Vol. 52

HAMMONTON, N. J., SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1914

No. 33

Only two more weeks of school vacation.

Miss Gertrude Dietsch has returned from a two weeks' visit in Phila.

The Senior Editor is building quite an addition to his residence.

Dr. Chas. Cunningham's papers have been filed for the position of Coroner.

Miss Rosie Kufenacht returned from a very pleasant visit in Atlantic City.

Miss Emma Gentel has accepted a position with "Grocers' World," in Philadelphia.

Miss Olive Small will enter the Children's Hospital, Philadelphia, to become a nurse.

Eleven motorists were stopped at Elm, Sunday, and contributed to the State treasury.

George O. Bobst landed the contract to paint the Rosedale and Oakdale school houses.

Miss Carrie Nelson, of Philadelphia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. D. W. C. Russell, on Valley Ave.

Albert Walther, captain of a Chautauque tent crew, is taking in Hammonton between dates.

William P. Walther is expected to-day, for a visit. His wife and two children have been here for a week.

A Sunday School party from Elwood picnicked at Hammonton Park on Wednesday. Of course they enjoyed it.

Little Ha-Ha Council will hold their candy and apron sale on Saturday afternoon, 29th, in Simons' Candy Kitchen.

Miss Dorothy Birdsall returned from a very pleasant trip, spent with relatives at Baltimore and Bay Shore, Maryland.

Miss Myrtle Sooy is spending her vacation at home. She is a student-nurse in the Children's Hospital, Philadelphia.

Andrew K. Bernhouse, with his wife and little son from Columbia, South Carolina, are visiting his parents and other relatives.

Miss Ida G. Hoyt returned to West Philadelphia on Wednesday, after about five weeks with Hammonton relatives and friends.

Miss Mary Saxton is spending some time with her sister, Mrs. W. B. Holmes, in Iowa, who is recuperating after a serious surgical operation.

John H. Myrose returned from North Carolina on Thursday a week, having about completed his big lumbering contract there. He expects to go back, however.

Miss Gertrude B. Oliver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Oliver, died on Tuesday last, at their home in Collingswood, aged 23 years. The family are well known here, where Mr. O. spent his boyhood years.

A postal was received from Mrs. M. L. Jackson this week, telling of the good times she and the girls are having in camp at High Point, N. J. They arrived with ten, and on Sunday there were twenty-three to dinner.

At the M. E. Church, to-morrow. Preaching by Pastor Shaw, morning and evening. Sunday School at noon. Class meeting Tuesday evening, 7.45. Prayer service on Thursday evening, 7.45.

St. Mark's Church, 11th Sunday after Trinity, Holy Communion, 7.30; Morning Prayer, 10.30; Sunday School, 11.45; Evening Prayer, 7.30. St. Bartholomew's Day, Aug. 24, Morning Prayer and Holy Communion, 7.00; Evening Prayer, 4.30.

Thursday afternoon, as Mrs. H. O. Packard and her mother-in-law, Mrs. H. W. Packard, were driving down Bellevue, a Maxwell car came around the corner to the opposite side of the street, swiping off the left rear rubber-tired wheel of the light buggy, nearly dumping the occupants to the ground. The men were taken before Squire Strouse; and finding that they could accomplish nothing by bluff, agreed to settle for damages. It was a narrow escape for the ladies, and fortunate that their little horse did not take fright and run away.

Rev. W. J. Cusworth and family will start for Pennsylvania next Monday, for their vacation.

Miss Minnie B. Newcomb is home from West Virginia, for a short visit. She is accompanied by her friend and fellow-worker, Miss Jackson; also Doctor and Mrs. Hunter, from Lykens Valley, W. Va.

Probably at least a hundred Hammontonians took in Egg Harbor's three-day carnival, Saturday to Monday. They report the parade and fireworks as very good, but the lunch counters and drinking water as very scarce.

The Presbyterians and Baptists will unite to-morrow in the Baptist Church. Pastor Cusworth's topics will be: 10.30, "The Parable of the Sower"; Children's talk, "Lessons from the Penny," 6.45, Y. P. S. C. E. meeting. At 7.45, "Modern Paganism."

