FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Truth in one age is error in the next. Don't bolt your reading as you do your food.

A jewel of a woman is better than a woman of jewels. It is easier to overestimate than underestimate one's self.

Shun greatness, like bad money, is sure to be detected. Women are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of men.

Don't anticipate evil. The evil which it comes is bad enough. When a man's head is turned he never looks to the right.

The shortest way to do many things is to do only one thing at once. In months of sun or five months of rain the earth is happy.

The self-made man is frequently exceedingly proud of a very poor job. Confidence differs in different persons and with some persons it makes no difference.

It is but a step from zeal to bigotry, but it is a step that is most generally taken. There will always be romances in the world so long as there are young hearts in it.

There is one thing about death: It never complains that it doesn't know how to take some people. Silence as to a man and his deeds will do more to extinguish him than columns of abuse.

The man who kants finding anything to do in this world, is as bad off as a young heifer. There is no psychosis of the human heart that produces much and pays so little as revenge.

There hant no man yet lived long enough in this world to doubt the infallibility of his judgment. Let us be of good cheer, remembering that the misfortunes hardest to bear are those which never happen.

Purity of heart is that quick and sensitive delicacy to which even the very thought of sin is offensive. It is never the opinions of others that display the most refinement; they display in obscuring them upon us.

Confidence is a big thing; it makes a hornet respectable, and the want of it is just what makes the ant despised. Any man who will spread a slander is a second-hand liar, much meaner if possible, than the one who originated it.

Real thinking is the hardest thing in the world, and that is the reason, probably, why they do not do it. The finger of scorn should be cut off or smothered rather than pointed, for it has never yet made a human being better.

A man may consider himself much better than his neighbor, but he cannot prove it to that neighbor's satisfaction. He that changes his condition out of impatience and dissatisfaction, when he has tried a new wish for his old again.

It is advisable to put your hearts into whatever work you have to perform, but it is wise to think well before we put our money in. When we do re anything our minds run wholly on the good circumstances of it; when 'tis obtained, our minds run wholly on the bad ones.

There is this odd between a humorous lecturer and a scientist: The one has got to understand the scientific one without understanding it. It is the respectable who always lose the chance of a sensation. It is the man who is to be banged that gets all the bouquets.

There are two stages to every action—the conception and the execution; that of conception. Most actions should stop at the first stage. The lower a man in calling, the greater care he must give to details. Only by slow and painful degrees can we fight our way upward and break loose from the clinging hold of self-love.

The spirit of sacrifice cannot be too highly valued. The man whose life has always marked the difference between the loving, sympathetic, generous and heroic man, and the cruel, hard, selfish, and mercenary one. Human nature, everywhere and always, is in reverence before the spirit which inspires the hero.

Only by slow and painful degrees can we fight our way upward and break loose from the clinging hold of self-love. The sun, glorifying that which he shines upon, sees it in a haze of glory created by his own far reaching shining. So love is the divine alchemist who turns all drops to gold.

There is nothing about which the world makes a few blunders, and the individual so many, as a man's actual importance among his fellow-creatures. If you wish success in life, make perseverance your bosom friend, experience your wise counselor, caution your elder brother and hope your guardian genius.

We are accustomed to see men deride what they do not understand and snarl at the good and beautiful because it lies beyond their sympathies. Only by slow and painful degrees can we fight our way upward and break loose from the clinging hold of self-love.

SCIENTIFIC.

The territory occupied by the 254,187,780 inhabitants of the British Empire is estimated as consisting of slightly over eight millions of English square miles. It is approximately as large as Europe, larger than North America, almost half as large as Asia, and very far short of one-sixth of the land surface of the earth.

Of these eighty millions of square miles somewhat more than three million are in the United States. America is the center of the world; three million more square miles are in Australia; some what less than a million are in Asia; a quarter of a million are in Africa; while the portion that lies in Europe constitutes a very inconsiderable fraction of the whole, amounting to more than 120,960 square miles, of which 120,637 form the United Kingdom.

