AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A sufferer from Headache writes: "AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and a very constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly remove my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest pills I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers."
W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro., Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 8, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numerous instances as recommended by you, and have never known them fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPYPSIA they are invaluable."
J. T. HAYES.
Mexico, Texas, June 17, 1882.

THE REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOW, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience; until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the morbid habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

Concerning Mosquitoes.

Skeeters have the reputation of continuous application. To their poisonous profession; Never missing nightly session. Wearing out your life's existence By their practical persistence.

Would I had the power to veto Bills of every mosquito; Then I'd pass a peaceful summer, With no small nocturnal hummer Feasting on my circulation, For his regular potation.

O! that rascally mosquito! He's a fellow you must see to; Which you can't do if you're napping, But must ever more be slapping. Quite promiscuous on your features; For you'll seldom hit the creatures.

But the thing most aggravating, Is the cool and calculating Way in which he tunes his harpstring. To the melody of sharp stings; Then proceeds to serenade you, And successfully evade you.

When a skeeter gets though stealing, He sails upward to the ceiling; Where he sits in deep reflection How he perched on your complexion, Filled with solid satisfaction, At results of his extraction.

Would you know in this connection, How you may secure protection For yourself and city cousin? From these bites and from these buzzin' show your sense by quickly getting, For each window—skeeter netting.

—Anna A. Gordon.

A terrible cyclone swept up the Delaware Monday afternoon from Greenwich Point, wrecking the Major Reybold and other vessels on the river, unroofing and throwing down houses in Camden and Richmond, killing four persons and wounding fifty-eight. Five persons are missing. The storms left a trail of wreckage as far as Huntingdon Valley. The steamer "Major Reybold" was wrecked, its pilot drowned. Two streets in Camden were rendered impassable by the wrecks of houses. So far as we can learn this is the first of these storms to visit New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

For its soothing and grateful influence on the scalp, and for the removal and prevention of dandruff, Ayer's Hair Vigor has no equal. It restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, stimulates the growth of the hair, and gives it a beautiful, soft, glossy and silken appearance.

Side by side in the drug store stand Vinegar Bitters and the health-blasting preparations fied up with bad rum. Take your choice between the vital elixir and the deadly poisons. The one cures every disease of the stomach, bowels, liver and nerves, the others aggravate all human ailments. Vinegar Bitters strengthens, the others weaken.

The Naval Board, which is examining the plans and specifications for the proposed new cruisers, expects to be occupied with its work during the entire summer. SPELLING MATCH.—Can you spell? Well, yes; almost anybody can spell. Then spell this and make out what it means. If you can't, then pass it on to your next neighbor;

B-B-E-R-I-N-N-O-O-B-E-R-S-S-T-W. Don't say it out loud but just whisper in your pretty neighbor's ear, that if she will place these letters in their proper position she will have the world's great tonic, which will enrich her impoverished blood, put roses on her pale cheeks and make her strong and happy. De you ever see anything so narrow Will pass, on our journey through One of the millionths that bring us Still nearer the goal, good wife?
The glad anniversary morning Of our wedding, comes once more,
And its evening will find us still waiting,
Who had thought to have gone long before.

We are old, with a knowledge of the furrows That have plowed in your brow, once so fair;
I know by the crown of your bright alyce How has left in your once ravine hair; I know by the frown on the flowers That brightened our life as its dawn; I know by the grave in the churchyard, Where we counted our dead yesterday.

Your way has been humble and full-worn; Your guest has been trouble good wife—Pain, sunshine, more trials and sorrow, Have made up your record through life.
But may the thought of my dear one,
Your patience and sweet clinging love, Have made for me here such a harvest I have asked, "Is there brighter above?"

In life's winter, sweet will we be living; But his arms will be around me still.
What care we who have love and each other?
Who have proved each to each all in all?
His hand will be around me still.
Giving thanks, down the valley we go, For to love and grow old together—Is the highest bliss mortal can know.

Some children are still left to bless us,
And light on our hearts day by day;
In hope is not always fruition—We will strive to keep on the right way.
We have loved and have respect, but the harvest
That garners the world we await,
And happily we have talked Together the beautiful gaze.

SUSIE'S DIPLOMACY.

"If I had been born poor, instead of rich, I firmly believe my life would have been much happier," said Richard Maur with a sigh.

Richard was talking with a friend on a bench overlooking the sea. He would have been a remarkably handsome fellow, were it not for the discontent expression, which always clouded his face.

On the other hand, his companion, Arthur Benmore, was a plain looking man with nothing to redeem his eyes of comeliness but a bright pair of eyes, and a winning smile.

At first sight, women were struck by Richard's appearance; but after a time they gradually began to feel a preference for Arthur. Benmore, however, strongly, and made himself so agreeable.

To tell the truth, Richard was too proud and reserved—a fault for which his parents had no blame, for he had been a spoiled child.

"Do you really believe what you say, or do you only make that assertion to startle one?" asked Benmore in answer to his friend's remark. "I should like to know the looks of him. Do come, there is nobody at home; Edith has gone to see her aunt."

"Then I'll show you a way out of your trouble," said Benmore with his cheerful laugh. "Hand over all your wealth to me, retaining only a pound a week for your maintenance, and I will get on comfortably with the gold you desire, not to speak of being able to marry Susie."

