Joitings Abroad.
London, August 24, 1878.
Many years ago there was a plague in London—a terrible plague that raged for many months, killing thousands and depopulating whole districts. London has never fairly got rid of this plague, though it has assumed a milder and less deadly form. In fact it rarely proves fatal now, but produces a mild hallucination in which the victim imagines or dreads constant pursuit from enemies who thirst for blood. The great London plague as it now exists is fearsome, wicked, relentless, cruel fear. They are every where; in the beds, in the houses, in the streets, in the parks, in the trains, and I sometimes think in the air. They are not numerous enough to cause a war of extermination to be waged against them, and yet very annoying. They not only disturb your rest, but they introduce themselves when you least expect them. It takes all the poetry and musing out of you when admiring a beautiful painting or lingering around some noble monument or stately ruin, to be brought back suddenly to a sense of physical annoyance and discomfort. You may rub and scratch till you are eyed suspiciously by your fellows, but the only effectual way is to betake yourself to some lonely, unrequented place, and while breathing threatenings and slaughter institute a still hunt, and then unless you are very careful you will have your trouble for your pains. The first night the writer spent in London will long be remembered as one of wretchedness, and spent in wondering what fears were even made for. As soon as it was light he endeavored to divert his mind by teaching them how to walk and schottisch, and then, after tiring them thoroughly, initiated them into the mysteries of the London launcers by sticking a pin through them. Truly London is a wonderful place.

London is also cursed with another plague, beggars. Beggars of all grades and shades; from the little walf that runs by your side to the sturdy tramp who would rather beg than work. I saw a man the other day spread out alongside a wall with highly polished boots, clean white shirt and smart neck tie, begging pennies with the utmost composure. Another meeting one of the same profession whom he did not know, and of whom he asked who was told that "he was working up that side of the street himself didn't want to be crowded." "Strong, hearty young men ask to be allowed to black your boots for which they receive a penny." Men and women selling matches, cheap views of buildings, pictures and toy books, bunches of lavender and other herbs, constantly and persistently importuning you to buy. If you ask for information, or receive any directions about the city, you are expected to see the giver. Wanting to know the location of a certain building, I asked a boy who told me where to find it and offered to show me which I refused and passed on. After wandering from one object of interest to another I came near the building when I heard a voice exclaim "It is just over there, sir," and on turning round found the same boy had followed me for several squares in hopes of a reward. They are cripples, they are paralytics, they are blind, they are deaf, they are sick. They are abominable.

Speaking of cripples, I visited Chelsea Hospital the other day, the home for disabled soldiers in her Majesty's service, who having given the best years of their lives in their country's service are here provided for at Gov't expense. The buildings cover about 38 acres and the grounds and gardens attached to them many more. It contains at the present time about 500 inmates, and many an old and war scarred veteran finds here a quiet and comfortable home, where they are well taken care of, and which many of them prefer to barding their friends. They are at liberty to go and come when they please, and each is allotted garden space to cultivate what he chooses. A large room used as a chapel is hung with old and tattered battle flags, battle scenes and the portraits of many of England's most celebrated generals. There is a similar institution for sailors—Greenwich Hospital.

A subject that lies next to the heart of a stranger in London is his stomach, and how and where to supply it. There are plenty of places, however, from the fancy and high-priced restaurants, with plenty of dishes and little to eat, to the common coffee and chop houses, where you can get a tolerable meal at a reasonable price, but as far as my experience goes I can live much better in Philadelphia or New York for the same money. You cannot get in London what may be called a good dinner for less than 4 or 5 shillings, ($1.50) and 25 cents at the common houses does not give you half the variety you can get at home. Meats of all kinds are very high; you cannot get sirloin steak for less than 25 or 35 cents per pound, and nearly every article of household necessity sells at considerable advance on home prices, and when you come to compare wages—the English mechanic and laborer has a very small margin at the end of the week for incidental or luxuries, even if he has regular employ out of which there is nearly as much complaint here as in the States, and work is not to be had for the asking. American merchants and business men are not the only ones that are falling. They are "stopping down and out" here every month, and banks are crumbling everywhere, though you hear little or nothing of these things from the papers. For some reason the news of news is kept back, and the space filled up with long winded and wordy dissertations on the Eastern acquisition and triumphant. On Saturday, (Aug. 23rd) the freedom of the city was conferred on Earl Brownlow and Salisbury with grand military and civil honors, at Guildhall, and a banquet at the Mansion House. "Easy" is in everybody's mouth, and his pictures of every conceivable style in every shop window, and Cyprus—well, they don't know what to do with it now they've got it. H.

