"You don't say wealth."

"No, my father, though living in good style, is not rich. I have heard him say more than once, that we were up to our income."

"Then we have only our own sweet selves with which to endow our husbands. No houses or lands, no stocks from which to draw an income; nothing substantial on which to depend."

"We are educated, accomplished, and—"

"Alice was a little bewildered in thought, and did not finish the last sentence."

"No better educated or accomplished as girls, than most of the young men, who, as clerks, earn only from seven hundred to a thousand dollars a year."

"Not by any means," replied Alice.

"Eight hundred dollars a year."

"That is the interest on—how much?"

"How you talk Fanny!"

"To the point, don't you? If we are not superior to the young men who visit us."

"No, matter of fact. What have you got to say against my position, Alice?"

"If I cannot say that we are."

"No, matter of fact. What have you got to say against my position, Alice?"

him, removes one burden after another from her husband's shoulders and so forth."

"That is, I must take in work, and earn money, if we board, or—"

"No, it should never be out of the question in marriage, I think."

"But house-keeping alone would consume half our income."

"That does not follow."

"It does for any house that I would consent to live in."

"So pride is stronger than love. But pride has its wages as well as love; and the one is bitter while the other is sweet."

"That is the price of appearance, and living for the eyes of other people who do not care a penny for us."

A TALK ABOUT MARRIAGE.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

Two maidens in youthful bloom and beauty, sat earnestly talking.

"I like him well enough," said one of them, "but—"

"She paused, the objection was unspoken. What is the impediment, Alice?"

"His income is too small."

"What is it?"

"Eight hundred dollars a year."

"You might live on that."

"Aye! But! What kind of a living?"

"Not a princely style, I will admit."

THE TRYING TIME FOR THE UNION PARTY.

Olds and Cads.

John Wesley the founder of Methodism when one day riding through the country, was saluted by a drunken fellow who was lying in the ditch.

"Hullo Father Wesley! I'm glad to see you. How do you do?"

"I don't know you," said Mr. Wesley, "but I don't know you either."

"Don't know me? Why are you so sure?"

"I reckon I am," said Mr. Wesley, "at least one thing is evident—the Lord had nothing to do with it."

"Try this some of you: Fasten a nail or key to a string, and suspend it to your thumb and finger, and the nail will oscillate like a pendulum."