Thomas Wells, the pioneer store keeper and postmaster at Rosedale, died on Friday last. He was well known, and esteemed by neighbors and hosts of friends. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. J. Cusworth, on Tuesday; burial at Bates' Mills.

Three automobiles went wrong last Sunday, at Elvins' corner, one crashing into and wrecking a fire hydrant, giving the engineer several hours of labor to put it into commission, and cutting off the water supply in that section for several hours. The car was not seriously damaged,—its occupants escaped unharmed. The other two machines came together head on, damaging both.

My friend, have you heard of the town of Yawn
On the banks of the river Slow,
Where blooms the Waitawhile flower fair,
Where the Somethine-rother scents the air
And the soft Goosays grow?

It lies in the valley of Whatsthose,
In the province of Letherside;
That tired feeling is native there—
It's the home of the listless Idoncare,
Where the Puttoffs abide.

The Puttoffs never make up their minds,
Intending to do it to-morrow;
And so they dolor from day to day
Till business dwindles and profits decay
And their days are full of sorrow.

Rev. David T. Davies died very suddenly on Friday, Aug. 14th, at the George Nugent Home, Germantown, Penna., aged 80 years. Mr. Davies and family were for some years residents in Hammonton, he being for a time pastor of the Baptist Church. A native of Wales, he came to this country during early manhood. He was a man of uncommon culture, one of the best posted men we ever knew upon constitutional subjects. His wife, two sons and one daughter survive him.

Town Council Meeting.

Council held a special meeting Wednesday evening, all present but Mr. Holland.

Contractor Spear having submitted name of bondman, it was favorably recommended by Finance Committee.

The sidewalk on lower Central Avenue being covered with sewer dirt, the attention of Commission was called to it.

Highway Committee was authorized to place three signs near Elvins' corner, also red flags overhead, in view of the recent auto accidents at that point.

Advice from Solicitor in regard to dogs at large, was to the effect that both the law and ordinance empower Council to employ a man to catch them, and kill them if not redeemed, and to pay a salary to the catcher.

Woody Cappuccio was elected as catcher, to seize all dogs running at large without a muzzle.

Also, Council was advised that money on hand in the Highway fund can be used for permanent improvement of Bellevue, in conjunction with State and County.

Solicitor is preparing ordinance in regard to connecting with sewerage, making it obligatory for all along the line to do so, and fixing rental, etc.

The election of a disposal plant engineer was deferred until next Wednesday evening.

Council expects to receive the Sewerage Commission's report at its next meeting.

THE SAILOR AND HIS FLOWER

Mr. Shepherd, the conservator of the Botanical Gardens at Liverpool, gives the following account of the introduction of that beautiful flowering shrub, the fuchsia, in English greenhouses and parlor windows.

Old Mr. Lee, a nurseryman and gardener near London, wellknown fifty or sixty years ago, was one day showing his variegated treasures to a friend, who suddenly turned to him and declared:

"Well you have not in your collection a prettier flower than I saw this morning at Wapping."

"No? And, pray, what was this wonder like?"

"Why, the plant was elegant, and the flowers were in rose, like ours, from the pendant branches; their color the richest crimson, and in the centre a fold of deep purple."

Particular directions being asked and given, Mr. Lee posted off to Wapping, where he at once perceived the plant was a new arrival from some part of the world. He saw and admired. Entering the home, he said:

"My good woman, this is a nice plant, I should like to buy it, but I see it is not for me." "Come, sit down, we must have tea," said his wife, who had brought him from the West Indies by his husband, who has now left again, and I must keep it for his sake."

"But I must have it."

"No, sir, I am sorry—emptying his pocket-here are gold, silver and copper!"

(This stock was "something more than eight guineas").

"Well-day! but this a power of money, sir, and the plant is mine."

And, my good dame, you shall have one of the first young plants I rear, to keep for your husband's sake."

"Alack-alack!—you are right."