Our Washington Letter.
WASHINGTON, D. C. Aug. 19, 1878.
War with Mexico and yellow-jack, "the pestilence that stalketh in darkness and waiteth at noon-day," are oftentimes heard canvassed, while matters financial, political, social and moral all contribute to relieve the fatigues of the mid summer season here. McKinzie's rumored invasion of Mexico, with a considerable force carrying above 100,000 of ammunition per capita, had not been confirmed this morning. But the report obtains general credence, even among officials, about the War Department, who have the best of data upon which to base the probabilities. While Cabinet officials are bound by international etiquette to keep up the appearance of believing in the assurance of co-operation on the part of Diaz, their private opinion seems to lean decidedly in the other direction; and the prevalent opinion is that, public sentiment across the line will force Diaz to a fight with us on this matter. Whatever his personal inclinations, it is doubted here whether he could resist his present position any length of time should he seem to approve our invasion of Mexican territory. His representatives here affect to believe that something serious will grow out of the present complication. Hon. Sherman should McKinzie's crossings be affirmed; but it is evident that they are uneasy over the situation, and all are looking to the development of the next few days, on the Rio Grande, with ill concealed anxiety.

The yellow fever ravages have been frequently discussed in Cabinet meetings, and the law of humanity will be followed in rendering aid as can be given. While there is no excitement, everybody seems to think it good to clean up and keep clean, at least till the frost comes.

Louisiana has not improved the reputation acquired a few months ago through Anderson, Weber, Mr. Jenks, and so on, for "wound of the witness" she contributed to Potter's Committee by the performances of L-ete. As before stated, it seems the general sentiment that, any official, high or low, reduced to the alternative of being vindicated by any of the disreputable crowd, might as well go into bankruptcy at once. As to the managers of this mud machine it seems the impression that they can't hurt themselves, whatever they do; and if they must keep up the farce through the season, Lucie answers as well as anybody else to while away the time.

Restoring a priori the fact that one has repeatedly boxed the financial compass, clearing at one bound the gulf separating honest money from practical repudiation, as Thurman has done, within the past four years, would hardly seem to command them for a position where their influence upon finances must prove potent for good or evil. But it seems Democracy will willingly pay anything demanded as the price of an alliance with the factions outside of the two old parties, including the Greenbackers proper, the socialists and communists; and Thurman's efforts are now directed to the task of squaring his views that they may clash with none of those popular with possible allies.

The low estimate placed on the intelligence of its readers by a large portion of the Democratic press of the country, and its indifference to a reputation for truth and ordinary sagacity, is shown in the columns of scurrilous abuse and blackguard assertion with which it seeks to stem the tide of popularity now setting so strongly Grantward. No reader of the newspapers has forgotten the storm of billingsgate let loose on President Grant in 1875, and subsequently up to the very day he walked out of the White House as Hayes came in. Waterston was here, and had seen the President "through a glass of 'Old Stag' it was estimated darkly," and instead of the phenomena of snakes, etc., usual under such circumstances, Grant appeared to his disordered vision on horseback in the similitude of Cassar.

In the face of the assurance of Democratic papers all over the country that Grant would never voluntarily leave the White House, and that it was a part of the "Radical programme to crown Grant King," he slipped gladly and quietly out of the seat he had kept warm for Hayes, without the slightest show of compulsion. One would have supposed their editors would have, from very shame, forever adjured the rule of prophetic. Not so, however. The same old startling headlines of "Ulcers the 1st," and "Infection of nose," that did duty every week during the last year of Grant's term, are no common in the average Democratic sheet of to-day, seem to afford just as much enjoyment, and are believed just as implicitly to occur daily forecast the future than, as now.

