinket are expected to enter for the Rochester stake at $2500 each, with $1000 added by the association for each starter."

"Speaking about dust explosions, a case from Germany is worthy of notice. A sack of flour, falling down stairs, opened and scattered the contents in a cloud through the lower room, where a burning gas flame set fire to the dust, causing an explosion which lifted a part of the roof off the mill and broke almost all the windows. There can be no doubt that the majority of dust explosions are like mine disasters, to open lights, and, rushing forward to the enemy, and, bursting forward to the place where it fell, was slain. His body was found lying above the silver case."

"For more than a century the authenticity of the pithy dialogue between the spokesmen of the French and English guards at Fontenay was generally allowed. Lord Charles Hay, bat in hand, steps forward and says with a bow, 'Gentlemen of the French guards, fire.' Mr. d'Anterroche advances to meet him, and saluting him with the sword, says, 'Monsieur we never fire first, do you fire.' Unfortunately for this story, a letter first brought to light by Mr. Carlyle from Lord Charles Hay to his brother, Lord Tweeddale, written or dictated less than three weeks after the battle, has been preserved, in which he says: 'It was our regiment that attacked the French Guards, and when we came within twenty or thirty paces of them, I advanced before our regiment, drew to them, and told them we were the English Guards, and hoped they would stand still until we came up to them, and not swim the Scheld as they did.'"

"The management of the Poughkeepsie Driving Park have decided to abandon their projected meeting for August 11, 12, and 13, and will hold a meeting later in the fall. Hudson will go it alone, and retains the dates August 18, 19 and 20."

"The brood mare Adriatic died at W. M. Kenney's stock farm at Lexington, Ky., on June 13 from inflammation of the bowels and kidneys. Adriatic was a bay mare foaled in 1875, imported 1880, and was by Thoroughbred, dam Venice, by Stockwell."

"Lord Macaulay tells an anecdote of Michael Godfrey, the deputy governor of the Bank of England, who was standing by the side of William and under fire at the siege of Namur. Mr. Godfrey," said William, "you ought not to run these hazards, you are not a soldier; you can't run away to safety."

"Sir," answered Godfrey, "I ran no more hazard than Your Majesty." "Not so," said William; "I am aware it is my duty, and I made without presumptuous commit my life to God's keeping, but you—" While they were talking a cannon ball from the ramparts of Godfrey dead at the king's feet."

Napoleon stated at St. Helena that Desaix fell dead at Marango without a word. Thiers makes him say to Bonaparte, "Hide me, for it might dishearten the troops,"—the dying order of the Cossack Bourbon at the taking of Rome. The speech ordinarily given to Desaix and inscribed on his monument, is confessedly a fiction. What passed between him and Napoleon, when they first met upon the field, has been differently related. One version is that Desaix exclaimed, "The battle is lost;" and that Napoleon replied, "No, it is won; advance directly." That of M. Thiers is that a circle was hastily formed round the two generals, and a council of war held, in which the majority were for retreating. The First Consul was not of this opinion, and earnestly pressed Desaix for his, who then, looking at his watch, said: "Yes, the battle is lost; it is only three o'clock; there is time enough to gain one." For this again a parallel may be found. The Baron de Sirot, who commanded the French reserve at Roeroy, was told that the battle was lost. "No, no!" he exclaimed, "it is not lost; for Sirot and his companions have not yet fought; we can get in from the outside. On the left hand is the village of Stanley, a place of about 300 hundred inhabitants and the metropolis of the islands. The people living there are completely isolated from the rest of the world."

General Wisconsin.

"One of the greatest curiosities of the present day, found among the pines of Central Wisconsin, was discovered near Knowlton a few weeks ago. It was in the form of a petrified squirrel, about the size of a common squirrel, and was taken from the heart of a tree by some woodsmen. It was of a brownish color, as hard as a rock, and was 'as natural as life,' even to the kink in its long bushy tail. The curiosity was carefully packed and sent by William Mulholland, its owner to President Cleveland, from whom a personal letter of thanks was received last week by the sender, saying that it would be carefully preserved and placed in the public museum at Washington."

Equal parts of minced ham and hard-boiled egg make a very good sandwich.

Praises of the unworthy are felt by ardent minds as robbers of the deserty.

Histories make men wise; poets,

witty; the mathematicians, subtle;

natural philosophy, deep;

moral, grave;

logic and rhetoric, able to contend."

SCIENTIFIC.

"The first invention in photography in 1851 will delight the hearts of the amateur photographers of the 'relating film' and is made exactly like the common dry plate, except that the gelatine, instead of being put on a glass back, is made into a long sheet just the width of the desired plate. By this use a continuous picture of a landscape, for instance, can be made, which will cover half or a third of the whole of the horizon. The sheet is wound on a standard and placed in the camera, the first impression is taken, that part of the sheet is wound on another standard and by the same movement a fresh part is unwound, the direction of the camera is adjusted to take in the next portion of the landscape, the process being repeated as many times as desired. An attachment to the camera regulates the winding and unwinding process. The impression sheet can be kept undeveloped, of course, an indefinite length of time. When the pictures are printed the impressions are separated by a mere white line—else the lines of joining would be blurred and indistinct—but in mounting these can be trimmed away and the sections fitted together. To the amateur, to whose heart landscape photography is especially dear, this contrivance will be a source of great delight. Scientific and exploring expeditions will also find it of much benefit, as it will lessen the amount of paraphernalia to be carried. Although it has not yet been put on the market, some trifling scenes have been shown. They possess several good points above the common method."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

"Follow my white plumb," the traditional rallying cry of Horace IV, is quite consistent with Brontë's description of those reported by historians were never made at all. The Duke of Wellington did not say, "Up guard and to arms!" at Waterloo; he never took refuge in a square, and his "What will they say in England if we are beaten?" was addressed to some officers of his army, not a shattered regiment. The bear of his biographers, the chaplain-general, relates that, in the battle of the Nive (November, 1813), the duke rode up to the 85th regiment and said in his (the subaltern's) hearing: "You must keep your ground, my lad; for there is nothing behind you."