A coach was called, in which was safely deposited our florist and his seemingly dear purchase. His first work was to pull off and utterly destroy every vestige of blossom and bud, and then to burn those, which were forced in bark beds and hot-beds, and were afterward reduced and subdivided. Every effort was used to multiply the plant.

By the commencement of the nextowering season, Mr. Lee was the dearest object of admiration, and the fuchsia plants, all giving promise of blossom. The two which opened first were removed into the showhouse.

And, my good dame, shall have one of the first young plants I rear, to keep for your husband's sake."

"Hem! This is a new thing, my lady—pretty, is it not?"

"Pretty! 'Tis beautiful! It's price?"

"A guinea, and the plant is sold."

And on the spot two guineas stood proudly in her ladyship's boudoir.

"My dear Charlotte, where have you got it?"—etc., etc.

"Oh, 'tis a new thing! I saw it at Lee's, 'tis very beautiful, is it not?"

"Pretty, is it not?"

There was another dash.

The visitor's horse raced off to the suburb. A third flower plant stood on the spot when the first had been taken.

The second guinea was paid, and the second chosen fuchsia adorned the drawing-room of her ladyship.

The scene was repeated, as new-comers saw and were attracted by the beauty of the flower.

Now charlots fit to the gates of Mr. Lee's nursery ground. Two fuchsias—youthful and bursting into healthy flower—were constantly seen on the same spot in his shop.

He selected not to gladden that faithful sailor's wife by the promised gift. But the flowerling season closed, three hundred golden guineas clinked in the pocket of the prince of the realm about the waist of the eagle, skill and perseverance of old Mr. Lee.

VERY RESOURCEFUL.

Congressman Warren Gurd of Ohio, admitted at a recent social affair when the talk topic turned to resourcefulness. He said he was reminded of a person he knew.

Nestor, a making up man, rounds of the servant girl eventually drifted into the home of the Smiths. She had been on the job about two days when Mrs. Smith, showing some tokens of agitation, called her into the kitchen.

"Look here, and there!" exclaimed the mistress, pointing at the furniture. " Didn't I tell you to dust the room?"

"'Tis a shabby room," replied the maid, "but I was washin' pots, scrubbin' beans, shellin' peas, scrubbin' out the kitchen, waterin' flowers, an' washin' the dog, and didn't think to do it."

"I've already told you to do it at once!" responded the mistress. "I'm expecting company any minute, and that dust will disgrace me!"

"That's all right, ma'am," said the resourceful Nestor, "just pull down the blinds, and when they come in and the blinds are shut, they won't see it."

CATS AND DOGS.

There seemed to be a natural antipathy between cats and dogs, descending from antiquity and now carefully nourished by the modern small boy, in a hospital in Chicago there was a large cat with impious ways, and the little boy, whose face that included the buildings and bid defiance to dogs on the sidewalk below. Many a boy has been driven狂 by Tom's spitting and growling, but none could catch him, for he was too quick—every time you'd catch him, he'd run away.

A minute later, her attention was attracted to little Jimmie James, who stood at the foot of the class putting his fingers in his mouth, and his face reddened and cheeks distended.

"What is the matter, Jimmy?" asked the teacher in alarm. "What on earth are you doing?"

"Nothing," Miss Mary, "was the instant response of Jimmie. Just killin' Chinaman."

NOT YET TIME TO QUIT.

"GORDELLO" AND OLIVER.

The conversation the other night turned to the various species of the younger generation, when J. A. Oliver, president of the Federal League, recalled the great feedfest of little Billy.

Some time ago little Billy, accompanied by his mother, went to a family luncheon. Mrs. Telfair informed her family, "Well, I simply can't believe it's fifteen years since the Woman's Club was founded. It seems only yesterday that we tried to do the best we could for the world. He saw and admired. Entering the home, he said:

"My good woman, this is a nice plant, I should like to buy it, but I see it is not for me."

"Come, sit down, we must have tea," said his mother, who had brought him from the West Indies by his husband, who has now left again, and I must keep it for his sake."

"But I must have it."

"No, sir, I am sorry—emptying his pocket-here are gold, silver and copper!"