London, or the metropolis, as defined by the Metropolitan Management Act of 1862, is the largest city in the world, nearly 40,000 of people, covering an area of 17 square miles, upon which are built 50,000 houses, giving an average of eight persons to each house, and nearly seven houses to 53 persons.

PHILOSOPHY.

It has always been an eyesore in Philadelphia architecture that the dripping from the window sills of rain or snow stains down the cheek of the corner of each sill. Some of the houses seem to be made of soapstone, and the soapstone is so soft that it is worn away by the drip as well as the window washing.

An improved sill is now furnished and may be seen in a newly fitted house on Walnut street, above Fifteenth. The whole sill is cut away and a channel is cut in such a angle as to carry off the rain drops from its full width instead of leaving the two corners to collect the rain channel. It was probably designed in this way for a massive sill and for ornament, but the form of gutter is not in itself a thing that sends the rain off in sheets or has no top surface for it to collect upon will remedy an unsightly defect in Philadelphia brick fronts.

An industry in artificial sponges is in process of creation. M. Oscar Schmidt, professor at the University of Graz in Styria, has invented a method by which pieces of living sponges are broken off and planted in a favorable spot. From very small cuttings of this kind Prof. Schmidt has obtained large sponges in a few weeks. The process is very simple. The Austro-Hungarian government has been so much struck with the importance of these experiments that it has officially authorized the protection of this industry on the coast of Dalmatia.

The Roman snail has even, in Southern Europe, a medicinal value. French doctors prescribe sirop d'escargots largely for pulmonary complaints, and the mucus is supposed to be an excellent substitute for cod liver oil.

A contract was lately concluded by the Mexican Government with Mr. Oscar Droge to plant 2,000,000 trees in the Valley of Mexico within four years. The trees specified are chiefly ash, poplar, scacia, and mountain cedar, with a sufficient margin for miscellaneous kinds, according to special conditions of site and climate; and the arrangements contemplate the formation of national nurseries in which the study of scientific forestry may be pursued on a scale commensurate with the importance of the work.

Yawning is commonly caused by temporary deficiency of the air supply in the lung. When the body is wearied and in a sleepy condition the process of respiration is sometimes involuntarily arrested for a few seconds. Nature, at once, however, comes to the rescue, and by setting up a spasmodic action in the muscles of the mouth, throat and chest produces a deep inspiration, which compensates for the stoppage of the breathing and is known as a yawn. There is, however, another cause which produces what may be called the yawn sympathetic—an involuntary tendency to imitation.

An interrupted reading.—Small Boy—Pop, how do you spell now? Pop (busy reading)—Go to the dictionary. Small Boy—How do you spell Jersey? Pop—Go to the encyclopedia.

To judge by the figures that represent the births, deaths and marriages in the United States, the rate of increase of the population shows no improvement on previous years, and can scarcely fail to be an object of disquietude as to the future of the nation. The number of marriages during the year was 280,440, as against 279,079 in 1887; the births were 3,355,960, against 3,357,079 in 1887; and the deaths, which were 838,639, against 828,825. At this rate France would require 267 years to double her population, as against 120 years for the United States.

Modern barbarism.—Regina—'What barbarous things these prize fights are, Claudia!' Claudia—'Yes; it makes me indignant to read how they are conducted.' Regina—'And yet we think ourselves more civilized than the Romans, Claudia (regretfully)—'Indeed, I do not think we are. Why, the Romans were not barbarous enough to exclude ladies and children from the gladiatorial combats. They were just like matinee, and everybody could go.'

Where the support came from.—Friend of Star Actress (speaking in a professional sense)—Does your husband support you? Star Actress (warily)—No, I support him, together with several of his relatives.

A passing storm.—Jawkins—'Whew! That man must be in a bad state of mind. He swings his stick with the fury of a cyclone.' Hogan—'A hurly-cane, rather I should say!'

Grated potato pudding.—One pint of sugar, half a pound of potatoes, one large amount of butter, and a pint of grated potato. Mix well, and add sweet milk enough to make quite thick; season with orange peel beaten fine and ginger. After it is mixed add in a few minutes a few raisins. Put in a greased tin and allow it to candy over the top. Stir thoroughly from the bottom, and let it candy over again. This is an old-time favorite and deserves all the praise it has ever received.