"Your offer to relieve me of my wealth is extremely kind and considerate," said Richard, unable to repress a smile. "I admire the sacrifice you are willing to make for me; but on consideration I fear I cannot do without the money. If I had been accustomed to poverty it would have a different matter, but having been reared in luxury, I cannot resign my gold, even if it led me to destruction. The luxury have spoken of is necessary to my existence."

"I thought you would draw in your beams, old boy," Benmore said, "but you are not so easily frightened. You dearly love to grumble!"

"I have something to grumble about, I fancy," said Richard. "You ought to be the happiest fellow in the three kingdoms."
"Ought I?"

"Decidedly."

"Just let me know why."

"You wish me to answer you frankly, and won't take offense if I give you my real opinion?"

"Speak on, I promise I won't take offense at anything you say. I should like to see myself as others see me."

"Well, in the first place you are too proud, and think yourself superior to everybody. You fancy yourself ill-treated because the world doesn't value you as you value yourself. To tell the truth, your conceit stands in your way, Richard."

"Conceited and proud!" exclaimed Richard, coloring with anger. "You are utterly misunderstood my character. I am shy and diffident—"

"Shy and diffident?" cried Benmore, interrupting him. "You are nothing of the kind. Your sole reason for remaining silent is that you would rather retreat from making an agreeable remark than be obliged to deliver a foolish one. Now I rattle away, saying the first thing that comes into my head, and yet I am generally regarded as a very pleasant companion."

"That is what I am," returned Richard. "You say nothing very wise or witty, and yet you always manage to interest everybody."

"Because I try to please others and forget the existence of Arthur Ben-more," said his friend. "But, joking apart, old fellow, what is amiss with you this morning?"

Richard sighed more heavily than before, digging holes with his case in the sand.

While staying at the seaside he had fallen hopelessly in love, but his natural ambition had been crushed by the loss of his father's fortune. He had been a wealthy man, but he had lost it all in the hands of a speculator, who had ruined him. He had been a wealthy man, but he had lost it all in the hands of a speculator, who had ruined him. He had been a wealthy man, but he had lost it all in the hands of a speculator, who had ruined him.

"I don't know, I am sure," returned Susie, "if I could cry if I was in your place. The man ought to propose after all the attention he has used to pay me."

"Susie!"

"Don't look so cross, cried her friend. "You know I'm true. He did take up your time and lead people to think he was serious. It is shameful of a man to treat a girl as he has treated you. I will say what I think—there He is a mean thing, and I should like to tell him so to his face."

Now it happened that Miss Susie was sitting opposite a looking glass, and happening to lift her eyes she saw Mr.
Richard peering in at the door. "Oh, Richard, you are keeping from me. Have you seen Mr. Maur lately?" she asked, abruptly.

"Mr. Maur? I am crying about him," said Richard, coloring with anger.

"I don't know, I am sure," returned Susie, "if I could cry if I was in your place. The man ought to propose after all the attention he has used to pay me."

"Susie!"

be in a position to marry, than the long and low friend to expatriate his social happiness.

Perhaps a few judicious words might bring the laggard in love to the point of "Oh," said his friend, with a wide smile, "the wind that I had my anxieties, old boy. But you don't mean to say you entertain such unpleasant ideas? I could not think so lightly of Susie."

"Because you know she is only waiting for you to make a home for her, your case is utterly different. A man who has the satisfaction of knowing that he is loved for himself alone."

"Bah!" cried his friend contemptuously. "You either do not love the girl, or you are a bigger fool than I take you for. Strange how people who have no troubles will go off to the world to make them. Well, I am off to get some luncheon, and you coming?"

No, Richard would stay where he was. He felt rather glad to be alone with his thoughts.

"Fanny, your hand-kerchiefs, he was as utterly miserable as any mortal with such advantages could be. His money seemed to stand between him and happiness, and yet he would not have sacrificed it for any consideration. He valued it so much that he feared it might have the same value in the eyes of the girl he loved. What if it instead of giving him his hand without her heart?"

Edith Palmer was comparatively rich, and he knew she loved pleasure.
She had often told him as much, and complained of the dullness of her life.
He remembered how her cheeks had flushed and her eyes sparkled with excitement when he had spoken of the gay world of fashion, or described the dilettante pleasures he had seen.

"No, I will not ask her to be my wife, he told himself with intense bitterness. "My money is too great a temptation for any woman to resist, and I would not offer it if she didn't love me, and I would discover it afterward, and be wretched for life. I will leave it—so soon as possible and try to get her."

He had risen now and turned his back upon the sea, and some children who were playing on the sand-gazed after him in surprise, wondering what made that big man look so cross. He certainly had anything but an agreeable expression on his face as he walked along nibbling the ends of his long monarchs.

"Mr. Maur," said somebody at his elbow, in a clear, young voice.
"Oh, it is you, Jack?" returned Richard. "Where are you off to now?"

Jack was Edith Palmer's brother, and Richard had known him since his kindness, completely winning his boyish heart.

"I was looking for you," said Jack.
"Come up to the house and see Joe."
"What?" asked Benmore in answer to his friend's remark. "I should like to know the looks of him. Do come,
there is nobody at home; Edith has gone to see her aunt."

"Then I'll show you a way out of your trouble," said Benmore with his