(This stock was "something more than eight guineas").

WANTED A LITTLE PRIZE HIMSELF.

Following a disastrous fire in a Western city, many men and women gathered to look at the ruins. Some of the men, seeing that a wall near which they were standing was top-heavy had to get out of the way, and narrowly escaped being crushed.

"Look here, and there!" exclaimed the mistress, pointing at the furniture. " Didn't I tell you to dust the room?"

"'Tis a shabby room," replied the maid, "but I was washin' pots, scrubbin' beans, shellin' peas, scrubbin' out the kitchen, waterin' flowers, an' washin' the dog, and didn't think to do it."

"I've already told you to do it at once!" responded the mistress. "I'm expecting company any minute, and that dust will disgrace me!"

"That's all right, ma'am," said the resourceful Nestor, "just pull down the blinds, and when they come in and the blinds are shut, they won't see it."

"That's the way with a man."

"How now?"

"He often said he would lay down his life for me."

"That's all right, ma'am," said the resourceful Nestor, "just pull down the blinds, and when they come in and the blinds are shut, they won't see it."

SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1914

The two unfortunate collisions at the corner of Bellevue Avenue and Main Road, last Sunday, emphasized the need of protection there. A square corner, occupied by large store buildings which hide each street from the other for a considerable distance, until the team or car is right on the turn, it seems to us that nothing but a cool-headed man can prevent frequent accidents. Signs and flags would be good if all drivers were competent and careful; but they are not, as you know.

An illustration of the congestion sometimes witnessed on that corner, about five o'clock on Thursday afternoon, an automobile, a bicycle, and two wagons were going up; one automobile and a motorcycle with side-car were coming down; they met near the corner, and all evidently desired to make the turn at the same time, and for a few minutes there was doubt. Fortunately, there were no reckless drivers in the muddle, everybody kept goodnatured, and all finally moved away safely. It does not always end thus happily.

To be sure, it would cost the Town a couple of dollars per day to keep an officer up there; but with thousands of dollars and possibly human lives at stake, we cannot see why any one should hesitate to place a guard because of the outlay. Give them a man on Saturday and Sunday during the next few weeks.

PULPIT TOPICS

THE FORMER DAYS.

"Call to remembrance the former days"—Heb. 10:32.

The story of the Feeding of the Five Thousand and of the Last Supper—of the Church Year—its lesson is plain. It is summed up in the words of the Collector: "O God, Whose never-failing Providence orders all things both in heaven and earth, we thank thee for the manifold mercies and the manifold renewals of our great Provider, which finds expression in the fourth petition of the Lord's Prayer: 'Give us day by day our daily bread.'

Our feelings of dependence are further strengthened by the fact that this miracle of feeding was repeated twice over by our Lord. There was a miraculous feeding of the five thousand, and, somewhat later, one of the four thousand. Both these events are recorded in the former Matthew and Luke report also the latter. So that the attentive reader of the Gospels comes upon this realistic instance, six times repeated, of how the "never-failing Providence of God supplies for our bodily needs" such things as are profitable for us."

Now there are certain scholars who find great similarities in the accounts of these two feedings that they claim this must have been a case of plagiarism, and that the evangelists must have made the mistake of including in their Gospels two separate accounts of one and the same miracle. For them the Gospel lesson of today is still more difficult.

But there are other, more strenuous attempts that are in the spirit of the original question, and that the critics themselves must have made the mistake of including in their Gospels two separate accounts of one and the same miracle.

Others will say:

"How suitable and illuminating all this becomes when we apply it to the lives of our children! How often, when doubts and difficulties and sorrows arise, we fall to call to remembrance the former days. And what days they are! What a history is ours, as far as we are concerned! What a past rises up to call us blessed—what a 'miracle-sustained' history redounds before us, as far as eye can reach."

Then, what Spirit dwells within these?

What a Father's smile is thine, What a Saviour died to win to thee, Child of heaven, should thou remember?"