'I have seen,' says a sheep farmer, 'a field which had been used as a pasture for colts and calves till about one-third of it was covered with golden-rod and blackberry vines changed to a fine grassy sward in six years by putting in a few ewes sheer than any would keep in good condition, and giving them extra food to make up the deficiencies.'

Election News

Have now lost much of their interest; again we turn to matters pertaining to our comfort and convenience.

Determined to suit our customers, we have placed on our floors a splendid line of STOVES, which, for beauty, quality, convenience, and price, will be hard, if indeed possible, to excel.

Here is what one party said: "I went to the city and bought my Fire-Light, because I thought I could no better there. When I had it at home and set up, it had actually cost me more than the price you asked for the same thing up. This is what another did: looked our stores over in the morning, went to Philadelphia, came to us the next day and bought a stove.

"Straws show which way the wind blows," so get a straw, hold it in the stove trade wind, and it is pretty sure to point to our stock as the place to buy. Every stove is marked with a tag, giving the name and price. You may see the tags below, but we think you would do well to see the stoves also.

The long line is being broken every day, as you will see by the tags marked sold, and to secure your choice, better come soon.

L. W. Noyes of Chicago, the maker of Dictionary Holders, sends upon receipt of a two-cent stamp to pay postage, a series of very pretty blotters of most excellent quality. One has a cut of a little drum-major cupid at the head of two long columns of Dictionary Holders, and this is his speech: "I am a quiet little 'drummer' for the Noyes Holders. It is my mission to call attention to the fact that these are the only holders that have strong springs to hug the book firmly together, thus keeping the dust out of the unspurred edges. The possession of Noyes' Dictionary Holders has made about 125,000 families happy and accurate in the use of words. Buy a Noyes Dictionary Holder from your book-seller and see how much more frequently you will refer to the dictionary."

GROWTH OF A BIG BOOK. - When Webster's Unabridged was first published in one volume, it was a comparatively small book. Some years after, an addition was made of 1600 Pictorial Illustrations, a Table of Synonyms, and an Appendix of New Words that had come into use. A few years later came an entirely new revised edition of larger size, with 3000 Pictorial Illustrations; then, after an interval of a few years, a Biographical Dictionary of nearly 10,000 Names, and a supplement of nearly 5000 New Words were added; and now there has come another new and most valuable addition, a Gazetteer and most complete of over 25,000 Titles. The work is now not only the best Dictionary of the words of the language, but is a Biographical Dictionary, a Gazetteer of the World, and a great many other good and useful things in its many valuable Tables.

In no department of art has there been greater advancement made than in the matter of designs for Lamps. Having perfected what seems to be the correct idea in burners, the aim now is to manufacture an outside covering as it were, for the burner, - something that, though it is an essential part of the lamp, is an ornament in itself. This has been admirably done, and the fine styles of lamps offered for sale this fall are triumphs of the designer's skill. It is difficult to conceive of anything more beautiful, wrought as they are from both metal and pottery.

Hanging Lamps seem to be out of style, and Stand or Vase Lamps are all the go. We have quite a stock of lamps on hand, some of very pretty designs, both low and high price. The cheapest thing in our lamp stock is a glass stand lamp, complete with burner, wick, and chimney, for 25 cents. The Baby McKee Night Lamp is a perfect little beauty, just the thing for the sick room or chamber, as the bisque shade softens the light. Call and see our lamps. - It will cost you nothing to look.

HORACE BEDFORD'S DECEPTION.

WANTED—A practical gardener. No one need apply unless he has had experience, and being testimonials as to good character and efficiency.

Horace Bedford laid down the paper he was reading, and mugged to stammer out to him that he was a gardener, and that he had called to see about the "place."

"I'll tell you just how it is, Jerome," pursued Bedford, confidentially. "I'm in love with Miss Carrington."