Gratitude of the South
Southern Standard.
All well remember the positive declaration of the defeated South upon the surrender of Lee and Johnston. "I lay down my arms, but I do not surrender. Under the Constitution and laws, against which they had rebelled, their lives and fortunes were sacrificed to the State, and an exasperated people sustained the execution of the laws, for treason in violation of the outraged majesty of the nation. Nevertheless all were spared. Their lives were rescued from the vengeance of the law, and they were preserved by the magnanimity of Grant, the victorious leader of our Union heroes in the field, supported by that of Generals Sherman and Sheridan. But for that magnanimity, which enabled the cowering traitors to shake arms with their conquerors, which secured them a parole guaranteeing their lives, they would have been hunted to their lairs, slain or captured, and the lives of their leaders would have expiated their guilt upon the gallows.

How have the Confederates manifested their gratitude to their saviors? Surely a civilized people, and a people possessing of the civility, would in any way have testified their gratitude for services so great. How has the "Southern Standard," "the proud manhood of the South," its "civility," of which lately we hear so much, exhibited its appreciation of a magnanimity which rescued it from an ignominious and dishonorable overthrow? Like ingrates and savages as they are.

The Okolona (Miss.) States claims to be the representative and organ of "the Southern manhood," and is edited by a chivalrous Confederate, whose life was rescued from the gallows by the magnanimity of Grant and Sherman. In a recent issue, in referring to the magnanimous Grant, it calls him "that Bloody Boy." In the same issue, in speaking of the same man, it says: "Why, if justice had been done the same day he would have been court-martialed and shot long ago for the crimes he committed while tramping through Georgia." And it urges its loyalty toward the gallant Sheridan in the following diabolical expressions:

"Phil Sheridan will take the field against the Indians. He will no doubt succeed in killing off countless swarms and papposes, as his Pigeon campaign; but he will take precious pains to keep his covetous carcass out of the reach of the red warriors."

In the same issue with malignant spite, it shouts, "Hurrah for Jeff Davis!" Thus, should the Democracy succeed in selling upon the Presidency, the fall might manifested in the above will animate and rule its administration. The traitor, in truth, will be king. That old demon, "States' Rights," the old Maloch under which they will march to victory, and which already has exacted of the nation tens of thousands of lives, seas of its best blood, and thousands of millions of treasure, will predate, with Hate and Revenge as ministers in the hellish work of destruction of everything loyal. God save the Republic!

Did Construction Cause the Commercial Crisis of 1873?

The great leader of the Republican party, Sen. Charles Sumner, was Chairman of the Committee on resolutions, and reported a platform, in which he charged as a crime against the Republican party, "the enormous contraction of the circulating medium."

The official figures of the United States Treasury show that on June 30, 1870, the total amount of State bonds in circulation was $263,916,556.10. On June 30, 1873, this amount was increased to $700,470,822.10.

It is interesting to note that the amount of State bonds in circulation in 1873 was $263,916,556.10, the same as in 1870.

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your appetite. Complexions and General Health.

PHILES!
How many suffer torments day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering of Philes. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, is no drastic violent purge, but a gentle assistant to nature.

CONSTIPATION!
SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a coxive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHES!
This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as Sick Headache; For the relief of which, SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR or MEDICINE.

BRIDGECTON, N. J.
Conducted on strictly mutual principles, offering a perfectly safe insurance for just what it may cost to pay losses and expenses. The proportion of loss to the amount insured being very small, and expenses much less than usually had, nothing can be offered more favorable to the insured. The cost being about one cent on the hundred, dollars per year to the insuree on ordinary risks, and from fifteen to twenty-five cents per year on hazardous properties, which is less than one-third of the lowest rates charged by stock companies, on such risks—the other two-thirds taken by stock companies being a profit accruing to stockholders, or contained in the expenses of the companies.
The guarantee fund of premium notes being now Three Millions of Dollars.
If an assessment had to be made of five per cent. only, twice within the ten years for which the policy is issued, it would yet be cheaper to the members than any other insurance offered. And that large amount of money is saved to the members and kept at home. No assessment having ever been made, being now more than thirty years, that saving would amount to more than One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars
The Losses by Lightning.
Where the property is not set on fire, being less than one cent per year to each member, are paid without extra charge, and extended so as to cover all policies that are issued and outstanding.