And the teaching of Jesus concerning the kingdom that was to be set up by God on earth were designed to bring the thoughts of His hearers about the matter. Many of them sensed and set before their minds the thought of a far more glorious kingdom than they had anticipated.

And they knew that the coming king would be a representative of God and armed with divine authority. But what did they expect? What did they expect when this man, who was not even a master king, said, "I am the King of Heaven?"

Now there are certain scholars who find great similarities in the accounts of these two feedings that they claim this must have been a case of plagiarism, and that the evangelists must have made the mistake of including in their Gospels two separate accounts of one and the same miracle.

But there are other, more strenuous attempts that are in the spirit of the original question, and that the critics themselves must have made the mistake of including in their Gospels two separate accounts of one and the same miracle.

The Disciples.

The apostles, who had seen their Master, not so very long ago, feed a still greater multitude with a small number of provisions, perhaps somewhere in this same wilderness, could yet ask this surprised, perplexed and doubting question, because they failed to call to remembrance the former days?

Not many days or weeks before, at great host of more than five thousand people, who had forgotten food and home in listening to the gracious words that fell from the Saviour's lips, had been miraculously fed with a wider store of fine barley bread, and two small fishes, thus experiencing for themselves the truth of the saying, "See ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness; and then of the rest will I speak unto you."

"There the Lord himself had asked Phillip: 'Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?' And we can easily understand how Phillip could fail to compute that even two hundred pounds of bread would not suffice him. And he had discovered a boy in the company with five barley loaves and two small fishes, could not sit at his feet: 'What art thou? Thou art a prophet; therefore we shall be clothed?'"

But when some new danger or difficulty appears, all is forgotten, and we turn to our own affairs as usual. Some of them not content with slinging the invitation abusively towards those who brought it, and finally killed them.

The persons who had been invited paid no attention, even when the king sent to them a second time to tell them that the feast was all ready, and when they had turned away, we sorrow even as the others that have no hope. "What shall we eat? What shall we drink?"

And there is good reason to hope that all Europe will be turned over to the Gentiles, and that the world will be given to them, as the world was given to the Israelites (Exodus 10:17) and the Lord himself.

The persons who had been invited paid no attention, even when the king sent to them a second time to tell them that the feast was all ready, and when they had turned away, we sorrow even as the others that have no hope. "What shall we eat? What shall we drink?"

And there is good reason to hope that all Europe will be turned over to the Gentiles, and that the world will be given to them, as the world was given to the Israelites (Exodus 10:17) and the Lord himself.

And now, so short a time afterwards, with a similar emergency confronting them, they act as though they had never heard such a thing as an advertising feedlot, and perplexity lay hold on them, and helplessly they ask: "From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness?" They did not call to remembrance the former days, they did not recall the former miracle.

Israel.

You hear them were Israelites indeed, like descendants of their fathers, whose history, in its main, is one of constant fighting, calling to remembrance the former days: "God may have divided the Red Sea for us; yet no sooner are they on the other side, than, because there is no water to drink, they murmur against Moses and count, that they must perish for thirst, crying, 'Is the Lord among us or not? Or, to adduce still nearer parallel, God had once done this for us, and now, for us, yet for all this even Moses himself cannot believe that He will provide for all that multitude.' "The people," he says, "are six thousand footmen, and the Israelites are only a whole month. The flock, the flock and herds, the flock for them to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together, even as a hen gathers her own brood under her wings, and ye would not?" (Exodus 13: 34.)

The Kingdom of Heaven is like—"Matthew calls it 'the Kingdom of Heaven,' and Luke call it 'the Kingdom of God.' Jesus had a great deal to say about the Kingdom of Heaven, and He tried to explain its nature by quite a number of parables, but He never said just whether that is true or not, the man had not tried to do honor to the feast by appearing in suitable attire."

He is a type of a large class of persons in our own land, who think that their own righteousness will be accepted by God, and that they will be justified at last because they have done the best they could, or at least, think they have.

Matthew appointed one, and only one means of justification, and He cannot accept any other. He has invited all men "had and good" to the marriage supper of the Lamb; but only those who are willing to put on the robe of Christ's righteousness will be allowed to partake of the feast.