"And now, Miss Carrington, of Locust Terrace, wants a gardener, does she? Well, what is there to hinder me from making application for the place, from obtaining it, from being faithful to duty when it is obtained, and there- upon convincing Miss Carrington that I am capable of doing a man's work in the world?"

"But Jerome, not feeling any special interest in the conversation, had tucked his nose under his paw, and was far away in the world of dreams."

"My mustache will have to be sacrificed," said he, regretfully. "But I will get a full beard—black, to match my hair, and I guess I'll stain my skin a little."

"The next day beheld Mr. Bedford, in a street suit of 'pepper and salt,' his seat covered with a brown straw hat, and the lower part of his face covered with a bushy beard, taking his way to Locust Terrace."

He had abundant references in his pocket, certifying that he was of good moral character, etc., and he trusted to these and to his own personal address and tact to secure him the place.

the open window, heard this spirited defense, and was at no loss to guess that the Mr. Brown referred to was himself.

As well ask! If the sun gives light, the next day Miss Carrington went out on the lake sailing. She was quite in the habit of going alone, and there- fore no one thought of observing her movements.

"Very well, Daniel," said she. "I will give you a trial. I will ring for Mr. Davis, my farm overseer, and he will show you where to begin work."

Accordingly she rang, and after that took no further notice of the agitated Daniel. Mr. Davis carried him off to the garden, and there was nothing for it but to do his coat and proceed to business.

"I'll tell you just how it is, Jerome," pursued Bedford, confidentially. "I'm in love with Miss Carrington."

CHINESE DOCTORS.

Colonel Cheng-Ki-Tong, military attaché of the Chinese Embassy in Paris, has written several books concerning the ways and customs of the inhabitants of the Flowery Kingdom.

A case peculiar to their own neighbor- hood, arranged in scientific order, a volume of pressed leaves from the trees in the nearest forest, with their common and scientific names, either of these would be of interest to visitors from another part of the world.

Remember that the things most familiar to one's self are often rare and interesting to others. This is a basket which the little mountaineer in North Carolina makes of flakes of mica and fills with red corundum would delight and amaze a child from the Maine coast.

SCIENTIFIC KNOWLEDGE

Very Necessary as a Defense Against the Dangers of Life.

The following story from Youth's Companion illustrates the fact that in scientific matters one cannot always trust the evidence of his own senses: A little colored boy and his father stood watching in awe-struck admiration the progress of an electric car.

United After Fifty Years.

Quite a romantic wedding took place recently in Bowie, a town a few miles west of Gainesville, Texas. Over fifty years ago a young couple knew each other in one of the Eastern States and were engaged to be married.

"I am happy to meet you," he declared, "who would have thought you'd be the idea of being happy to meet any native of Meriden whatsoever."

The Baby King of Spain's First Sneeze.

A friend who has just returned from a town in Spain tells the following anecdote of the wee little Spanish King. One day she went to tea with the Queen Regent, and afterward the popular Queen Christine led her into the next room, where she found his Spanish Majesty in rather a soiled white frock sprawling on the floor.

Children and the World's Fair.

Among the most interesting exhibits at the World's Fair held in Philadelphia in 1876 were those made by children. They were usually placed in some little out-of-the-way corner, but when found they sometimes gave a more significant idea of the actual life of the country from which they came than did the great national or commercial displays which occupied more conspicuous places.

A Cameron Woman's Toilet.

So long as they are young and handsome the Cameron women pay great attention to their toilet. The petticoat, which reaches down from the hips to the ankles, must be thoroughly smooth and clean, and the apron, which is worn under it, is as spotless as the underclothing of a European lady.

Fellows.

We count them happy who have richly known the sweets of life, the sunshine on the hills, the moonlight on the water, the stars in the sky, the soft breeze on their cheeks, the gentle waves beside their native shores.

IN MORTAL FEAR.

The road was a strip of unlighted blackness. How Mr. Wetmore kept from slipping and falling was a mystery to Ed Crosby.

"What's the matter with your face?" the young man snapped at last, half amused, half agitated. "The drive in the wind, or his present mental discomfort, had made his head ache."