"Many are called, but few chosen."

That is the only answer we get to the question, "What is the Kingdom of Heaven?"

What is the Kingdom of Heaven?

Matth. 22: 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"O Jerusalem, Jezreel, and Bethel, come to the wedding-feast."—The King James Version.

One had not thought it worth while to change his clothes. Perhaps he was a more respectable person than many of the other and his everyday dress, still nearer parable, God had once done this for us, and now, for us, yet for all this even Moses himself cannot believe that He will provide for all that multitude." "The people," he says, "are six thousand footmen, and the Israelites are only a whole month. The flock, the flock and herds, the flock for them to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together, even as a hen gathers her own brood under her wings, and ye would not?" TYPES OF MEN.

During the past ten days I have been studying "types" of men very carefully, and have become intensely interested. Thinking that others might like the same sort of thinking, I have decided to embody a limited amount of it in this article. The first type which I decided to study I found at the Reading Station, engaged in berry business. He had sold several crates of fruit when it was discovered that they were not honestly packed. The berries on top of the box were as fine as ever seen in any market, but about two-thirds of the lower part of the box was filled with sticks, leaves, and any other old thing he could lay his hands on. When the fraud was discovered, an officer was called and he was very politely, but quite emphatically, informed that the offence was a very grave one, and might put him behind the bars in the State prison for a term of years. When he saw the prison-door swing open he soon wailed, and begged to be let off. He had been caught red-handed in the very act, and there was no possible escape for him except in the most abject begging. After a lot of parleying, it was agreed that if he would make ample restitution for the wrong he had done, he would be let off for this time. He did this to the fullest extent suggested, and as expeditiously as possible.

This man is a good representative of a type found in Hammonton. They think that any sort of crookedness, even to the obtaining of money under false pretenses, is justifiable, provided they are not caught at it. When caught, they are the most abject beggars to be let off, just for this time, on earth.

The rule is, that these are ignorant men. Wrong training, or lack of training, in early life, is responsible for their conduct. An enlightened Christian civilization, such as we boast, ought soon to teach them better business morals.

The second type of men I have been studying is almost everywhere present. We do not need to go out of Hammonton to find him. He is a prime factor in the commercial, civic, and even religious life of this very-strenuous-age—in which we live. How to deal with him, and yet maintain our rights and discharge our honest obligations to our fellow men, is a mighty big problem. Many a man whose principles are entirely right, and whose aims and purposes are pure and good, has looked this problem squarely in the face, and after long-continued study become more and more perplexed, and finally laid down to be deliberately run over by men for whom he had no respect.

One thing may be said for the man who through the bottom of berry boxes and in other ways as petty and mean robs you of what is honestly your own and feels that the robbery is legitimate and honest if only he is not caught at it. He is a very little man, too little to carry any influence with him in any intelligent community. You never find such a man running for Mayor of the town in which he lives, or posing as the most popular citizen of the whole state in which he lives. He is entirely too little for things of that kind, and has sense enough to know it. Not so with the second type of men we are studying. He is a very big man, at least in his own estimation. His methods are more gentle than the methods of the berry-box man, but he gets there just the same. His plan is to knock you down without your knowing that you are being knocked down, to rob you without your knowing you are being robbed. He very often poses as your best friend, while at the same time he is trying to break your back if you chance to dissent from any of his ideas. The trouble with this type of man is, that he has gone dollar-mad. How to get the dollar, and how to keep it after he has got it, are the big questions with him. With the berry-box man, he thinks the dollar not only the biggest, but the only thing on this earth. The only difference is that he gets the dollar by a little different process. More later.

P. S. The Trust Magnates are proving themselves human hogs, willing to devour the substance of the people on the slightest pretext. They are forcing the producer's price down and the consumer's price up at one and the same time, for the sole purpose of robbing the people and increasing their own dividends. From this on it will be easier to enact and enforce anti-trust legislation. Already a brighter day is dawning for the people of this country. Give the brutes rope enough, and they will hang themselves too dead to be resurrected.