How Women Carry Money.

All those handsome, fashionably strapped leather portemonnaies, firmly stamped and clasped with a padlock, were seen as well as the long, stately Ed cursed himself as he bade her good-night.

We count them happy who have richly known the sweets of life, the sunshine on the hills, the moonlight on the water, the stars in the sky, the soft breeze on their cheeks, the gentle waves beside their native shores.

IN MORTAL FEAR.

The road was a strip of unlighted blackness. How Mr. Wetmore kept from slipping and falling was a mystery to Ed Crosby.

"What's the matter with your face?" the young man snapped at last, half amused, half agitated. "The drive in the wind, or his present mental discomfort, had made his head ache."

How Women Carry Money.

All those handsome, fashionably strapped leather portemonnaies, firmly stamped and clasped with a padlock, were seen as well as the long, stately Ed cursed himself as he bade her good-night.

The Baby King of Spain's First Sneeze.

A friend who has just returned from a town in Spain tells the following anecdote of the wee little Spanish King. One day she went to tea with the Queen Regent, and afterward the popular Queen Christine led her into the next room, where she found his Spanish Majesty in rather a soiled white frock sprawling on the floor.

Children and the World's Fair.

Among the most interesting exhibits at the World's Fair held in Philadelphia in 1876 were those made by children. They were usually placed in some little out-of-the-way corner, but when found they sometimes gave a more significant idea of the actual life of the country from which they came than did the great national or commercial displays which occupied more conspicuous places.

A Cameron Woman's Toilet.

So long as they are young and handsome the Cameron women pay great attention to their toilet. The petticoat, which reaches down from the hips to the ankles, must be thoroughly smooth and clean, and the apron, which is worn under it, is as spotless as the underclothing of a European lady.

Fellows.

FOR THE YOUNG FOLKS.

Each week we speak of the novelties which appear, which a caprice of fashion creates, and that live as they are born, without any one caring to know why there is a fabric rich or plain, out of the skirt or corsage, a form of the garment, a hat, an umbrella, etc., that we do not describe, at the same moment in which it is seen.

FASHION NOTES.

But the question arises, "Of what shall we speak to-day? It is too late to speak of the novelties of the season for the next season. In fact, it is too late to speak of the novelties of the season for the next season."

BULBS.

We are often asked how to manage bulbs, and will give a few brief general directions, premising that the whole subject, as treated by E. S. Rand, in his book on bulbs, occupies 293 pages (a work which we will procure for any one who orders). Nearly all bulbs do best in sandy soil, and (if not so naturally) some sharp sand should be added.

Very rich garden soil will produce good flowers without manure, but in ordinary soil a heavy application of well decomposed cow manure, dug in deeply, improves them greatly. Or, a foot of the surface may be removed and six inches of leaves filled in, and the soil thrown back upon it. Hyacinths and Tulips should be planted three to four inches deep, and a little clean sand be placed under and around each bulb; and as soon as the ground freezes a generous mulch of leaves, straw, or evergreen boughs, should be placed over them. Last season we applied hen manure pretty freely over the top of our bed of Hyacinth, and as we had fine spikes of flowers, can say it certainly did not injure them.

Crocus and some varieties of Narcissus are perfectly hardy, and continue to bloom and thrive year after year in the same place. To grow good Hyacinths in pots, the first requisite is to develop the roots before the tops grow, and to effect this they must be kept in the dark. When a single bulb is to be grown in a pot, the pot should be at least twice the size of the bulb. Narrow, deep pots are best. When it can be had, place one-half inch or more of dried cowdung from the field in the bottom of the pot, and fill with rich compost so the top of the bulb will come within one-half inch of the top of the pot and fill around it with the compost, or with clean sand, so as to cover the bulb except just its apex. The pots may then be plunged in coal ashes, kept in a dark cellar or other dark place till the roots touch the bottom of the pot; or another pot of the same size may be inverted over it and filled with sand and allowed to remain until the shoot begins to show through the opening in the upper pot, or lifts it, when it may be removed and the plant be gradually exposed to the light.
